DEATH LIST INCREASES.

Eastern Heat Wave Kills Forty.

Great Area Sizzles in Terrific Temperature Extending Into Canada.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Twenty deaths in the two days of torridity Chicago has sustained was the record tonight when the accounts were footed up. In addition, there were half a hundred serious prostrations and eighteen persons were bitten by rabid dogs.

Meanwhile the heat wave has "flattened out," to use the technical expression of the weather forecasters, over the grain fields of the West and without the blazing sunshine was costing millions in agricultural wealth. The suffering in the cities meant the fortune of the farms.

The temperature today did not equal yesterday's extreme height and the humidity was 71, or four degrees under that of yesterday, but men and women continued to drop in the streets, which were like hot tunnels. Some slight relief came in the afternoon, when shifting wind brought a cool breeze off the lake. It was confined to that portion of the city within a half mile of the lake front, however, as the breeze was so light it lost its coolness after traveling over belching chimneys.

COOLER HERE THAN IN QUEBEC.

By way of comparison, it may be noted that San Francisco, with a maximum of 60 and a minimum of 50, was the coolest spot in the country. Los Angeles, with 78 and 58, comes next, more than twenty degrees cooler than Montreal and Toronto.

Boston reported 90, New York, 82, and Washington 90. Various Texas points had an average of 96. Cincinnati was comparatively cool at 80, or eight degrees cooler than St. Louis, which had precisely the same temperature of St. Paul, 88, and four degrees cooler than Madison, Wis.

Sault Ste. Marie, usually the abiding place of the chilly wave, sweltered at 92, ten degrees hotter than Memphis, Tenn. Green Bay, Wis., also one of the "cold spots" on the tourist circulars, reported 94, or ten degrees warmer than Denver.

In addition to the thirteen Chicago deaths, five deaths were reported from Philadelphia, one from Lacrosse, Wis., and five others from various points.

FOREST FIRES BEGIN, TOO.

In Michigan there were disastrous forest fires and two cloudbursts in North Dakota did great property damage. Rain, accompanied in the northern and western cities by heavy thunder and electrical storms, was reported from Jacksonville, Fla., Tampa, Fla., Cincinnati, Marquette, Mich., Central Illinois points, Eastern Iowa points and portions of North Dakota. There is also promise of rain in the Gulf Coast country, portions of Missouri and Montana and the North Pacific Coast States.

In Chicago, the population gasped on front stoops, in sheltered corners, in the parks and the bathing beaches, all of which were crowded to the limit. Last night, the fire escapes, roofs and porches were filled with tired humanity, seeking a breath of air. Scant hope of relief is held out by the forecasters, who say the heat wave will prevail for three more days and perhaps increase in intensity as the air and lake continue to warm up. Suburban trains carried thousands out to near-by resorts this afternoon and evening and every lake steamer was crowded to the extreme limit. The official thermometer, high up in the breeze, registered 88, but down in the streets the temperature went to 99. Tenement dwellers, always the chief sufferers in extreme weather, hot or cold, abandoned their work

LONG HATPINS ON TOBOGGAN.

State Board of Health Will Recommend Abolition to Legislature.

[A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 6.—Realizing the danger mere man constantly runs of being impaled on the business end of the average hat pin worn in public places by the fair sex, the State Board of Health today unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the long hat pin. Incidentally, the board issued a near-ultimatum that hat pins should not protrude more than one inch beyond the last side of the hat through which it is pierced. The board will send this recommendation to the next Legislature.

MORE BODIES IDENTIFIED.

COUNTING THE DEAD IN TWO EASTERN WRECKS.

Forty-one Persons Killed on the Lackawanna and Twenty-one on the Ligonier Valley—Engineer Who Ran Past Block Signal Is Reported to Have Collapsed.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CORNING (N. Y.) July 6.—Two more of the forty-one persons killed in the Lackawanna wreck near here were identified today. They are John Kennedy, Harrison, N. J.; Jules Sampson, No. 392 Central avenue, Jersey, N. J.

This leaves eight bodies to be identified.

Careful checking of the list develops that the number of dead was thirty-nine, with one missing. The latter is the 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Armstrong of Hoboken, both of whom were killed. Coroner Smith said the child was so badly mangled that the body was removed by bits and not identified.

No deaths occurred during the night among the five seriously injured persons in the hospitals. Three of these are expected to recover.

The 12-year-old boy who was among the unidentified injured in the Corning Hospital was identified last night as Leonard Brooks of New York City. The boy is still unconscious and his chances for recovery are slight. There remain twelve injured in the Corning Hospital and eight in St. Joseph's Hospital, Elmira. Steps are being taken to arrange for the early burial of the unidentified.

SCRANTON (Pa.) July 6.—Engineer William Schroeder of the express train which ran into the Buffalo limited Thursday, is a nervous wreck. It was said today, when Lackawanna railroad officials began an investigation of the fatal accident in Corning. The investigation was carried on behind closed doors. At present the view of the officials is that the responsibility lies upon Schroeder, who, it is said, ran past two block signals, and Flagman Lane, who neglected to place torpedoes behind the limited

Nearly a score of the injured are in Pittsburgh hospitals, where they were taken by special train last night. Of the missing that were thought to be in the wreckage, all but two were found among the list of injured. ## SEEK AID IN JAPAN.

Ammunition Needed By Rebels.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JUAREZ, July 6.—Mexican rebel leaders announced today a new plan of campaign against the Federal government. With Guaymas and other Pacific seaports as their objective, the rebels will invade the State of Sonora, making their way south along the coast if possible toward Mexico City to join Emiliano Zapata, who dominates the southern revolution. Possessing a seaport such as Guaymas, the rebels say they intend to get ammunition from foreign countries.

TO TAKE GUAYMAS.

"We are going to try to get Guaymas first," said Col. Pascual Orozco, Sr., father of the rebel chief. "From there we can get all the ammunition we need. We have made no arrangements with any foreign government for help as that would be unpatriotic, but we hope to buy ammunition in a commercial way from firms in Japan, Germany and other countries."

Costulo Herrerra, commissary-general, of the revolution also declared that with a hold on the west coast ammunition was certain to be forthcoming from foreign countries. He added that arms also were expected to be procured by boat from points on the west coast of the United States.

Gen. Pascual Orozco, Jr., will not reach here until tomorrow or Monday, if he decides to come at all.

Col. Pascual Orozco, Sr., stated tonight that he expected his son here tomorrow. Dispatches from Sauz, ten miles south of here, report Gen. Orozco today as reviewing the main part of his army there. Hundreds of head of cattle will be driven overland by the troops from the range near Sauz. Juarez today was formally declared the rebel capital.

HOPES TO ISOLATE HUERTA'S COLUMNS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AT GEN. OROZCO'S HAEDQUARTERS, SAUZ (Mex.) July 6.—Gen. Pascual Orozco today ordered the bulk of the rebel army westward from here toward the State of Sonora and Pacific Coast towns, where it is hoped to get ammunition and thus continue the revolution. Guaymas will be the first seaport which the rebel columns will attempt to take.

It is unlikely that Orozco will go to Juarez. He probably will leave here tomorrow for the west of Chihuahua State, stationing himself at Casas Grandes, to direct the columns which he has sent in every direction. These detachments are to harass and raid and fight whenever opposition is encountered.

One rebel band that may cause trouble to the Federals is that of Gen. Campa and Gen. Luis Fernandes, outside of Chihuahua City, who have been ordered south to co-operate with Gens. Argumedo and Murillo, in isolating Gen. Huerta, the Federal commander.

Reports from Chihuahua City are that the Federals still are on the outskirts ready to take full possession when the last of the rebels ride away. The Federal main column is reported at Mapula and will find no resistance in reaching it.

Residents in Chihuahua City have abandoned fear of rioting and disorder.

HEAR OROZCO IS IN JUAREZ.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Gen. Pascual Orozco, commanding the Mexican revolutionary forces, arrived in Juarez today, according to reports received at the war department today from Col. E. Z. Steever, acting commander of the department of Texas. Consul Edwards at Juarez says that while there are reports of many rebels

Her daughter, who arrived from Denver Friday, is at her mother's bedside. Others of the family were notified late last night that the end was near.

Mrs. Decker came to San Francisco to attend the convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and was taken ill a few days after her arrival.

OHIO CONTRIBUTES MEN AND MONEY FOR HIGHWAY.

Fifty Thousand Members of National Road Movement Enlisted by "The Times" Special Car, and Plan Is Launched for Bond Issue of Fifty Million Dollars to Build Transcontinental Route Through State.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CAMBRIDGE (O.) July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fifty thousand members for the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association and a bond issue of $50,000,000, to build the national highway through Ohio and improve State roads. This is the record for the organizers in The Times car on the tour through the Buckeye State. With thousands of good roads workers enrolled under the national highway standard, the plan for the immense bond issue was launched.

The biggest men of this State are back of the great project, gathering the good road workers by the tens of thousands. The Times car is forty miles from the Ohio-West Virginia border line tonight.

NINE STATES LINED UP.

Two hundred and seventy-six thousand, three hundred and sixty-four members of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association are now ready to demand Federal aid for a national highway from Los Angeles to New York. Never before in the history of any good roads movement have so many people of the United States been joined together with one object. Nine States are now lined up in this fight, and the army of national highway workers numbers more than a quarter of a million voters, who have but one purpose—a transcontinental road from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

This means another $50,000 for the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association in Ohio, with Archibald Huston, president of the Ohio State Federation, back of the big movement, which is sweeping over the Buckeye State. Though this leaves Indiana the banner State of the tour, it makes another important step in the Ocean-to-Ocean run which is to end in New York this coming week.

ASSASSINS WARN HIM.

So Young Astor Buys a Revolver.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Deluged with threatening letters, warning of danger and demanding money, William Vincent Astor, the youthful head of the Astor family, has armed himself with a revolver, stationed guards about his homes in Fifth avenue and at Rhinebeck and is constantly trailed by an armed guard when he goes about the city or to the country.

INHERITS MILLIONS.

Ever since the death of his father, Col. John Jacob Astor, in the sinking of the Titanic, and the settlement of the estate by which the young man became possessed of wealth amounting to more than $100,000,000, he has been hounded, besieged and overwhelmed by letter writers of every description. The amount of his mail has now grown to appalling proportions and requires the constant services of a secretary. His correspondents at first were content to invite Mr. Astor to divide his fortune, or to scatter a few thousands in ways they indicated.

THREATS BY MAIL.

When they found Mr. Astor did not act upon their suggestions the letters became threatening and warnings of penalties to be inflicted unless the money was forthcoming encumbered the mails.

These received scant attention from the young man, but friends advised him to take steps to protect himself from the army of cranks and beggars who were pouring broadsides of missives upon him.

CAUSES A LAUGH.

Mr. Astor at first laughed at the apprehension of his friends, but as the letter writers grew more desperate and reckless in their threats he decided that his friends were right.

Private detectives, to whom the faces of most of New York's army of cranks are familiar, were employed to follow him unobtrusively and be prepared to pounce upon any man who looked like an "undesirable," bent on enforcing his demands.

OTHER GUARDS.

Other guards were stationed where they would detect any letters or unwelcome visitors, to the Astor home in this city. Still others watched the big estate called "Ferncliffe," at Rhinebeck, where Mr. Astor's father had built a magnificent home.

Fearing that an attempt would be made to open the tomb where the body of his father lies, in the Trinity Cemetery, uptown, the guards about the tomb were doubled. Then Mr. Astor applied to the police commissioner, Mr. Waldo, for permission to carry a pistol, and received it. Since then he has gone about armed.

TO ELECTRIZE A VALLEY.

State Railway Commission Grants Application of the Oro Corporation to Extend Its Lines.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—The application of the Oro Electric Corporation to construct an additional power plant on Yellow Creek in Plumas county and to extend transmission lines across the Sacramento Valley and the upper San Joaquin Valley into Alameda and Contra Costa counties was granted today by the Railroad Commission. The permission was granted upon the condition that the bonds of the corporation, now held by affiliated companies, be sold only with the consent of the Railroad Commission.

The corporation plans to construct a reservoir and power-house in Humbug Valley, Plumas county, near the confluence of Yellow Creek and the north fork of the Feather River.

The commission grants the application of the corporation as follows:

Butte county, except Chico, Biggs and Gridley; Yuba county, except Marysvillee; all of Sutter county; Colusa county, except Colusa, Princeton, Maxwell, Williams and Arbuckle; southern half of Glenn county, except Willows; Yolo county, except Woodland; Solano county, except Vacaville, Dixon, Vacaville, Fairfield, Suisun, Vallejo and Benicia, all of Contra Costa county east of a north and south line running east of Martinez, except Antioch; all of Sacramento county southerly of an east and west line running south of Sacramento; all of San Joaquin county north of right of way of Southern Pacific Company extending from a point east of Bixler through Stockton, Burnham to westerly boundary line of county, excepting city of Stockton, a district surrounding Lodi and Island territory; that part of Calaveras county between western boundary of county and Comanche.

DATE SET FOR NOTIFICATION

Wilson to Deliver Keynote Speech August Seventh.

Arrangements Made on Visit of Convention Chairman.

Theodore Bell Launches an Attack on Col. Bryan.

[By Pa'cal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SEA GIRT (N. J.) July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] Gov. Wilson will be formally notified that he is the Democratic candidate for President on Wednesday, August 7, at 2 o'clock p.m., when the fifty-two members of the Notification Committee, with Ollie James, the chairman of the Baltimore convention at its head, will gather on his lawn here and break the news to him. Then Gov. Wilson will make his keynote speech. The date of the notification and the details connected with it were settled this afternoon at a conference between the Governor and Mr. James.

Mr. James, when asked about the chairmanship of the National Committee, thought the chairman ought to be one who is thoroughly acceptable to Gov. Wilson.

"If I were on the National Committee," he said, "I would be in favor of doing anything that Gov. Wilson wanted."

"What do you think of Roosevelt?" Mr. James was asked.

"Oh, we'll attend to him when the campaign gets started," he replied.

TARIFF AND TRUSTS.

The tariff and the trusts, Mr. James thought, would be the principal issues of the campaign. In this view he was supported by Gov. Wilson, who afterward told the newspaper men that the tariff and the high cost of living would be the central part of the campaign.

Oscar W. Underwood, the Democratic floor leader in Congress and one of Gov. Wilson's opponents for the nomination, offered today to turn over the control of the House to the Governor so that he could make any and all the political capital he desired. Mr. Underwood's offer was contained in a letter to Gov. Wilson which reached here today.

"As floor leader of the party in the House of Representatives," Mr. Underwood wrote, "I wish to say to you that our action between now and the time of adjournment may affect the campaign, and I hope you will not hesitate to advise with me freely as to any matters transpiring in Washington that you may consider essential for the good of the cause."

BELL ATTACKS BRYAN.

Theodore Bell of California, the Clark floor leader at the Baltimore convention, was one of Gov. Wilson's visitors today, and after a fifteen-minute chat with the Governor, he sailed the newspaper men aside and lampooned William J. Bryan.

Mr. Bell has not quite recovered from the flippant way in which Bryan cast aside Champ Clark. He said:

"If we suspected for a minute that Wilson was in any way responsible for Bryan we could not come to him as we do. I am going back to my State and tell the people that Wilson does not mean Bryan or Bryanism. We stood by Clark to the last largely because of Bryan's outrageous attacks on him. But I watched the convention proceedings closely and I am in a position to guarantee to our people that the Wilson forces had nothing to do with Bryan's slaughter of Clark.

"I am going back to California," he continued, "to put behind Mr. Wilson the same people who stayed so loyally by Clark. Our State was three to one for Clark. We nailed his banner to the mast and fought it out until the ship went down. Now we are just as strong for Wilson as we were for Clark. We have got to hand it to the managers of Wilson's campaign. They were skilled and adroit fighters and won a magnificent victory."

CONTRIBUTIONS COMING IN.

Already the Governor is receiving financial assistance for his campaign, and took occasion today to express his pleasure at the manner in which the contributions were coming in.

"One of the interesting things about my mail," he said, "is the fact that checks for small amounts are coming in from all over the country. In today's mail there were about a dozen for sums ranging from $5 to $100. It is gratifying, because it is precisely my idea of how we should get contributions from unsolicited sources."

Although many requests for speeches have come to the Governor, he said he would consider none of them until after the Campaign Committee met.

GOVERNOR WANTS TO CATCH UP WITH WORK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEA GIRT (N. J.) July 6.—Senator-elect Ollie James of Kentucky, permanent chairman of the Baltimore convention, had a long talk today with Gov. Wilson, during which he was requested to name as late a date as possible for the notification to afford Gov. Wilson opportunity to catch up with his correspondence, now some ten thousand letters and telegrams behind.

The speech of notification will be short, and the Governor's reply will sound the keynote of the campaign, Mr. James declared.

SILENT IN MEANTIME.

Gov. Wilson let it be known today that he would deal with the high cost of living and the tariff, which he regards as the leading issues, clearly and fully. He will include reference to other planks of the platform also. Until that time, however, he will have little to say in reply to criticisms of the platform by Theodore Roosevelt or anybody else. His speech of acceptance, which he will shortly begin to draft, will be his first public comment, he declared, upon the party platform.

Every attempt to induce Gov. Wilson to take issue with any critic so far has failed. He discussed today the high cost of living as an issue, saying he regarded it as the leading issue, with the tariff at the heart of it, but declined to comment upon Col. Roosevelt's utterances.

Mr. James went to New York tonight. The Notification Committee will meet, he said, at the Imperial Hotel in New York on the morning of August 7 and come in a body to Sea Girt.

With reference to the chairmanship of the National Committee, Mr. James said:

LAUDS M'COMBS.

"The manager must be a man who does not make mistakes. William F. McCombs is a great organizer and a man of unusual executive ability."

Mr. James told the Governor he had talked with Champ Clark and knew Clark was strong for Wilson.

"There is no doubt as to Clark's loyalty to this ticket," Mr. James said, "nor as to the loyalty of any other defeated candidate for the nomination. No Democrats are sulking in their tents this year."

CALIFORNIANS CALL.

M. K. Young and W. B. Shearer of California, Clark delegates to Baltimore, were among callers who pledged support to the Governor. John A. Wilson of Franklin, Pa., the nominee's first cousin, headed a delegation of Californians en route from Baltimore who had stopped over on their way home to assure him of their support.

"McCombs is undoubtedly everything Senator James said he was," replied the Governor. "He managed the campaign splendidly. I was told by several of the experienced leaders at the convention that we had the most wonderful organization they had ever seen. Some of our men replied to this that we had no organization at all, but each man was working for love of principle."

William G. McAdoo, who has been prominently mentioned for the treasurership of the National Committee, had a conference with the Governor today. Afterwards he said he was not a candidate for any position.

SUCCESS LESS PROBABLE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BALTIMORE BUREAU OF THE TIMES July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a statement made under his signature today, Mr. Charles J. Bonaparte, who was Attorney-General in Roosevelt's Cabinet, said today:

"It were futile to deny that the nomination of Gov. Wilson has rendered the choice of Col. Roosevelt next November less probable and his candidacy less obviously needful in the public interest than would have been the case if the same influence had triumphed here which controlled the Chicago convention.

"It is also exceedingly probable that Roosevelt will draw votes from Wilson, although by no means so many as he would have drawn from Harmon or Underwood, or Champ Clark, if one of them had been nominated through the agency of Murphy and Parker."

Mr. Bonaparte says he will vote in November for Roosevelt if the latter's name is on the official ballot, and if it isn't he will vote for Wilson.

CONSIDER CHAIRMANSHIP.

President Will Not Insist Upon Secretary Hilles for Place—Will Abide by Committee's Choice.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BEVERLY (Mass.) July 6.—Although President Taft has favored the appointment of his secretary, C. D. Hilles, as chairman of the Republican National Committee and as active leader of his campaign for re-election, the President will not insist if the National Committee should hold different views.

In addition to Mr. Hilles, William Barnes of New York and former Representative Herbert Parsons of the same State have been mentioned as possible chairmen. Objections have been raised against both, just as they have been raised against Mr. Hilles.

On the night of his nomination the President wrote a telegram to the National Committee, then in Chicago, saying he would like to have Mr. Hilles made its chairman. That telegram was not sent. Mr. Hilles himself persuaded the President not to make a decision at that time, but to await the conference with the subcommittee, then already appointed.

It is known that after Mr. Hilles returned to Washington he pointed out the work he had done in the pre-convention campaign and said he could be of great assistance in his present position of secretary in the pre-election days. The President, it is said, saw the force of this argument and will not demand his appointment Monday if the subcommittee should back another man who meets with Mr. Taft's approval.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

The rich and steadily growing empire of the Pacific Southwest is covered much more thoroughly by The Times than by any other newspaper, and advertising in this journal bears the same relation to advertising in other local publications that intensive farming bears to the old slipshod, hit or miss plan of cultivating land. In other words, traceable results from Times advertisements are greater than those obtained from the use of all other local newspapers combined.

The Times' position as the leading newspaper on the Pacific Coast is emphasized not only by the number of its readers, but by the superior quality and unusual buying force of its circulation. The Times is read by the substantial, industrious, earning, thinking men and women of this productive field, and that every Times reader has purchasing power is indicated by the fact that Times advertisers are the men and women whose business ventures succeed.

The widespread popularity of The Times among big and little advertisers is shown by the regularity with which it exceeds all its local contemporaries in the volume of display and classified advertising, and in the number of separate patrons.

For the week ending Saturday, July 6, The Times printed 15,207 separate "Liners," 5660 more than its nearest local contemporary, and for the month ending June 30, it printed 76,236 separate "Want Ads," or 29,308 more than the total number printed by its nearest local contemporary.

THE USE OF THE TIMES ADVERTISING COLUMNS IS A DIVIDEND PAYING INVESTMENT AND IS IN NO SENSE A SPECULATION.

REVEALS PLAN TO SWITCH STATE'S ELECTORAL VOTE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, July 6.—Alex McCabe, private secretary to Gov. Johnson, today gave out a statement of the plans of the California insurgent Republicans following the conference of political leaders from various parts of the State with the Governor yesterday afternoon.

The statement indicates that the progressives, as represented by the State administration, will make every effort to swing California's electoral vote for Roosevelt, and says:

"Our Presidential electors, under the law, are selected by the candidates for the Legislature chosen at direct primaries. There is a wide divergence of opinion as to whether candidates for Presidential electors can by petition be put upon the ticket by a party designation, or, if thus put on the ticket, can be voted for in a single group; and there are many who insist that the only party designations that can be used are Republican, Democratic and Socialist.

"It has therefore been determined that those candidates for the Legislature in the Republican party who are progressive shall agree, if they are successful, to nominate candidates for Presidential electors who will vote for Roosevelt for President.

"In addition to making the fight for candidates for the Legislature in order that electors favorable to Roosevelt shall be nominated, petitions will be circulated for the purpose, if it can legally be done, to put Roosevelt electors upon the ballot in any event.

"The doubt upon this point is conceded; because of this doubt the other course is rendered necessary. At the next session of the Legislature we shall attempt to amend the election laws so that any party designation such as 'progressive' may without question be put upon the ballot by petition.

"It was also determined that representatives to the conference at Chicago to be held next month should be elected by the delegates and alternates who attended the Chicago convention and that a full quota from California should be sent there."

FINDS RURAL SCHOOLS QUITE UNATTRACTIVE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 6.—The little red schoolhouse is so "unattractive" that "more than two-thirds of the 12,000,000 pupils in the rural public schools of the country fail to reach a high standard in their studies."

That condition was described as a menace to educational progress and as one of the reasons why the country child looks toward the city in a report submitted before the national council of education today.

The council met preliminary to the opening here on Monday of the fiftieth annual convention of the National Education Association.

CALLS IT DEPLORABLE.

The conditions surrounding the traditional "little red schoolhouse" were described as so deplorable that the council considered a plan to have the national association employ an expert to investigate and report on rural districts.

The teaching of scientific farming and fruit growing with special reference to local conditions were recommended as an incentive to renewed interests in rural education.

A. J. Matthews, president of the State Normal School, Tempe, Ariz., said he believed Arizona had solved the rural school problem by a law which allows any rural school with eight pupils or more to draw on the State for $1000 annually. He said the State provided $1,000,000 for education and adequate payment for good teachers was a means of attaining success.

High school education throughout the United States was branded as generally "bookish, scholastic, abstract and inadequate to meet the practical problems of life," in another report submitted to the national council.

The whole trouble with high school education, declared Davil Felmley, president of the State Normal School at Normal, Ill., in reading the report, "is that it is regarded too much as merely a preparation for the university. Instead of dealing with the problems of life today, the students are taught to deal with the language, politics and customs of fifteen centuries ago. About all the high school teachers are college graduates who have no adequate knowledge of affairs outside of colleges. Their teaching is, therefore, bookish, scholastic and abstract.

CHANGE OF AIM.

"We need a change of aim in high school teaching, a look in the direction of the farm, shop and home. While we do not recommend an education entirely vocational, we urge a departure from the college idea."

As a means of "modernizing" high schools, the report recommended that in a four-year course, two years of vocational study should be provided.

J. Stanley Brown, Joliet, Ill., high school superintendent, a member of the committee, dissented from some of the criticisms.

The first meeting of delegates to the fifteenth annual National Education Association was held at 9:30 a.m., today in the Congress Hotel.

The council meetings were to be presided over by Charles H. Keyes of New York City, its president.

COLONEL WRITES KEYNOTE.

"Charter of Democracy" Speech in Columbus, O., Will Be Basis of His Campaign Programme.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OYSTER BAY (N. Y.) July 6.—The "progressive movement," as Col. Roosevelt put it tonight, is to be the keynote of his campaign. It means, he said, the putting into effect of "every principle for which we stand." Col. Roosevelt's statement was regarded as an indication that he would draw the line for an uncompromising fight, that he would insist upon a platform and campaign of such a nature as to lay before the people for their verdict in November the complete programme to which he has committed himself.

Col. Roosevelt's views are set forth in his "charter of democracy" speech in Columbus, O., last February, which marked his reentry into active politics. Since that time he has declared himself unqualifiedly for woman suffrage. The platform which he drafted for submission to the Republican National Convention was not brought forth, owing to the refusal of the colonel to sanction participation in the convention. It is understood this platform will be the basis of the one the former President will submit to the convention of the new party in Chicago next month, although containing in addition a statement of belief of necessity for a new party, and an attack upon the Republican and Democratic parties.

WILSON MEN MEET.
ALSO WILSON WOMEN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—The Executive Committee of the Woodrow Wilson League today appointed the following committee to outline the club work for the campaign: Judge Peter J. Shields of Sacramento, O. C. Wilson, Mrs. Grace Calkin, Justus S. Wardell and James K. Moffitt. Among the Democrats present at the conference were: Senator W. H. Shanahan of Shasta; Senator A. Caminetti of Jackson, Senator George W. Cartright of Fresno, Edward Leake of Woodland, John O. Davis, president of the Northern California Wilson League; Charles Wellborn of Los Angeles, president of the Southern California Wilson League; O. S. Cooper of Vallejo, and Mrs. J. H. Durst of the Woman's Wilson League. The committee appointed will meet in this city next Tuesday.

TO RUN AS PROGRESSIVE.
KENT DECLARES HIMSELF.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Representative William Kent of California today sent an address to his constituents, giving notice he would run for re-election simply as a progressive. Mr. Kent was elected as a Republican. Some time ago he said he would not be a candidate for re-election, but his announcement withdraws it. He will run by petition without seeking a primary nomination.

PLAGUE CASE ON CUBA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HAVANA, July 6.—The existence of bubonic plague in Havana has been definitely determined. A special board of physicians has pronounced the case at Las Animas Hospital true bubonic. The patient is Mondes Guerra, a Spaniard, who was employed on a sewer laying contract. He was taken ill July 3, at his lodgings, close to the Palace. Guerra is said to be dying, and three other patients are reported dead at the same hospital with symptoms of the plague. The Secretary of Sanitation ordered immediate fumigation of the infected house, as well as all others in that vicinity, including the palace.

President Gomez and his family left this morning for their country home at Calabassas.

Much anxiety is felt throughout the city, but the sanitary authorities express fullest confidence in the health department.

REBELS LOOT A TOWN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GALVESTON (Tex.) July 6.—How a band of twenty raiders supposed to be rebels, slipped into the Frontera, Mex., harbor in skiffs and quickly obtained $30,000 from customhouse and banks the night of July 2 was told by J. C. Griffins and William S. Mussenden, who have just arrived here from Frontera. They say the band took the few inhabitants awake by surprise and worked with such rapidity that soon they had money together with one thousand rifles and ammunition which the government had confiscated and stored, and made down the coast. Citizens of Frontera doubt they were rebels working under orders of Orozco.

YOUNG WIFE IS SUICIDE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Because her husband stayed out late, Mrs. Florence Monroe, the beautiful wife of Claude J. Monroe, an insurance broker, committed suicide here today by taking poison.

When her husband entered the bedroom shortly after midnight, she told him what she had done and fell into his arms. Before a doctor could arrive she was unconscious. She died in an ambulance on the way to a hospital.

The young wife tied her diamonds in a handkerchief, placed them by her side, and lay down to die. A note was found addressed to her mother, reading:

"Dear Mother: Everything I have is yours. God bless you. Forgive me. I could not stand it any longer."

Mrs. Monroe left a 3-year-old son.

MANY INSURRECTOS DESERTING OROZCO.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) July 6.—Only 2500 men are estimated to comprise the remnant of the rebel Mexican army today. Desertions because of lack of food and money and Federal triumphs have greatly reduced the insurrecto columns within the last week.

Though the plan of guerrilla warfare originally called for a division of the rebel forces into detachments of 150 men, Gen. Orozco now has ordered that each column shall contain not fewer than 500 men to dominate the region assigned to each column.

Already the rebel invasion of the State of Sonora has begun. Nearly 1000 men unler Gen. Emilio Campa are marching from Casas Grandes on the Mexican Northwestern Railroad toward Bavispe, one of the mountain passes leading into Sonora. En route from Agua Prieta, opposite Douglas, Ariz., to check them is the Federal column of 9000 men under Gen. Sanjines, who will make his headquarters at Colonia Morelos, near the Sonora State line, and fifty miles south of the international boundary.

Gen. Huerta has established headquarters at Horcasitas, twenty-five miles south of the city of Chihuahua.

Railroads and telegraph communication with the city of Chihuahua probably will be restored in five days.

MADERO CONFIDES IN GEN. HUERTA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, July 6.—Mexican officials, while expressing satisfaction at the turn of events in the north, are reluctant to comment further than to say it was what they expected. They appeared cheerfully confident of the ability of Gen. Huerta to work out problems now presented.

President Madero expressed himself as confident that the guerilla movement with Sonora for its objective, would be speedily crushed.

"The revolution to all intents and purposes is over," he said.

The situation in the south has shown great improvement under the constant hounding of the Zapatistas by Gen. Robles. Today Abraham Martinez, reputed to be the "brains of the revolution in the south," was brought to Mexico City under arrest and an unconfirmed report is that Huerto (One-Eyed) Morales, one of Zapata's lieutenants, has surrendered with 500 of his men. The rainy season has set in and has aided in putting a quietus on rebel activities. Zapata's followers are reported as deserting by hundreds to return to their planting.

DRUNKEN REBELS ARE LEAVING CHIHUAHUA.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHIHUAHUA, July 6.—Intoxicated rebel soldiers leaving Chihuahua over the Mexican Northwestern Railroad commandeered a young fireman and engineer, forcing them to run the train at full speed toward Madera early today, but before it was thirty miles west of here, it collided with a south-bound passenger train near Selas. Both engines were put out of commission. The engineer was killed and three of the soldiers seriously injured. The crew of the regular train were threatened by the rebels but escaped on a hand car to this city.

Thirteen Federal troop trains and two troops of cavalry were sighted early today near Santa Eulalia, a few miles south of here. Occasional looting was done by the retiring rebels.

A squad of soldiers looking for horses, saw some hitched to a funeral procession, and took the horses from the hearse and other conveyances.

HUERTA TO ENTER CHIHUAHUA TODAY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AT GENERAL HUERTA'S FEDERAL HEADQUARTERS (Mapulpa, Mex.) July 6.—Only fourteen miles separates tonight the entire division of the Federal army under Gen. Huerta from the city of Chihuahua. The government troops who defeated the rebels at Bachimba and forced them from Chihuahua are expected to enter the city at 5 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Reports that the rebels under Gens. Campos and Argumedo have retaken Parral and Santa Rosalia, behind Gen. Huerta, are without foundation, as the government commander was in communication with both places tonight.

LAST TO LEAVE WILL BE OROZCO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AT GENERAL OROZCO'S HEADQUARTERS (Saus, Mex.) July 6.—Gen. Orozco will be the last of the rebels to leave here. He gave final orders tonight to the various columns which are being sent overland from here to Sonora. Four trains left here tonight for Juarez, a distance of 190 miles. Few troops were aboard. Gen. Orozco is expected to leave for Juarez tomorrow.

MAIL POUCHES DISAPPEAR.

Government Officials Puzzled by the Loss of Bags Containing Valuable Jewelry and Papers.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY, July 6.—The disappearance of two pouches of registered mail from a government street car while en route to the Union depot from the postoffice last night is puzzling government inspectors here. The mail was addressed to New York, Omaha and Ogden, Utah.

The other pouch contained a small amount of money, some jewelry and valuable papers. No trace of the missing mail has been found.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the thermometer at ninety degrees and soaring to a record point, five persons died of the intense heat here today.

This makes a total of fourteen deaths besides hundreds of prostrations that have occurred during the present hot wave. Forecaster Bliss says today that no relief is in sight. The dead are:

MICHAEL QUINN, 40 years old.
ANNIE BUTZ, 76 years old.
MARIE I. CADWICK, six months.

Three of the victims are infants and one was an aged woman. All were found dead in their beds this morning. Starting from a minimum temperature of 69 degrees at four o'clock this morning, the mercury climbed steadily throughout the day. The humidity, while not quite as heavy as yesterday, is still enough to cause intense suffering, the official instruments in the local weather bureau recording humidity of 76 per cent at 8 o'clock this morning. At 5 o'clock it had reached 96 on the streets, the high mark of the day.

Hospitals in every part of the city are making preparations to care for the victims, emergency tents have been erected on the lawns of several hospitals and extra nurses have been added to the staffs to minister to the heat sufferers.

SEEK "LOST CONTINENT."

Expedition Financed by British Museum Will Sail in August for Carter Island, in Pacific.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, July 6.—Headed by W. Scoresby Routledge, M.A., an expedition will leave England on August 1 for Carter Island, a mere speck on the Pacific Ocean, about 2500 miles west of the South American continent. The expedition is backed by the British Museum and the object is to try and discover traces of the "lost continent," which it is supposed once connected America and Asia.

Gigantic images carved in stone were discovered recently on Carter Island and distinguished British archaeologists are of the opinion that these represent prehistoric people.

DENY CHARGES AGAINST JUDGE.

Never Saw Hanford Intoxicated, Say Witnesses.

His Fitness to Preside Conceded by Examiners

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE, July 6.—After spending a whole week in investigation of the personal habits of United States District Judge Cornelius H. Hanford, the House Judiciary Sub-Committee when it adjourned today until Monday apparently had not closed that branch of the subject and it is expected a few more witnesses will be heard Monday concering the judge's sobriety.

IN HIS FAVOR.

All except one of today's witnesses were summoned by Judge Hanford's attorneys, and testified strongly in his favor. The exception was L. Frank Brown, an attorney, who testified that he had seen Judge Hanford twice asleep on the bench and twice apparently intoxicated.

DROWSINESS.

On one of the latter occasions, witness testified, the judge was about to enter the courtroom in the morning. Witness smelled liquor as the judge passed. On the second occasion when witness observed the judge apparently intoxicated, he was on the bench and witness was arguing a case before him. Witness thought the judge's habitual drowsiness on the bench might be due to his heavy eating at lunch hour.

WHO THE WITNESSES ARE.

Today's witnesses included some of the best-known citizens of Seattle. The first, this afternoon, Superior Judge Robert B. Albertson, testified that Judge Hanford was not intoxicated at a meeting in the Alhambra Theater as testified by two detectives. Witness had never seen the judge intoxicated, but had seen him drink moderately at the Rainier Club. Ira E. Nadeau, an insurance agent; M. B. Haines, a real estate dealer; C. W. Ide, formerly United States Marshal, and E. C. Cheasty, a merchant, had known the judge many years and seen him drink occasionally, but had never seen him apparently intoxicated.

OTHERS EXAMINED.

The other witnesses were Fred Lath, Deputy United States Marshal; Henry Landes, a wealthy land owner; E. C. McDonald, assistant United States Attorney at Spokane; Will H. Thompson, an attorney of Seattle; Dudley Wootlen, former Congressman from Dallas, Tex.; C. F. Yeaton and H. C. Kilbourn, bailiffs of Judge Hanford's court; John Stringer, formerly Deputy United States Marshal, and Prof. John T. Condon, dean of the State university law school.

The committee suggested that questions relating to the judge's legal ability be not asked, since the subject had not been brought into controversy.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, July 6.—The fact that a pearl necklace, valued at $30,000 was lost Tuesday night on the steamer Bunker Hill by Miss Attila Thayer of New York became known today when the police were notified.

Miss Thayer believes that when she left the steamer in New York the necklace was in a jewel case with her gems. Just before she came here Wednesday she discovered that the pearls were missing. She could not account for the disappearance, but thought possibly the case had been thrown away with some waste paper. She went to her home in New Hampshire and is making a complete investiga-

CROWDING OUT OF ROOSEVELT.

HAS NO PLACE ON REGULAR TICKET, SAYS MARYLANDER.

If the Third Termers Want to Send Any One to the Electoral College They Should Put Up a State Ticket of Their Own, Says Chairman Hanna.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BALTIMORE (Md.) July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Chairman Hanna, of the Republican State Committee, said today concerning the plan to hold another State convention and eliminate the Roosevelt electors chosen at the May convention:

"If the Roosevelt men want to form a third party the proper thing for them to do is to put up electors of their own. They certainly have no right to remain on the regular ticket under the circumstances.

"If the people of Maryland give Mr. Taft a majority at the election in November they have a right to expect the vote in the electoral college to be cast in accordance with their wishes as expressed at the polls. The sum and substance of the whole business is that the Rooseveltites are trying to create the impression that they were robbed out of something in Chicago, and now they promise to keep their electors on the ticket, and if possible defeat the will of the Maryland people who wish to vote for Mr. Taft by casting their ballots for Roosevelt in the electoral college if they are permitted to do so."

FINDS DEMAGOGUE'S LEVEL.

Archbishop Seton Considers Roosevelt Blinded by Ambition, False to Pledges and Intolerate.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

ROME, July 6.—Archbishop Robert Seton, who is the dean of all the Monsignori of the United States and whose forthcoming work will epitomize his ten years' residence in Rome, is about to leave for the Italian lakes and Switzerland, returning at the end of October. Asked his opinion of his situation in America, Mgr. Seton said:

"As a staunch Republican since the days of Lincoln and as a former friend of Mr. Roosevelt, I consider him a great man gone wrong. Blinded by ambition, false to his pledges, intolerate in speech as well as in action, he has fallen to the level of the demagogue who plays upon popular passion with one end in view—his own personal ascendancy. The epithet 'liar' he showers on his opponents is unpleasantly reflected in himself. This is strong language, but I feel strongly.

"This idea of a new party is a catch-penny bid for popularity. We want no third party in the United States. I would rather see the Democrats in power than a party on Rooseveltain lines. I hope Mr. Roosevelt won't succeed in wrecking the party."

BABE DIES IN FLAMES.

MOTHER AWAY; FIRE STARTS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OAKLAND, July 6.—The cottage of Mrs. Arnest Lee in Fruitvale was destroyed by fire this morning and Velma, the 3-year-old daughter of Mrs. Lee, was burned to death. Mrs. Lee had left her baby and 3-year-old son in the kitchen while she was absent a few moments to speak to a neighbor. During her absence the cottage caught on fire. The boy was rescued by neighbors, but the babe perished in the flames.

JAIL BREAK REVERSED.

Unregenerate Plunders Oregon Bastile for a Barrel of Beer.

[A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROSEBURG (Or.) July 6.—Other towns have had their jail breaks, but Roseburg claims the distinction of having a jail broken into. Two deputy sheriffs went to Myrtle Creek, a "dry" town, and confiscated a barrel of "near beer" which it was believed approached the real article closer than the law permits. The beer was brought here and incarcerated in the County Jail pending its shipment to the State University at Eugene for analysis. When the Sheriff visited the jail today he discovered that some one had forced an entrance to the county's bastile and stolen the barrel.

LIGHT FROM THE EAST ON THE LIVING ISSUES.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Special Dispatch. The following editorial comments on topics of the hour are printed in eastern papers:

ARE THERE ANY ISSUES? WHERE THE LINE IS DRAWN.

[Chicago Record-Herald, July 6:] Do the Chicago and Baltimore platforms raise any material issues? The question is in many minds, and it is given special emphasis by the fact that certain Republican progressives are announcing their intention to support the Wilson-Marshall ticket. Gov. Osborn of Michigan, Dr. Wiley and certain known La Follette adherents are among these. General statements to the effect that there are no real or serious differences between the progressive Democrats and the progressive Republicans "of the left" are met with everywhere in current political writing.

What are the facts? Are there no issues between the "regular" parties this year? Is there nothing that distinguishes the progressive Democrat from the progressive Republican? Could La Follette, for example, consistently and heartily support Wilson?

The intelligent student of economic and political problems will answer such questions as these by pointing, in the first place, to the tariff issue. This issue is as serious and important as it ever was. The convinced protectionist may be an advocate of downward revision, but he would lower only excessively high duties. He would not deprive any industry of "needed" protection.

NEVER WOULD BE MISSED. FACT IS SELF-EVIDENT.

[Chicago Interocean, July 6:] The troubles in the Treasury Department between Secretary MacVeagh and his assistants are, of course, wholly an executive affair. It is Mr. Taft's privilege to end them by providing Mr. MacVeagh with a new staff instead of providing the old staff with a new secretary.

However, we merely state a visible and self-evident fact when we remark that the departure of Mr. MacVeagh would be received without a single regret and with considerable satisfaction by the masses of Republican voters. For perfectly well-known reasons Mr. MacVeagh has never been regarded as a representative of the Republicanism of Illinois or of any other place.

We may, without fear of contradiction from any year-round Republican, go farther, and say that the retirement of some other members of Mr. Taft's Cabinet, without apologies, would give general satisfaction

THEODORE, THE FORSAKEN. ADVERSITIES ARE BENEFICENT.

[New York Sun, July 6:] Though the faithful are faithless found; though the third party, like the third term; seems darkening into the night; yet these adversities are beneficently educational. He has seen the tariff at last, perhaps, for the first time since he was persuaded not to write a message about it. His bright gerfalcon vision has finally pierced into the fact that divers millions of folks who don't get enormous pay bringing out notoriety find it hard sledding to make a living. Bravo: Not to say bully.

THE PLATFORMS. GUIDE FOR THE ORATORS.

[New York Times, July 6:] For the information of busy readers and for reference by campaign orators and writers, we submit the following succinct but adequate and accurate summary of the platforms made or to be made by the political parties of the day:

Democratic—Woodrow Wilson.
Republican—William Howard Taft.
Third—Theodore Roosevelt. (?)

A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE. IMPRUDENCE IS TRANSCENDED.

[New York World:] How dare Senator La Follette call on Mr. Roosevelt to publish his campaign expenses account? Are there no bounds to his imprudence? Mr. Roosevelt has always conscientiously respected the confidence reposed in him by the interests that have contributed to his various campaign funds. His sense of humor is too high ever to let him share such secrets with the public. Not a single item has ever been revealed except where the law absolutely compelled publicity.

The rule of a lifetime still holds good and the utterly malicious attack of Senator La Follette will never induce Mr. Roosevelt to depart from the path of honor.

TEST OF A CANDIDATE. TIME ISSUE WAS SETTLED.

[New York Herald, July 6:] We note on the part of some of the ardent supporters of Gov. Wilson in the East a tendency to be furtive and subtle on the tariff question.

It is to be hoped that there will be no such evasion by Gov. Wilson, the Democratic candidate, on the tariff question. It is time the issue was settled. It cannot be settled if Gov. Wilson's advisers are going to artlessly prattle about all tariffs being incidentally protective. There is no such word as protective in the Democratic platform.

FAVOR IS NOT GENERAL. DEARLY-BOUGHT CHEAPNESS.

[New York Tribune, July 6:] The assumption of the Democratic platform that the country would be signally benefited by reducing tariff duties and thus lowering the prices of manufactured articles—especially of articles classed as necessaries of life—does not find favor with all Democrats. There are some Democrats intelligent enough to see that the demands for cheap necessaries of life, if yielded all along the line, must result in a general lowering of the standard of living.

Cheaper goods will be no boon to consumers who are earning less money and being thrust down a stage in the scale.

CALIFORNIANS IN PORTLAND.

Orange Belt Elks Reach the Convention City.

"Poppy Special" Due to Get in This Morning.

Atlanta and Seattle Want Future Meetings.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Southern California's advance guard of Elks arrived this afternoon, when the steamer Bear brought to Portland a delegation of sixty whooping orange belt "Bills," headed by Dr. Charles H. Ward of Pasadena.

At the dock the Californians were met by the drill team of Portland lodge, a brass band and a hundred rooters. The band paused in its playing long enough to permit the singing of "Brother Bill, the Town Belongs to You," and then the visitors were loaded into automobiles and escorted to their hotels.

BUSINESS AND PLEASURE.

The Southern Californians are here for business as well as pleasure. They want to elect Dr. Ward grand trustee when Grand Lodge election comes off next week.

"Never mind sleeping," the Californians told their brethren here. "We probably won't go to bed while we are here."

Preparations have been made for an elaborate welcome to be given the Poppy special and the Orange Belt special, which will arrive tomorrow loaded with Elks.

"We haven't forgotten our welcome when Los Angeles had its grand lodge reunion," declare local Elks. "Nothing is too good for the Elks from Southern California."

PRE-CONVENTION ACTIVITIES.

Pre-convention activities of the Elks Grand Lodge officers and committees got under way in earnest today.

Grand Secretary Fred Robinson, who, with Grand Exalted Ruler John P. Sullivan, arrived yesterday afternoon, opened his offices in the grand lodge headquarters in the Multnomah Hotel. Big painted signs and purple pennants speared as if by magic in the hotel lobby, directing the way to the various offices and committee rooms.

A. C. Crowder, of the Grand Lodge Credentials' Committee, arrived today from his home in Jackson, Miss., and immediately began preparations for opening the credentials' bureau in the hotel tomorrow. Other members of the Credentials' Committee, R. Fitzgerald, B. P. Strong, James Finlen and John Shea, did not arrive

Seattle officially entered the race for the 1915 reunion today, when two huge packing boxes filled with Seattle souvenirs were generously distributed. The souvenirs were in the form of ash trays bearing the embossed legend: "Seattle wants you in 1915."

CLOSING CAMORRA TRIAL.

Presiding Judge Does Not Omit Any of the Details in Summing Up the Case to the Jury.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

VITERBO (Italy) July 6.—The presiding judge in the Camorra trial today continued his summing up of the testimony given during the two years' trial as to the culpability of the accused in the murder of Genarro Cuocolo and Maria Cuocolo in June, 1906. He did not omit any of the details in explaining the case to the jury and referred at some length to the flight of "Erricone" (Enrico Alfano) to America.

Erricone bit his lips until they were bleeding, but nevertheless, although evidently suffering from the most intense excitement, kept his promise not to interrupt the judge.

COLLIE SAVES HIS MISTRESS.

[A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Omega, a collie, today saved the life of his mistress by dragging her unconscious body from a burning bungalow. Mrs Van Daggett, owner of the dog was in her room when the collie came dashing in and began tugging at her dress. She followed and on reaching the lower hall, found the house in flames. She ran up to her room again to save some jewelry and was overcome by the heat and flames. When his mistress did not reappear Omega dashed into the house and dragged the unconscious woman to the yard, where she was revived by neighbors who had been attracted by the flames. Both the woman and the dog were burned slightly.

RUMORED PACKING TRANSFER.

Denver Hears That Armour, Swift, Morris and Cudahy Have Taken Over Several Western Concerns.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DENVER, July 6.—A rumor that the Colorado Packing Company's plant has passed into the hands of the Armour interests, that the control of the Western Packing Company is to go to Swift & Co., and that the Denver union stockyards are to go to Morris & Co., of Chicago, is current in the stockyards here.

Officials of the companies in Denver would not confirm the reports, which came originally from Kansas City, together with a rumor that the Cudahy Packing Company of Omaha had obtained possession of the Hammond plant at the union stockyards, Chicago, and would enter the market there.

The Fowler plant at Kansas City is reported included in the transfer of the Colorado Packing Company plant to the Armours, and it is said the National Packing Company plant at St. Joseph, Mo., goes with that of the Western Packing Company in the alleged transfer to Swift & Co. The reported changes are said to be in the nature of a re-organization of the National Packing Company in anticipation of the entering of a dissolution order in the government's suit against the packers in Chicago.

EXHIBIT CROCKER WEDDING.

London Friends of California Heiress Will Be Accorded Moving Picture Views of Ceremony.

BYLADY MARY MAINWARING.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, July 6.—Miss Jennie Crocker's wedding at San Mateo, Cal., is to be shown on the film to a select company of the London friends of the bride and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Miss Crocker's aunt. Before she left here for California to attend the bridal ceremonies and help in the festivities, Mrs Alexander was importuned by Mrs. George Cornwallis-West and other London intimates to have a roll of the films sent by express as soon as the pictures are developed.

Only the immediate friends of Mrs. Alexander, Miss Crocker and Mrs. Cornwallis-West will have the pleasure of seeing the first moving pictures of a fashionable marriage.

THE CONSERVATION POLICY.

[Washington Post, July 6:] The Baltimore platform appeals strongly to the people of the ten great Northwestern and Pacific States which have felt the blighting effects of the conservation policy. The Baltimore plank going to the root of the evil with unerring stroke, also calls for a clean sweep of department-made laws, otherwise known as administrative regulations.

If the burdensome regulations were wiped out and the land laws administered as they were before the curse of conservation was thrust upon us, but little direct legislation would be necessary. It cost $30,000,000 to carry out the regulations now in force, the worst investment of the people's money Congress probably ever made, but the whole thing can be got rid of at slight expense.

LITTLE GIRLS IN SUICIDE PACT.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

LIMA (O.) July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] "Let's take poison," suggested 14-year-old Nina Wheeler to a playmate, Jessie Schockey, also 14, today. The two girls then planned self-destruction. An hour later they were found in a critical condition in the Wheeler home. The Wheeler girl will die. She was despondent because she had to mind her baby sister and the other sympathized with her. The case of the Schockey girl is serious. Both girls are members of prominent families.

"ROBERTA KING" IS IDENTIFIED.

Admits She Is Mrs. Zschokke of San Francisco.

Attempt to End Her Life With a Knife Fails.

Note to Relative in Portland Is Unmailed.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) July 6.—That the mysterious "Roberta King," the young woman who stabbed herself in an attempt at suicide yesterday is none other than Grace L. Zschokke, who disappeared from San Francisco last Tuesday, is the admission she made this afternoon to be local authorities.

The girl is now at the County Hospital, hovering between life and death. Her description fits that of the missing girl to a nicety. It was stated here that the missing San Francisco woman had a small dent back of one of her ears left by a trepanning operation.

Dr. Harris, superintendent of the hospital, said this afternoon that the patient had exactly a similar mark.

For some time "Miss King" steadfastly refused to disclose her identity. When confronted with the evidence that her description fit that of Mrs. Zschokke she denied she was the missing San Franciscan. She admitted having once been in San Francisco, but denied having lived there.

Later the woman admitted that she is the missing Mrs. Zschokke. She had penned a note to J. M. Lyman, her brother-in-law, in Portland, with written instructions to send it in case of her death.

Judge Rules That Wife of St. Louis Brewer Must Pay for Medical Service Rendered to Nonagenarian.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Adolphus Busch, wife of the brewer, will be required to pay a claim of $587 held by Dr. Albert E. Schleuter against the estate of the late Dr. Sander, if a decision by Probate Judge Charles W. Holtcamp is sustained.

Dr. Enno Sander was president of the Enno Sander Mineral Water Company. He died in St. Luke's hospital on February 12, last, at the age of 90. Dr. Schleuter was his physician. A bill for $1100 was allowed by the Probate Court. The additional $587 was demanded as hospital fees and for the services of nurses.

Dr. Sander was in St. Luke's from November, 1911, until his death in February. During his illness, Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Busch, friends, took an active interest in the patient's welfare, giving instructions in regard to the care and attention to be bestowed upon him.

It was contended in behalf of the estate that the conduct of Mrs. Busch made her liable for certain hospital bills and nurse's fee. Mrs. Busch is beneficiary under the will of Dr. Enno Sander, receiving rare and valuable works of art.

CREDENTIALS COMMITTEE.

WORK OVERTIME FOR ELKS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, July 6.—Grand Lodge officers and members of committees worked today preparing for the opening session on Monday of the grand lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. The Credentials Committee held its first session today and though there are no contests, it will have to work overtime to get all credentials approved. After thorough discussion of the subject the new National Home Committee, it was learned today, probably will refer back to the Grand Lodge the question of the proposed construction of a new Elks home. As the committee was empowered to act by the Grand Lodge last year, their action is interpreted as a recommendation that the Grand Lodge defer the construction of the home. The Committee on Preservation of Elk, it is said, will make strong recommendation for Federal protection of the animal. It was believed support would be urged of the Warren bill now pending in Congress for the creation of a Federal preserve in Wyoming and for the Kent-Perkins bill, for the creation of a number of Federal elk preserves in different parts of the West. The decision of the city in honor of the reunion practically was completed today.

A BETTER-LOOKING NICKEL.

Treasury Officials Are Not Satisfied with the Present Design of the Five-cent Piece.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The design of the 5-cent piece which has been jingling in the pockets of American citizens for many years does not coincide with the Treasury Department's conception of art, and it will be changed in its entirety. Secretary MacVeagh decided to replace the Goddess of Liberty on the face of the nickel with a buffalo. The reverse side of the new coin will contain the head of an Indian.

A. W. Fraser of New York is making the design in collaboration with officials of the Treasury Department. Its details will be decided upon at a conference between Secretary MacVeagh and Mr. Fraser next week.

SUPERIOR COURT'S RULING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—An act of the last Legislature, passed May 1911, permitting property holders whose land had been seized by the State for non-payment of taxes to buy the property, was declared to be of no legislation and unconstitutional by Superior Judge J. F. Seawell today. The law was passed as the result of the efforts of James L. Crittenden, who, since 1894, has endeavored to recover rights to the old Crittenden homestead in Oakland, which he declared, were held by the State for taxes illegally levied. It is in this case that the decision was rendered.

INDIAN LANDS STAY SEIZED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—An act of the last Legislature, passed May 19, permitting property holders whose land had been seized by the State for non-payment of taxes to sue the State for the recovery of their property, was declared to be unconstitutional and unconstitutional today by Judge J. F. Seawell in the Superior Court. The law was passed as the result of the efforts of James L. Crittenden, who since 1894, has endeavored to recover rights to the old Peralta homestead in Oakland, which, he declared, were held by the State for taxes illegally levied. It is the case that the decision affects.

TO EXPERIMENT WITH DATES.

Scientist Will Endeavor to Save the Mecca Growers Eight Dollars Each on the Offshoots.

MECCA, July 6.—A new greenhouse is being erected at the India date gardens, and after completion Prof. S. A. Mason will begin a series of experiments with the propagation of the date palm by offshoots.

His object is to determine how to make the offshoots produce more abundantly and also how to make them take root at an early age. Experiments so far have shown that each palm produces twelve to twenty offshoots from the age of 5 until about 15 years old, and it is necessary to leave these offshoots on the tree for at least two years before they can be removed and planted. This depletes the vitality of the tree, but the offshoots are too valuable to be wasted.

It is Prof. Mason's intention to experiment with their growth under glass and out of doors, whereby he hopes to make the palm produce shoots more prolifically and thus secure to the grower the $8 or $10 which each one represents at the present market price. Several private ranchers are experimenting along the same lines. Fred Johnson of Indio has surrounded a few of his trees with banks of earth for that purpose; it is also proposed to girdle the ground.

The result of these experiments is, of course, problematic, but if successful results are obtained, they will also try to take the offshoots from the parent while they are only a foot or two long and make them take root, which will probably have to be carried on under glass. This has been tried by several individual growers with varying success. Bernard Johnson of Mecca succeeded in rooting some offshoots much smaller than those which have been imported. The Tempe co-operative garden has done similar work with fair success. Certain palms, however, can only be grown in certain soils; for instance, some of the palms and offshoots of good size which were brought from the government gardens at Tempe, Ariz., and placed in the gardens at Mecca and Indio, died. This was due to the fact of the soil at Tempe being a heavy alkaline, kept constantly saturated by the drainage from several irrigating ditches, so the palms were full of moisture. When brought to the clean soil and dry air of Coachella Valley, they were wet and immediately fermented.

The importers of date offshoots, now offer to pick out palms that will be suited to the particular land in the Coachella Valley, for which they are intended. It has been demonstrated that offshoots are superior to seedlings for commercial planting, but new varieties will doubtless be originated from the seedlings. All the offshoots imported this winter will be from the Persian Gulf, where the world's most famous varieties are grown. No offshoots have been imported from this district except a few by the Department of Agriculture. The West India gardens of Altadena will be the first to bring over a shipment from this region during the coming winter.

Santa Monica.

LOWER FARES ARE DEMANDED.

SANTA MONICA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OPENS FIGHT.

Text of Resolution Recites that Tariff Was Fixed When the Population Was Inconsiderable and that Justice Demands that It Be Reduced—Fawkes Aerial Plan.

SANTA MONICA, July 6.—The Santa Monica Bay Chamber of Commerce, in stirring resolutions passed at a special meeting held last night, denounced the present rate of fare between Los Angeles and this city as exhorbitant, unreasonable, and discriminative. The members have asked the City Councils of both Santa Monica and Venice to aid them in the fight for a round trip rate of twenty-five cents.

The resolution states that the present rate of fare was fixed at a time when the beaches were meagerly populated, but now that the population has greatly increased, the prosperity of the bay district is menaced by the alleged high rate of fare. A committee was appointed to confer with other civic organizations in calling a mass meeting for the purpose of furthering the fight.

PAPERS SIGNED.

A. F. Fleming, director of the Mountain Roll Amusement Company, announced today that papers had been signed whereby his company would build a pier 225x900 feet, near the Fraser pier, which would feature an eight-track mountain roll amusement. Space for other devices would also be let on the pier, which it is stated, would be one of the best constructed on the beach and would entail an expenditure of several thousand dollars. W. H. Clune, the motion picture magnate, is president of the company. The pier will probably be built by A. Stutzer.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

The golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Pope was celebrated last evening at their home, No. 1422 Eleventh street. The house was prettily decorated. Mr. and Mrs. Pope were married at Prairie du Chien, Wis., in 1862, and spent all of their married life in Iowa until six years ago, when they came to Santa Monica. Many beautiful gifts were showered upon the popular couple.

AERIAL FRANCHISE.

Now that Fawkes refuses the franchise that was draughted by the City Attorney and passed by the City Council it has dawned upon the people of Santa Monica that when a franchise properly protecting the city and citizens is offered Mr. Fawkes, he doesn't want it.

P. J. Dudley, president of the Chamber of Commerce, says the Chamber of Commerce, Board of Education, Board of Trade and the Citizens' Committee, were right in every contention they made.

The committee representing the Chamber of Commerce, Fairview Heights Association, Board of Trade and Board of Education, after thoroughly investigating, reported adversely and made special request that the ity Council not advertise or grant any franchise for any aerial or monorail railroad until the applicant therefore first presents detailed plans and specifications of what is going to be placed upon or over the city streets, so the Council and the citizens may know what damage it would cause the city and private property.

FRECKLES GIVE WAY TO THIS REMEDY

This is the famous Dean's Freckle Salve, which is used by women and men all over Southern California during the Summer months. This splendid preparation is not only a cure for freckles, but if used in time, will prevent them. We advise everybody going to the beach or the mountains to get a jar of Dean's Freckle Salve price 25c or 50c (in the blue and yellow "freckle" package) at their drug store, or, if you cannot obtain it there, send 30c or 60c to the Sun Drug Co., 300 N. If you will use Dean's Freckle Salve, freckles will never bother you—prevention is better than cure—so why not begin using it right now?

QUEER AEROPLANE COLLISION.

The Antics of One Causes Another Craft to Get to Earth Earlier Than Rider Calculated.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, July 6.—An army aeroplane accident, showing the great danger of machines passing too near to each other while flying, occurred today at Villacoublay, near Paris. Lieuts. Briez and Burlez of the French army started on a flight from the Aerdrome in separate monoplanes, their destination being Belfort. Lieut. Briez had attained an altitude of 600 feet when Burlez passing him at at greater speed 100 feet higher in the air, forced a pocket of air downward and caused the machine driven by Briez to lose its equilibrium. The monoplane crashed to the ground and both Lieut. Briez's legs were broken, while his jaw was fractured and his breast also was injured. The doctors in attendance, however, say he will live.

Phoenix Man Who Says He Spent Seven Hundred Dollars in Two Days, Pays Fine in Chicago.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, July 6.—W. J. Frisbie, an electrician from Phoenix, Ariz., who says he spent $700 in two days seeing Chicago, was arraigned in the Municipal Court today charged with refusing to pay an automobile bill.

He said his money was gone when he returned from a trip to Fox Lake, Ill., and he was unable to pay the fare demanded by the chauffeur. He was fined $10 and costs.

FINAL DRAFT IS READY.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The final draft of the impeachment indictment against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the Commerce Court was approved today by the House Committee on Judiciary. Chairman Clayton will present it to the House Monday, ask for immediate consideration, and submit a list of seven managers on the part of the House to conduct the trial before the Senate. It is customary in the House to follow the action of the committee where there is no division. Members of the Judiciary Committee predicted that the resolution would be adopted after a brief debate.

CURIOUS DRINKS OF CEYLON.

A Peculiar Rat Destroys Bottled Wine, and Milk and Water Are Sometimes Doctored.

[New York Sun:] Wine made in Ceylon has a curious enemy, the muskrat. Not an innocent and even edible beast like our own muskrat, but a creature described as "a fearful plague, and so powerful is its odor that at one time it was thought it would even penetrate glass.

"This belief was due to the fact that securely bottled wine, over the bottles of which this rat had passed and in passing perfumed them, was found, on opening to be utterly worthless and full of musk. According to Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular, investigations and experiments, however, showed that instead of penetrating the glass, it finds access to the wine through the cork.

The water of Ceylon is none of the best. Near the coast lines it is brackish, owing to the sea and the many salt marshes. In the low country where rivers and streams are few and far apart, the supply is from artificial tanks, and their tributary streams and outlets are the resort of the deer and cattle and elephants that come to bathe and wallow in them, thereby keeping the water in a muddy state perpetually.

To remedy this condition the Cingalese resort to a rather curious practice; water for drinking purposes is always put into an unglazed chatty, which before using they thoroughly rub with a seed that they call ingini. This is rubbed on the inside of the chatty until about half the seed is worn away; the muddy water is then poured in the prepared jar and allowed to stand.

At first the water is about the consistency of mucilage, but this soon disappears and a viscid sediment forms at the bottom of the vessel, the clear water remaining on top. It is now ready for use, and although not of the clearest, is sufficiently pure for ordinary use.

Milk is almost a luxury in Ceylon, owing to several causes, among which is the land leech. These pests frequent the pastures in such numbers that they will suck the blood from an animal in a very short time and therefore cattle raising cannot be resorted to on any large scale. Another feature is the use of bakatoo by the natives in the milk which they sell to the Europeans who have settled there.

It is a thorny fruited plant with dark orange-colored roots and primroselike flowers, which has equally wonderful effects on milk and on water, though of a different nature. If pieces of the stem, root and leaves be mixed for a few seconds in milk or water, the liquid turns thick and mucilaginous, so much so that water in this state can be raised by the hand several feet out of a basin and will fall back without noise. This, moreover, is done without imparting any color, taste or smell to the fluid, which returns to its natural state in about ten or fifteen minutes.

ELKS ARE MIGRATING.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Five hundred Elks members of the San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda lodges, left tonight on a special train for Portland, Or., to attend the convention of the Grand Lodge of the order. It is estimated that 3000 Elks, representing forty-four lodges, will go to the Grand Lodge convention from this State. San Francisco Elks want the 1915 convention.

BANNARD SEES MR. TAFT.

BEVERLY (Mass.) July 6.—Otto T. Bannard of New York paid President Taft an unexpected visit today. Mr. Bannard's presence led to a revival of the report that he would be asked to act as treasurer of the Republican National Committee, but it was said tonight that President Taft wishes the chairmanship of the committee settled before other offices are filled.

VENICE, July 6.—Dr. W. M. Kendall, V. T. Reuter and M. L. Littleton, members of the Board of Education, gave to the printer the call for an election, August 8, to determine the question of voting school bonds in the sum of $92,000, the time for objections or suggestion from citizens regarding their action in issuing the call ten days ago having expired.

A happy agreement between the board, the printer and the attorney who drew up the previous election papers has enabled the board to announce that the delay in the school election caused by a typograpical error in the advertisement of the bonds will cost the taxpayers nothing. The printer and the attorney feel that they divide the blame, and they have agreed to donate their services and printer's ink this time.

SMALL FIRE.

REDLANDS, July 6.—Exclusive Dispatch.] A forest fire in Live Oak Canyon, near Redlands, for a time today threatened the buildings of the Howland goat ranch. Assistance was summoned from Redlands and the flames were put out before serious damage was done. The house of a rancher by the name of Hanson was destroyed. Loss not to exceed $500. Considerable brush land was burned over, destroying its value as a watershed for the time being.

PLAYS GOLF BLINDFOLDED.

A British Professional Demonstrates It Is Not Necessary to Continually Keep the Ball in Sight.

[New York Herald.] To demonstrate that it is not absolutely necessary to keep the eye on the ball, one of the first axioms taught a beginner, Alfred Toogood, instructor at the Chelsea School of Golf, in England, played a match while he was blindfolded against A. Tindal Atkinson, recently, on the Sunningdale links. While the amateur was the winner by the big margin of 8 to 7, the exhibition did enough to convince many that keeping the head still is the main thing toward getting a correct swing. In addition to being under what most golfers would consider the handicap of being unable to see the ball before the swing, the professional had several other things to militate against a better showing.

He attributed his failure to win to the fact that for ten months before the match he had not played on the links; that he was on a strange course and to the delay caused while he was being blindfolded before each shot. He would not admit that his defeat had upset his theory that it is not necessary to keep the eye on the ball.

"In making my shots under ordinary conditions," said the professional, "I do not concentrate my gaze on one particular spot in the ball, and I think that many players are hindered by paying too much attention to the old rule. I almost think that if many learners were blindfolded, they would not be tempted to lift the head when making a stroke."

Owing to a recent accident Toogood had to play with his side bandaged, and his injury evidently caused him considerable pain. The bandaging of his eyes took time, and as he is a quick player, this annoyed him a lot. Furthermore he complained of the tying of the knot in the handkerchief, jerking his head back after he had taken his stand. Toogood was able to drive a long ball, and from some of the teas he actually outdrove his opponent, who is a golfer of considerable merit. Only twice during the round did the professional actually foozle his shots. One was a tee shot with a cleek and the other was on a lie in a sand bunker. On the latter occasion he sprang a big surprise when he recovered with his second shot, inasmuch as he could not ground his club, making the chances of hitting the ball very remote.

A well-known golfing critic, in speaking of the match, said that he did not think that any one expected to see the blindfolded player win, nor was there any one who thought that he would be able to play so well. The match demonstrated in the eyes of many who looked on, that to acquire a suitable stance and swing and then to keep the head still are the cardinal points to be remembered.

Considerable discussion has been aroused over on the other side over the "keep your eye on the ball" and the opposing theories. It has spread to Paris, and Hugh Spottswood, the well-known amateur golfer, who is proprietor of Black and White, is trying to arrange a game between eight "fixing la belle" advocates and eight blindfolded ones at Holylake for the "Sphere and Tatler" cups.

REFERENDUM ON SMOKING.

Kansas City People Vote Against the Practice on the Street Cars and It Has Been Stopped.

[Kansas City Star:] For the first time in the history of street railways a referendum vote has been taken in Kansas City to determine the will of the public as to whether smoking on the cars should be permitted. It was the most unique referendum in history.

The vote started June 1 and closed June 7, lasting seven days. It cost the Metropolitan in round numbers $3000. Altogether 1,534,026 ballots were cast, an average of 220,000 a day, each vote representing a cash fare, which was the only requirement.

The result was: For smoking, 608,627. Against smoking, 907,608. Indifferent, 17,791. The total majority of votes against smoking was 298,921.

On May 27 the officers of the Metropolitan received a telegram from R. J. Dunham, one of the receivers of the Metropolitan, to take a vote on the smoke question the week beginning June 1. There were just four days in which to prepare for this unique experiment.

The comptroller and auditor got together and spent a day figuring out a system for holding and checking the vote.

Three times forms were sent to the printers, only to be thrown away later, when it was found that an unforeseen contingency made them valueless. Finally a satisfactory system was evolved.

On Saturday morning, June 1, each car operating within the limits of Kansas City was equipped with two pasteboard ballot boxes, about the size of shoe boxes. Two cars were detailed for the week to do nothing but deliver these boxes to the barns, and from midnight until morning men were at work each night fastening the boxes on the cars.

Each conductor, on starting his run, was given a number of pads of the ballots, which he issued to the passengers as he collected the fares.

At midnight the boxes were collected, replaced by new ones and carried to the general office of the Metropolitan, after first being carefully sealed.

As the boxes were issued the numbers were taken by a checker and a receipt for them was signed by the conductor. When the boxes were collected they were again checked, to make sure that no substitution had been made.

The ballot pads were checked out to the conductors in the same way. The number of ballots issued by the conductor was checked against the fare receipts within the limits of Kansas City and the unused ballots were returned by the conductor. These two totals were checked to see that he had accounted for all ballots issued to him.

Moreover, the contents of the ballot boxes were checked to see that there were not more ballots deposited in each car than had been issued by the conductor operating the car, and also to see that the serial numbers on the ballots cast agreed with the numbers on the ballots issued to these conductors. This also made it possible to tell what percentage of the ballots issued were being voted. At no time during the week did this percentage fall below 70.

After the checkers had completed their work each day of determining that all the boxes had been returned properly the boxes were opened and the contents dumped on to long tables where thirty girls, employed to do this work exclusively, counted the returns. The votes were sorted into three piles: "Yes," "no" and "indifferent."

Twelve hundred ballot boxes were used each day, 8400 in all.

Since the vote was taken orders have been issued against smoking on the cars, and if a smoker refuses to stop, the conductor stops the car and refuses to proceed until the rule against smoking has been obeyed.

LORIMER CASE ON FINAL LAP.

General Debate Begins on Charges Against Senator.

McCumber Is for Doctrine of Res Adjudicata.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The final stage of the second trial of William Lorimer on the charge of misconduct in procuring his election to the United States Senate from Illinois was entered upon today in the Senate with general debate. It had been agreed to vote upon the case during "the legislative day of July 6," but a vote was not reached today, and the Senate recessed its legislative day until Monday, with a prospect that a vote would not be had until the latter part of next week.

Senator Dillingham of Vermont, chairman of the Lorimer Investigating Committee, and Senator McCumber of North Dakota, supported the Illinois Senator's right to his seat, while Senator Myers of Montana made his maiden speech in the Senate in opposition to Mr. Lorimer.

Mr. Dillingham will continue Monday. He devoted himself to an effort to demonstrate that Mr. Lorimer had not been a candidate for the Senate until after the Senatorial deadlock in the Illinois Legislature had continued for more than four months and until it looked as if there must be an adjournment without action. He gave an elaborate account of present conditions in Illinois and, after undertaking to show that the Democrats would not support the re-election of Senator Hopkins, said that, on the other hand, they were willing to turn to Mr. Lorimer because of their personal regard for him.

Senator McCumber took the position that the Senate was unfit to try such a case because of the popular prejudice against Mr. Lorimer and because of the influence that popular sentiment would have on votes. He declared there should be an amendment to the Constitution relieving the Senate of the necessity of passing upon cases involving charges against its members.

Mr. McCumber charged that the popular sentiment against the Illinois Senator was due to the ignorance on the subject. Some Senators, he said, had been defeated for re-election because of their votes for him, but as for himself his vote would not be influenced by popular clamor, regardless of the effect of his vote on his own Senatorial fortunes. The case had been tried once, he said, and he believed the doctrine of res adjudicata entirely applicable.

Mr. Myers would not accept the doctrine of res adjudicata. He regarded this as simply a new trial, and contended that if the Senate should not be permitted to grant such a trial, it would be the only tribunal controlled by the English system of jurisprudence to which that right would be denied.

"There is no such thing known to the law as turning back; there must be a verdict in this trial," declared Mr. Myers.

The fact that fifty-three Democrats had voted in the Illinois Legislature for Mr. Lorimer, a Republican, was sufficient reason for suspicion, as Mr. Myers saw the matter.

"It is proof that there is something the matter either with the head or the heart," he said.

Expressing confidence in the irregularity of the Lorimer election, he declared the very atmosphere of the Illinois Legislature was charged with corruption on the day of the Lorimer election.

"The case is reeking with infamy, is dripping with corruption and is redolent of crime," he declared.

KAHN STAYS IN CAPITOL.

California Congressman Makes Affidavit He Is Voter in San Francisco in Lieu of Registering.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] Congressman Kahn has not gone home to register and look after his fences, nor will he go. He said today that he had made an affidavit before the clerk of the Supreme Court that he was a voter in San Francisco, in accordance with an opinion by the State Attorney-General. He has secured from the registrar of voters in San Francisco an affidavit showing his status as a voter.

"The Attorney-General of California," said Congressman Kahn, "gave an opinion that the law in this case did not apply to members of Congress, and, anyway, Congress is the sole judge of the qualification of its members. As the political code signifies an affidavit made before a judge or clerk of any court of record, I made my affidavit before the clerk of the Supreme Court.

"I am not going home to look after my fences because I am needed here, and also because I believe my record will not warrant my constituents in displacing me by a new man, especially as San Francisco will necessarily have one new Congressman anyway. In the past few weeks I have secured the passage of several matters of much interest to my district and I doubt very much whether an inexperienced member would have been able to have done the same thing."

That's What the Democrats Say in Finding an Appropriation Item for Elevator in Sawtelle.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] Senator Works appeared today before the Committee on Appropriations to urge some additional allowance for the Soldiers' Home in Sawtelle. When the Sundry Civil Bill was before the House Committee the Soldiers' Home was one of the items which the Democrats slashed. Senator Works urged on the committee today the necessity of greater liberality and he got the consent of the committee to the insertion of the following items:

Hospital, $46,000; purification plant for treatment of sewage, $30,000; to increase the water supply, $3000; repairs to barracks, $8500.

The committee declined to sanction items of $1000 to put an elevator in the barracks and $2000 for curbing and gutters.

CLARIFICATION OF TITLES.

Kingsbury and Glenn in Washington to Urge Congress to Enact the Raker Bill Into Law.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] Surveyor-General Kingsbury and Deputy Attorney-General Glenn of California have been in Washington the past three weeks in the interest of Raker's lien lands bill which gives titles from the government for some 400,000 acres. Most of the land has been sold by the State to private individuals. The State desires to give title thereto and be the recipient of the taxes. California officials have long been anxious to clear the matter up.

The Interior Department is said to hold that most of the legislation is not necessary, but its failure to do anything, and Atty.-Gen. Webb's idea that it is necessary and at least could do no harm prompted the introduction of the bill by Raker.

The bill has been reported to the Public Lands Committee of the House and is now on the unanimous consent calendar. Senator Perkins has introduced a similar bill in the Senate and an arrangement has been made whereby Raker and Kingsbury will have a hearing before the Senate Public Lands Committee next Wednesday. Raker also has a bill appropriating $28,000 to carry the main bill into effect.

Oklahoma Farmer Gets the Cash for Them and Cal Miner Redeems the Celluloid Discs.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

KINGFISHER (Okla.) July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The acceptance of a deposit of $400 in dark red chips from a gambling house by one of the local banks some time ago is believed to be one of the most peculiar banking transactions in the history of Oklahoma. A well-to-do farmer living a few miles from town made a considerable winning in the house run by Cal Miner, one of the best-known of his profession in the Southwest, who now resides in Guthrie. When the farmer "cashed in" he overlooked eighty $5 chips, but taking them to the bank, got the money, and Miner redeemed them.

PLAYING ON THE FUTURE.

RAKER HAS BILL APPROVED.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] Even though they are going slowly in regard to public buildings, the Democratic majority in the House are sanctioning numerous buildings for the next session. It is planned to put these through in an omnibus in December so the members who have to go before their constituents and apologize because the pork barrel is empty, can say that in December, if re-elected, they will be able to produce some work as evidence of their influence in Congress. Among others, Congressman Raker of the First District of California has had a bill approved by the House Committee. It calls for $50,000 to erect a public building at Red Bluff. It will be incorporated in the omnibus bill.

This bill will not pass at this session, but will be put through in December, according to the committee.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

BOSTON, July 6.—[Special Dispatch. A $100,000 damage suit has been brought by Mrs. Carolyn S. Bartlett against Arthur Graves Lund of Boston, New York and Washington society. Mr. Lund, who is described as a lawyer and promoter, is a sergeant of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and lives in Boston at the Hotel Puritan. Now he is said to be in New York.

Mrs. Bartlett belongs to an old Massachusetts family and is a granddaughter of Sir Thomas Boynton of London. She alleges that Lund repeatedly promised to marry her, that she gave her an engagement ring, that she was often taken for his wife and addressed as Mrs. Lund, from being seen constantly with him. By violating his promise to her, she says he has wrecked her life happiness and position in society. According to her counsel, E. P. Barry, Lund was married in Washington last month to the daughter of Senator Bankhead of Alabama.

Mrs. Bartlett says she is still wearing a ring which Mr. Lund gave her, but she cannot tell when they became engaged.

Actor Precipitates Sensational Episode Aboard Atlantic Liner on Which Miss Zabelle Is About to Sail—Actress Signs Instrument to Lessen the Tempest.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] Raymond Hitchcock the actor, created a scene this morning on board the steamship Moltke, just before she sailed from Hoboken. It started with the father of his wife and included a man they called "Charlie," who appeared on the scene.

Finally it ended peacefully enough, with Miss Zabelle signing some papers which her husband and a lawyer who accompanied him had brought from Manhattan.

Miss Zabelle was traveling with her father, M. M. Mangasarin, and was arranging their belongings for the trip when, about half an hour before sailing time, Hitchcock put in an appearance. He and Mangasarin became involved in words almost at once.

Hitchcock spoke loudly and excitedly, despite warnings by his wife and the lawyer that everyone could hear. The burden of the actor's complaint seemed to be that he knew that "Charlie" was sailing on the same ship with his wife, and he claimed that "Charlie" was simply following Miss Zabelle around.

In the midst of indignant denials by Mangasarin, a young man pushed through the group that gathered at the suite entrance. He carried two suitcases. Hitchcock greeted his appearance with a triumphant yell and indicated that this was the "Charlie" he referred to.

"Charlie," seemed willing to mix right in with anything the actor wanted to start, and Mangasarin rushed out for some of the ship's company. He was hardly out of the door before Hitchcock and "Charlie" started in and went to a clinch at once, and would have gone further, but they were pulled apart.

Miss Zabelle signed the documents saying, "I'd sign most anything to get rid of you."

HELPING KING OF SIAM.

American Husband of May Yohe Is in Land of "White Elephant" and Wants to Return Home.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

PARIS, July 6.—Putnam Bradlee Strong, who married May Yohe after a meteoric experience as a volunteer officer in the Spanish-American war, is now helping the King of Siam rule the land of the "White Elephant," according to an American merchant in the Far East who is in Paris on his way to New York. Strong is still in receipt of an allowance from his family in the United States on the understanding that he remain from American soil.

May Yohe's former husband is very anxious to return home. He is tired of being a wanderer in Asia, the American merchant said. He arrived at Bangkok broke and worked as a clerk in an importer's office. Admiral Byrne, an Irish adventurer who has risen from deck hand on a tramp schooner to the command of Siam's navy, gave Strong an opening in the government service and he has risen since to a responsible position.

KAISER TALKS OF CANAL.

Discusses Panama Enterprise With J. Pierpont Morgan—"You're Building It for Us," He Declares.

BY MALCOM CLARK.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

BERLIN, July 6.—While entertaining J. Pierpont Morgan on his yacht, the Meteor, Emperor Wilhelm discussed with the famous American banker the progress of the Panama Canal and the backwardness of American shipping.

"You are doing wonderfully well with that canal," said the Emperor; "but you are building it for us. You will never count as a freight carrying nation until you place a prohibitive export duty on products shipped from the United States on foreign ships. Your system of government amuses me. The really great men in your country see much farther ahead than our best men here, but they are powerless to go ahead. You defer too much to popular clamor. If I were President I would make Congress close up shop and run the government myself."

Kaiser Wilhelm took another occasion to tell young Germans the importance of manning their own ships and becoming efficient sailors, this week. In a talk to the Mercantile Cadets School he said patriotism demands that the youth of the fatherland must make sacrifices to serve on German ocean-going ships. "You are intended," he said, "as the vanguard of the Fatherland of the sea."

MAN DROPS OUT OF VIEW.

Family and Friends of New York Publisher Mystified Over His Sudden and Complete Disappearance.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] Christian A. Ludnow, publisher of a successful financial magazine and former business associate of Lyman J. Gage, has mysteriously vanished without leaving a hint to indicate to his family and friends what has become of him. Mr. Ludnow was last seen on June 11.

Six days prior to that, on June 5, he gave instructions at his home, at Montclair, to discharge all the servants and close up the house. The maid did as she was ordered and the following day turned over the keys to Mr. Ludnow in his office.

The disappearance of Mr. Ludnow occurred about ten days after his wife and their 7-year-old son, Christian A. Ludnow, Jr., suddenly left Montclair to visit Mrs. Ludnow's brother and sister in Boulder, Colo., where Mr. Ludnow was born. After arriving in Colorado, Mrs. Ludnow received no communication from her husband and she became greatly worried. Her efforts to get in communication with Mr. Ludnow failed and she appealed to her lawyers to locate him. She feared that he may have met with foul play

OHIO CONTRIBUTES.

000, to be spent putting the roads of this State in shape, were sprung today at Columbus. James Marker, State Road Commissioner of Ohio, who is a member of The Times' car force on the cross-State run, is back of the plan for the immense bond issue. This will mean, if the measure is successful in September, that the national highway, through the Buckeye State, will be ready in time for the world's fair. Nothing but a rock road will satisfy the men who are working for the success of this great undertaking.

At a dinner given today at the Hotel Virginia, in Columbus, in honor of The Times organizers, the plan for the big bond issue was sprung and the leading men of the capital city jumped into the good roads wagon.

Jesse Taylor, one of the well-known good roads workers in this State, is a member of the party that is organizing escorting The Times car from border to border.

PILOTED TO WHEELING.

B. A. Matthews, one of the big men of Ohio, is also in the party, and The Times car will be piloted to Wheeling, W. Va., where others are waiting to point out the road to Washington, D. C.

Richard Sinclair, road commissioner of Franklin county was with the organizing car to the borders of his district this morning. He is one of the men who have done much to make the roads of Franklin county as good as they are. He is also in line for the bond issue, which will mean so much for the roads of the Buckeye State.

Timed just to meet the arrival of the organizers, the plan for this $50,000,000 issue is being spread all over this State from the ocean-to-ocean car men who have studied the road question carefully. Good roads boosters who are determined that the national highway shall be built from Los Angeles to New York, are in the pageant of motor cars that is touring across the State of Ohio on one of the greatest State-wide good roads campaigns.

At Zanesville, Postmaster George H. Stewart jumped into the good roads wagon today and agreed to take a leading part in the fight for the bonds. The crowd in the streets made progress through the main thoroughfare impossible and the police were forced to clear a path for the road-battered car, which was sent to the hotel.

PEOPLE BEHIND THE PROJECT

At Clarendon, where a street meeting was held, the people seemed eager to listen to the story of a national turn pike. The plan sounded feasible. Postmaster Stewart, in a tribute to Gen. Harrison Gray Otis declared the editor of The Times was one of the greatest good roads boosters in the West.

"We are with Gen. Otis in his fight for the right and we are also with him in this great campaign for a national highway," said the official "I am glad of this opportunity to send my regards to the man who is bound to win."

Hats were thrown into the air and cheers from hundreds in the streets showed the sentiment of the people of Zanesville on the good roads question.

The car was driven away from the city through two dense lines of women and men, who crowded out into the main street and blocked traffic. Nearly 3000 miles from The Times office, the road-scarred old car was given one of the greatest send-offs.

SENTIMENT GAINS MOMENTUM.

The good roads sentiment is increasing. Plans are already being made for a reception in New York when the machine shall be driven down the great White Way at the end of the most sensational ocean-to-ocean tour ever made.

From one end of this country to the other, leading men are taking keen interest in this movement for a national highway. In California 10,000 joined the movement. In Arizona, where Col. Dell M. Potter, national organizer for the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, lives, 10,056 were pledged. In New Mexico another 10,055 were enrolled, and this sent The Times car into Colorado, where good roads workers pledged 11,500 members. The Times car rolled over the line into Kansas and the Sun Flower State captured the banner with a total of 43,300, and this seemed to be high-water mark. At Kansas City a tornado swept over the town and destroyed life and property. The Times car reached the city streets just in time to escape the fury of the gale.

OVER CORDUROY ROADS.

At Kansas City Judge J. M. Lowe, president of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, became a passenger on The Times car and started the organization of his own State, Missouri. The "Show Me" men of the "Puke State" jumped into line with 43,400, aything to beat Kansas, and the movement swept on into Illinois, where one of the most remarkable meetings of the entire trip was held at Highland. There, 2000 members were secured and the car was sent over the corduroy roads from city to city until the cross-State tour was ended with 48,000 good-roads workers in line.

This brought The Times car to the Illinois-Indiana line and the first town organized was Terre Haute. There a total of 15,000 was started. Heavy rainstorms interfered somewhat with the work, but in spite of the drenching, this county joined in the campaign which is to mean that Congress must listen to the voice of the largest army that ever demanded a national highway across the United States.

ON CUMBERLAND PIKE.

The car is now following the Old Cumberland Pike. Many of the old landmarks have been found on the trail. A monument was passed today which was erected by the government in 1806, and proved conclusively that the government did lend its aid to the building of this national turnpike. The old Cumberland road is replete with thrilling incidents. It is marked with pathos. There is perhaps no man who is better suited to speak of this old road than Judge Lowe. As a boy he traversed this turnpike. He has been interested in its development for many years. He is now spending his time to help organize divisions of the association which has honored him with the position of president. He expects to live to see a national highway built entirely across the United States from Los Angeles over the Santa Fe trail, Boon Lick road and the Cumberland Pike.

The Times car will remain on the border-line of Ohio tonight, and Monday the work of organizing in West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland will be begun. From Wheeling the car will be driven to Washington and Uniontown, Pa., thence to Cumberland, Hagerstown and Baltimore, and on to Washington, D. C. Leaving the Capital City, the next stop will be Annapolis, Md., and then Wilmington, Del., and once more into Pennsylvania with a night's stop at Philadelphia.

The next day the run will be made through Trenton, N. J., and into New York. The Times car is now 7700 miles from Los Angeles, with Los Angeles air in the two front tires.

SOAKED IN COFFEE

Until Too Stiff to Bend Over.

"When I drank coffee I often had sick headaches, nervousness and biliousness much of the time; but about two years ago I went to visit a friend and got in the habit of drinking Postum.

"I have never touched coffee since and the result has been that I am now entirely well of all my stomach and nervous trouble. (Tea contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.)

"My mother was just the same way. We all drink Postum now, and have not had any coffee in the house for two years and we all are well.

"A neighbor of mine, a great coffee drinker, was troubled with pains in her side for years and was an invalid. She was not able to do her work and could not even mend clothes or do anything at all where she would have to bend forward. If she tried to do a little hard work she would get such pains that she would have to lie down for the rest of the day.

"I persuaded her at last to stop drinking coffee and try Postum, and she did so, and she has used Postum ever since; the result has been that she can do her work, can sit for a whole day and mend and sew on the machine and she never feels the least bit of pain in her side. In fact, she has got well and it shows coffee was the cause of the whole trouble.

"I could also tell you about several other neighbors who have been benefited by quitting coffee and using Postum in its place." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

ARRESTS TWO BY MERE RUSE.

San Jose Sheriff Takes Man and Wife in Custody.

Finds Enough Explosive to Wreck Mountain View.

Threats to Kill a Grocer Necessitates Action.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN JOSE, July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] After a six-hour siege enough dynamite was taken from the restaurant of Mr. and Mrs. William Desmond today to blow up the business section of Mountain View, and the proprietor and his wife were arrested by Sheriff Arthur B. Langford and Deputy Sheriff Noble.

The siege was carried on during a suspension of business in Mountain View, as a general battle and explosions were feared. After capturing the man and his wife a search of the house revealed forty-one sticks of dynamite, 109 caps and 300 feet of fuse.

CLEVER RUSE.

The capture was only effected through a daring and clever ruse on the part of the Sheriff and his deputy, who, unarmed, walked into the restaurant and asked for something to eat. It was refused at first, but Desmond finally allowed his wife to serve the officers.

While they were eating, Desmond sat in an inner room with a Winchester rifle across his knees. The Sheriff then lighted a cigar and, sauntering coolly toward Desmond as though to throw the match into a receptacle, caught the man unawares and snatched the rifle from his grasp.

TAKES HATCHET.

In the meantime Noble took a hatchet away from the woman. Desmond had taken to the warpath with his Winchester shortly before midnight last night, asserting that he was going to kill a grocer named Scranton, who, he alleged, had insulted Mrs. Desmond while collecting a bill. Fortunately the grocer was not at home when he called.

Constable McCrone of Mountain View saw the armed man on Scranton's porch and attempted to question him. He left when the muzzle of the rifle was turned in his direction, and notified the Sheriff, who went to the scene in an automobile. Desmond then barricaded himself in his home.

He asserts he had been hounded from place to place by a band of enemies and he was collecting dynamite to get rid of them.

GARFORD FIRE TRUCK PERFORMS MANY STUNTS

That the fire department of Gary, Ind., is pleased with the performance of a Garford motor-driven auto hose machine, is evidenced by a communication sent by Chief Feely of that town to an official of a city in Wisconsin. They have had wonderful results from the machine, having had it in service since December, 1911, and have responded to sixty-one alarms of fire, besides several test runs, and have had no trouble whatever.

Chief Feely says the Garford does everything claimed for it. It carries as equipment consisting of 1600 feet of hose, one two-way siamese, one three-way siamese, one ax, one six-gallon hand pump, one deluge set, six play pipes or nozzles, two pike poles, one basement pipe, two hydrant gates, one reducer, one extra tire and rim and one door opener.

Besides this the machine carries the Chief, assistant chief, captain, lieutenant, two chauffeurs and eight pipe men. The average speed while carrying this load to a fire, if necessary, is forty-five miles an hour.

The motor wagon has been tested with this load, which is 9520 pounds, and it does everything required of it.

CANAL TO BLACK SEA.

Russia Considering a Waterway Seventeen Hundred Miles in Length to Connect Two Seas.

[Christian Science Monitor:] The closing of the Dardenelles, with the losses which this event in the Turko-Italian war has inflicted on Russian commerce, has revived the idea of the construction of a waterway between Riga, the great Russian port on the Baltic Sea, and Kherson on the Black Sea. In an article in the Pall Mall Gazette it is stated that there can be little doubt that effect will soon be given to this project.

The stoppage of traffic due to the control by Turkey of the outlet from the Black Sea has forced Russian statesmen to give immediate consideration to the danger and loss to their country which is entailed by the present position of Russia in the Black Sea, and which the construction of the proposed canal would do much to ameliorate.

The route of the canal has already been surveyed by engineers. Its estimated length is 1700 miles, but this will not be by any means entirely constructed canal way, for the courses of both the Dwina and Dnieper rivers will be followed to a very great extent. The course of the Dwina will be followed from Riga to a point near Vitebsk. From here eighty miles of canal way will have to be constructed to Kopys, where the junction with the Dnieper will be operated. A number of locks will be necessitated at this point, as the land lies nearly 400 feet above sea level. From Kopys to Kherson, the terminal on the Black Sea, use will be made of the River Dnieper. The breadth proposed throughout the waterway is 140 feet, with a depth of fourteen feet.

The carrying out of this scheme will affect very extensively the commerce of Russia. The grain trade of the Black Sea provinces will find a direct outlet to the Baltic, and the timber of the north of Russia will find its way to Odessa and Kherson and other Black Sea ports in greatly-increased quantities.

NEW COMPLICATIONS.

[Boston Herald, July 4:] Rhode Island, it seems, chooses its candidates for Presidential electors in popular primaries in August, and two sets of aspirants are to make the race for a place on the Republican ticket. One set, if nominated, will go on the November ticket to carry out the election of the Chicago convention, while the other set, if successful, proposes to vote for Roosevelt. It is a fair guess that in these circumstances neither set of Republican electors will be successful in Rhode Island.

BATS THE BIG BOYS USE.

Swain Wields the Heaviest Club and O'Rourke the Longest—Johnny Kane and Roy Brashear Use Same Style, But Handle It Differently.

TO THE average baseball fan a baseball bat is a baseball bat—nothing more. They are all alike. Ho[wever] bats and bats. If there is anything a professional player is "finicky" about it is his bat. In most cases it is the instrument with which he earns his daily bread and it has to be just right. If it isn't just what he wants he gets one or makes one that is.

Bats are usually between thirty-one and thirty-five inches long. They vary little in length but when it comes to shapes, it is a different matter. There are hundreds of different styles.

[Swain, of the] Sacramento team, wields the biggest [bat].

It is an inch shorter than some that are used, being thirty-four inches long, but it is two and three-quarters thick at the place where it does the business, which is the maximum thickness the law allows. It weighs fifty-four ounces. Kitty Brashear is the only player on the Coast who uses the same kind of a cudgel.

Roy Brashear uses the kind of bat that Frank Chance used. It is thirty-five inches long and weighs between forty-four and forty-eight ounces. It is [a trifle] nought" in that the handle of it is much thinner and it is a half a pound lighter. Roy strikes at a ball differently than [Swain], timber at it; Roy makes a mighty swing. It would take a bigger man than [Swain] to properly swing a "Dreadnought."

JOHNNY KANE'S.

Johnny Kane uses the same kind of a bat as does Brashear, but he grasps it near the middle and pokes with it. Patterson uses a Chance model with the handle slightly tapered.

Patsy O'Rourke of Sacramento uses the longest bat in the league. It is thirty-eight inches long, with a slender handle. It is generally regarded as being too long, but Patsy doesn't think so. He has batted .292 with it so far this season. "Cap" Dillon and Lober use the same kind of bat as Fred Clarke uses. It is smaller than the Clarke model, being thirty-four and one-half inches long and weighing between thirty-nine and forty-three ounces.

"Heinie" Heitmuller likes the bat that Schulte of Chicago uses. It is thirty-five inches long and has the smallest handle of any club used by the big boys. It weighs five or six ounces less than the Chance model.

[illegible] bats, such as "Willie" Keeler and "Kid" Elberfeld used, have not met with favor on the Coast, although several players in the big league use them. They are only thirty-one inches long and weigh as little as thirty-five ounces. Nobody in the Coast League uses them.

The rules of organized ball specify that a bat shall not be more than forty-two inches long. But it rarely happens that anybody wants to violate the rule. There is no advantage in wielding a stick so long and there are positive disadvantages, among them, the added weight.

Chadbourne of Portland is "dippy" over "bottle" bats. For years he has used a club that is shaped like a long, narrow bottle. It looks very nifty, but as he is only batting .228 maybe his esthetic taste is interfering with his stick work.

A Puzzled Englishman.

[Kansas City Journal:] "In St. Louis a few years ago," writes a Kansas City man, "I took a dignified Englishman to his first ball game. Big, good-natured Robinson was catching. Behind him, and near us, a youth of about 12 was delivering a choice variety of rooting from the grand stand, to the evident puzzlement of my companion. 'Good boy, Robby!' was a frequent cry of the youngster.

"Restraining his curiosity for a time, finally, on inquiry, the Briton learned that probably no acquaintance existed between the catcher and the lad. 'Dear me!' he ejaculated. 'What assurance for that small boy to address that large gentleman so familiarly.'

"Shortly afterward the players surrounded the umpire, gesticulating angrily in a dispute over a decision.

"'What is it?' the visitor asked.

"'They're kicking at the umpire,' I explained.

"'Fancy that!' said he, 'but don't you know, I have not seen a man lift his foot.'"

SOME GOLF EMOTIONS AND A MORAL.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THAT radiant, scintillating golf team of the Los Angeles Country Club—eight adorable masculine creatures—with two fine trophies to its credit for one season, is sadly wounded in its pride that I should have "belittled their glory in the Tom Morris trophy." I quote one of the noble heros.

And when it subsequently transpired that "forty down" actually won first place, Dashing Frank was heard to murmur exultantly: "That should settle Alma!" Yes, indeed, that is what he said, and I am blushing for him yet.

This crack team in the heyday of its triumph is offended that I should qualify its victory. Ah, messieurs, you are all so charming, surely you must know what it cost me in self-restraint not to rush into wild jubilation at your success. Can you not picture me reminding myself that these are great men who will scorn to find themselves overpraised?

And so with stern self-possession, I regarded the score with impartial scrutiny. "It is what they would wish," I murmured valiantly, "and their wish is my law!"

Very well ,then. There was you, Erving Armstrong, 5 down. Would you not have been speechless with disgust if I had acclaimed this as your finest play? A champion to your finger tips, any less than even or something "up" must, I told myself, be wormwood to your sensitive soul.

Judge Frederickson, 4 down. Are you convinced, your worship, that 4 down constitutes a justification for large headlines in the press?

Windsor Walton, 6 down. Pray enlighten me, monsieur. Is 6 down a score of which you are inestimably proud?

J. W. Wilson, 4 down. Do you complain, dear sir, that I should describe this as beneath your usual standard?

George H. Schneider, 8 down. Why, monsieur. I would defend the statement against all odds, that, for you, 8 down is a really poor score.

Jack Jevne, 9 down! When I came upon that score tears of sympathy welled up in my eyes. That one who was capable of things so mighty—a 74, which ought to have been a 73 only last week—should thus fall to the level of common clay. This, indeed, was terrible. Knowing your proud spirit, I realized with what scorn you must contemplate the result of that day's play.

Norman Macbeth, 1 up. Ah, here indeed, was something to wax triumphant about. But, I told myself, it would ill become me to draw invidious comparisons beyond the actual necessity of the case, and so I moderated my fevered joy even here. After all, he had only fulfilled our expectations, great though they were, I was content to let the gold medal, which self-evidently proclaimed him the hero of the great event, tell the tale. (By the way, what a truly touching back-from-the-wars appearance he is presenting just now!)

But, of course, when it came to Dashing Frank's score I might have let myself go, I admit. That 3 down is, for him, the utmost brilliance of which he is capable, a topping fine score and one which he is never likely to surpass, etc., would doubtless have been the proper terms for me to adopt.

But instead, from the depths of a fond, proud heart I assured the world that for you—for so fine and glorious a team of experts—40 down was a miserable second-rate score. True, it won the trophy, but in your hearts you all know that it was due rather to the fact that all the other teams put up an even poorer game than you did, not that you were capping any brilliance of theirs. With the exception of Dashing Frank, of course! That you can and do put up a very much better average game than that is an unquestioned fact, and I am jealous of your prestige, messieurs. As fas as I am concerned your "off" days shall never masquerade as your "ons" in the eyes of the critical world.

Still, the trophy is yours, and it is something to have won it under any circumstances.

"Get wealth and place, if possible with grace.
If not, by any means get wealth and place."

NOTES OF THE YACHTSMEN.

BY PAUL JEFFERS.

AT AVALON today there will be a speed boat race for trophies to be presented by the Freeholders' Association. Joe Fellows is expected to enter the Campbell and Carl Ahrens and Leo Baker the Snapshot. There is a possibility that the Gego may be entered. There was no speed boat race on the Fourth, and the prizes to be given then, together with others will be given for this race.

Speaking of motor boats, Frank Garbutt has made the statement that he will break all existing records for time between the breakwater and Avalon with the Mystery. He is anxious to have a try at this before Joe Fellows gets his own boat into the water. We may expect to see this done as Frank Garbutt very seldom talks for nothing.

Saturday evening members of the South Coast Yacht Club who were in Avalon had a banquet at Hotel Metropole. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by everybody.

The South Coast Yacht Club was well represented at Avalon on the Fourth. Among the boats that anchored in the harbor, and those who sailed them were: Mischief II, Ted Hyans; Mischief I, Harry Chamberlain; Royal, Dan Laubersheimer; Iona, B. Cope; Vixen, Arturo Bandini; Idler, K. and L. Bradley; Viking II, Dr. Solland; Enchantress, Percy Elsen; Wasp, Paul and Sterling Jeffers, Ann, George H. Goodenow, and Marie, L. A. Lighthipe.

The Royal had a little excitement in the trip to Avalon. One of the lady guests fell overboard amid channel. She was fortunate enough to get a hold of the rail as she went overboard and hung to it until she could be hauled on deck.

The Siwash, owned by Howard Wright, is making an extended cruise among the channel islands. The Siwash is well adapted for this kind of a trip, and the crew will probably have some good times.

This week the Clipper, owned by Ben Weston, will visit Santa Barbara Island, St. Nicholas Island, and Clemente. The boys have never been o some of these islands before and they want to get some pictures of these unfrequented spots.

The race for the cup offered by Mrs. Wood to be sailed for by the junior members will be started Saturday. Among the assured entries are the Siwash, sailed by Howard Wright; Mischief I, sailed by Carl Aspe; Clipper, by Ben Weston, and Wasp, by Sterling Jeffers. This should be a good race, and will bring out some of the promising material among the junior members. As it is to be held the day before the race for the Nordlinger trophy, a good many of the older members will be on hand to see it.

GRAND CIRCUIT ENTRIES.

COLUMBUS (O.) July 6.—[Special Dispatch to The Times by Federal (Wireless) Line.] The cream of the trotting and pacing world will be in the Columbus grand circuit races next fall. The entries for five trotting and five pacing stakes have been announced by Secretary Harry Shepard of the Columbus Driving Association. With a few California horsemen yet to be heard from, more than 300 horses are entered. Purses aggregating $41,000 are offered for the meet.

Talks On Teeth

When the Teeth Begin to Go

When the teeth begin to go, one by one, the man or woman who is losing them becomes terribly anxious, and with reason.

Nature demands a full complement of teeth so that the food may be chopped and ground up in the mouth before it passes down into the stomach.

If there is a hole in the line, here and there, there is apt to be some food that goes down whole.

Then begins the so-called "stomach trouble," and everybody knows what follows that complaint.

OUR REX METHOD OF ALVEOLAR TEETH, AS PERFECTED BY DR. RANKINE, supplying missing teeth without plates, or so-called bridge work, is a godsend to those whose teeth are going and gone.

Given two or more teeth in either jaw, we can restore all the rest.

I do not claim man is superior to nature, but I do claim the teeth you made for me are better and more serviceable than those furnished me by nature, writes J. G. RICKELS, San Fernando, Cal.

The new teeth will be as satisfactory as the old, and, if anything, more serviceable, because they will be sound and perfect, and solid as though they grew in the mouth.

The fitting and placing of these new Alveolar teeth is a painless process and calls for no cutting or boring. Don't regard it as something to be dreaded—an operation. It is nothing of that kind.

One thing you should do—and without delay—is to let us look your teeth over.

Every day you put it off makes it [more] likely that [illegible] decay fast, and once gone they are gone forever.

You don't want to have to wear a plate, do you?

If you have had the misfortune to lose all of your teeth, we can supply you with plates that will be serviceable and comfortable.

OUR CHARGES ARE REASONABLE

We do not ask fancy prices for our work. Just a fair fee—a reasonable profit—just what anyone will gladly and willingly pay for high-grade work, such as [we] invariably [do]. Remember that you can always consult us free of charge regarding your teeth troubles, and there is no obligation incurred on your part in so doing.

LINER OLYMPIC DELAYED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 6.—Derangement of the steering gear of the White Star Line Olympic shortly after she left her pier with more than 650 passengers in her saloon and cabins bound for Europe today caused a delay of one hour and a half in the liner's departure from the harbor. The anchor was dropped off Ellis Island and a number of tugs were engaged to convey the Olympic while repairs were being made. These were shortly completed and the vessel proceeded on her voyage.

The American line Steamer Philadelphia, due to leave for Southhampton at 1:30 this morning was held up through the failure of 175 oilers, coal passers and water tenders to report for duty. The men apparently deserted in sympathy with the seamen's strike. There are 200 first-class passengers aboard. Agents of the line announced they would have a full crew and get away this afternoon.

Some Flippancy.

OAK HEAVERS VERY WOBBLY.

Ables Beaten Easily in First Three Innings.

Driscoll Charms Fans With Great Running Catch.

BY GREY OLIVER.

Los Angeles, 5; Oakland, 1.

A flock of Oakland heavers sailed into the Angels yesterday and before these had a chance to turn around and sail right back again they were shot to pieces.

Ables got all he wanted of the locals in six innings and then Pope went at them in the seventh. He passed the first man to face him, the next one cracked him for a single and he walked the third.

Then he was thrown on the bench when he had filled the bases.

The gay and facetious Mister Parkin then trotted blithely out to take a chance and the first thing he did was to walk the first man he saw at the plate, forcing in a run. He made Lober pop to Sharpe and then walked Brooks, forcing in another run, but he managed to get the next two batsmen out easily.

These are two illustrations of the wildness of the Oak heavers.

Ables stuck it out for six innings and during that time walked five men, made a wild pitch and was hit for seven singles. This stuff made three runs and these were all the locals needed, for the Oaks got but one. Later on, in the seventh, came the four passes and the single for two more runs.

Cheeh was the real thing in the pitching line. Little wild at that, for he walked three men and soaked two with the ball.

Oaks got but one run off him and Slugger Zacher was the cause of it. In the third, with two out, Leard singled to center and then Zacher almost knocked the top board off the distant center fence with a two bagger, which scored Leard from first. That was all, for none of the Oaks got near third base after that.

Outside of the wildness the most noticeable thing of the day happened in the first inning, when Driscoll gave a great exhibition of fancy fielding.

The first two men were easy outs and Zacher followed with a hard single to center field. A moment later he stole second and on Brooks's wild throw, ran to third. Coy was walked and with two men on bases and two out, Hetling cracked out a long fly toward the score board.

As soon as the ball left the bat Driscoll started to run to the score board and after running about 100 feet at top speed, he made one last desperate lunge forward and sticking his left hand up above his head, grabbed the ball.

It was a wonderful catch and Driscoll received a grand salvo of applause which continued while he walked in to the bench, where he was forced to acknowledge the attention.

Berger made two brilliant assists to first at the opening of the second inning and also started a fine double play in the sixth. Pretty hard to beat this bird winging them across to first. Best infielder who has shown here this season.

A pass, an out and a single made the first Angel run and three singles and a steal got the next two in the third. Everyone knows how the final two arrived in the seventh.

The score:

MATCH SOUGHT FOR M'CARTHY AND PALZER.

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Special Dispatch.] With the hope of getting Al Palzer to change his mind about meeting Luther McCarthy, the western heavyweight, Billy McCarney, manager of McCarthy, says he will agree to have the winner take 75 per cent. of the money and the loser 25.

"If I was not sure that McCarthy can beat Palzer," said McCarney, "I would not think of making this proposition."

EASY FOR SEALS.

GRAY KNOCKED HARD.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, July 6.—Pitcher Henley "came back" today and when the game was over Vernon had only six hits to its credit and not a run.

Gray, who twirled for the visitors, had no control and the San Francisco aggregation hammered his delivery all over the field. Gov. John K. Tener of Pennsylvania and his staff were enthusiastic spectators of the game.

When Hartley of San Francisco rapped out a three bagger in the eighth, when the bases were full, Gov. Tener, who once upon a time was a famous ball player led the cheering for the home team.

RAIN INTERRUPTS CINCINNATI TOURNEY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CINCINNATI, July 6.—Gustave Touchard of New York defeated Richard Palmer of New York today in the challenge round of the men's singles of the tri-State tennis tournament in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 7-5.

The victory gives Touchard his first leg on the tri-State championship cup, which must be won three times before it becomes the permanent property of a player.

Owing to rain the championship round in the women's singles between Miss May Sutton of Los Angeles and Miss Marjorie Dodd was carried over until Monday.

HOW "PACKEY" WON SUCCESS.

Has Never Lost a Decision Since Entering Ring.

Believes Boxing Should Be Taught All Boys.

Writing a history of yourself is not the nicest task in the world, says Packey McFarland. If you try to give yourself a little boost the knockers become active. If you hide a few good deeds you play false to yourself.

Therefore, I will try to do my best, which is all that can be asked of a man. It goes without contradiction that I have been more than fortunate in my ring career. The fact that I never lost a decision and also that I managed to accumulate enough money to make my folks and myself comfortable is something to be proud of.

Many times I have been asked: "Packey, what accounts for your success?"

That's a very hard question, and really I could not give a sensible answer. When I started off to box there were four rules that I made up my mind to pay strict attention to: Don't drink! Don't smoke! Live a clean life! Avoid bad companionship!"

Now, because I pull these rules, don't imagine that I'm a killjoy. Far from that. I only want to tell you what I think helped me in the world.

For further corroboration, you can ask any successful athlete and he will tell you the same story.

DON'T VIOLATE AGREEMENTS.

Another point that I made an ironclad rule is: Never break your word. As long as I have been in the boxing business there is not a single manager, promoter or anybody, that had any dealings with me, who can say that I have violated an agreement.

Recently there have been quite a few complaints over agreements being treated contemptuously by some of the budding stars. That is a terrible error, for it should be recalled by successful fighters that promoters are entitled to big consideration for the chances they take in staging bouts. One tip worth taking is, never get a swelled head. For as soon as you do, then you are gone. The history of the ring will prove this.

Now, that I have told all that I think is interesting from a personal standpoint, I will touch on the profession of boxing. I use the word profession in its fullest sense. Boxing is so different from fighting that there is no possible comparison. Boxing is the science of attack and defense. It does not mean rushing in with head lowered, striking away in a wild fashion and doing your best to render your rival helpless.

BOXING EXHIBITION OF SKILL.

On the contrary, it is an exhibition of skill. You cannot pick up boxing. Without the aid of a competent instructor nobody can become a real finished boxer. That boxing is considered a decent following is my firmest belief. In the present era it is taught in nearly all colleges, academies and schools.

Boxing to me should be taught to every youngster. In the first place it teaches them self-reliance and again makes them apt in the art of self-defense. Take any big man in life, he is always boxing, as you may say, and though he may get the worst of it now and then, he always comes back. That is drilled into you through boxing.

As an instance, I was going into the Fairmont A.C., in New York, one afternoon. There were a few youngsters playing around the door. I invited them into spar. One little fellow refused to put on the gloves and was almost ready to cry at the suggestion. That convinced me that the little fellow lacked spirit. Without that necessary requirement what chance will he have when he is thrown on his own resources. If he had boxed a little and received a few stinging wallops it would make him brace up and also teach the lesson that as we travel through life everything is not a sweet song.

BOXING BETTER THAN FIGHTING

I firmly believe that the public appreciates a boxing exhibition more than it does a fight. This is not the day of London prize ring rules. It is the era of boxing. The States where boxing is permitted strictly rule against fighting, but favor boxing. That is quite an argument to overcome. I believe strictly in elevating the sport. When two men enter the ring it is not to slaughter each other, but to box.

Take the life of a prize fighter and that of a boxer. The latter performs for years, while the former disappears from the scene very quickly.

Again carrying around a broken nose or cauliflower ears is not the nicest thing when you quit the ring. And very few fighters escape those disfigurements. I have knocked out men in my career but believe me I didn't feel proud over the stunts. I never have had any crowd yelling "Take them off" while I have been fighting. When I had a man so helpless that he didn't have a possible chance I always appealed to the referee to stop the affair. In my many bouts I always made it a point to study my man and then try to beat him to the blow. This quickens the brain and will be of benefit in later years.

HUNT FOR NEW FRUITS.

Useful Service the Department of Agriculture Is Doing for the United States.

[Baltimore American:] One of the useful services which the national Agricultural Department performs is in the world-wide search for new and desirable fruits and for better kinds of food products generally which can be introduced in one or another section of the United States. Only recently an agent of the department has returned from an exploration of Northern Russia, Siberia and Manchuria, where diligent search was made for fruits that can stand the climate of our northern border. This trip is said to have resulted in several valuable finds, one of the acquisitions being a small tart cherry, which grows abundantly on a bush or dwarf tree. Up in the latitude of Siberia the agent found a small but good quality apricot which is believed to be adaptable to our northern States. A peach was found in Manchuria which it is believed will extend our peach zone farther northward. China is said to possess some varieties of the peach valuable both for size and for flavor.

The hybridization and selection experiments of Burbank and other fruit and vegetable investigators have resulted in introducing many better grades in numerous vegetarian foods. But our gardens and orchards have been made the best in the world mainly because of the fact that the best in fruits, vegetables, grains and forage plants have been brought here from all over the world. In California and Arizona they are growing for market this year grapes from cuttings originally brought from Northern Africa, Central Asia and other remote places. Our California and Florida tropical fruits are almost invariably better than the imported fruits, for the reason that only select varieties of oranges, figs, dates and olives have been used in setting out orchards and vineyards.

USE OF TOBACCO.

Is the Most Extensive Habit in the World and the Record of America Is Hard to Surpass.

[Scranton Times:] Tobacco is the most extensively used luxury on the face of the earth, and its consumption is not confined to any particular class or nationality. People of all walks of life and of all races are addicted to its use, and the habit is growing in a manner that is astounding. America, in the use of tobacco, holds a record that is hard to surpass. The internal revenue derived from tobacco consumed in the United States in a year would build fourteen battleships of the first class, or it would pay the salary of the President for nearly a thousand years.

According to statistics compiled by Carl Werner, editor of the Tobacco Leaf, there are 533,857,206 pounds, or 266,687 tons, of tobacco smoked, chewed and snuffed in this country every year, not counting imported manufactures.

The much-abused cigarette claims its percentage, for the cigarette smokers in the United States, exclusive of those who roll their own, spend over $60,000,000 a year on this habit. A closer analysis of the subject shows that there are nearly 24,000,000 of them consumed in the United States every day—nearly a million every hour. Mr. Werner figures out that if they were strung on a wire, end to end, they would make a cable that would reach from the earth to the moon and back again, with enough left over to circle the earth one and a half times.

Cigars also get due prominence, since 21,718,448 are burned in the United States every twenty-four hours, or 251 every second of the day and night the year around.

EASY TURTLE SOUP.

Bill, the Cook, Just Lowered a Bucket when the Ship Plowed Through a School of Green Ones.

[New York Times:] Capt. Dunbar of the steamship Buckminster, which arrived yesterday from Cuban ports, reports that when his vessel was seventy miles south of the Winter Quarter Shoals Lightship, off the Virginian coast, she ran through a school of green turtles from five to seven feet long, which surrounded the ship on every side.

The peculiar tapping noise made by the flappers of the turtles on the iron hull of the steamship reminded the captain and his crew of the advance of a battery of artillery at a gallop. The air was hot and humid, and the temperature of the water was exceptionally warm, Capt. Dunbar said, through the working in of a current from the Gulf Stream, and this he believed was the cause of the turtles being so far north.

Several of the turtles were hit by the Buckminster as she plowed her way through the school, and their shells were smashed. Bill Wasser, the ship's cook, lowered a bucket and managed to pick up several of the floating pieces with the water. He declared it was the best turtle soup he ever tasted, and only wanted a flavoring of pepper, as it was hot enough without any further cooking. Bill said that, judging from the direction in which the turtles were heading, they should reach Coney Island about 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

PAN AMERICA.

Voting In Argentina.

The new election law in Argentina is believed to have reduced the opportunities for fraud or favor or violence to a minimum. In one province where the election was held a week ahead of the regular election day (Easter Sunday) the President ordered the voting to be done over again, as charges of fraud and corruption had been made by defeated politicians. The new count shows the same results as the first returns.

This electoral law provides that all citizens entitled to vote shall register and receive at the time a libretto containing a description of the holder, his photograph and fingerprint according to the Bertillon system. Every person so registered is required under penalty to vote at every election unless he can show cause, such as illness or absence from his voting district.

Certain civil and military officials holding positions likely to give them immense influence with a large number of voters are excluded from participating in politics or voting so long as they shall hold such places. The usual penalties for frauds are included in the statute.

After the votes have been cast, the ballot being secret, the ballot boxes are sealed and sent by officials of the Postoffice Department under guard to the strong room in the Congress Hall, where they are stored under guard of municipal firemen and police. The judges of election for the State in the presence of witnesses of all parties concerned make the count for the entire State. In some cases it will require a month for the returns to be completed.

South American Wool.

The raising of sheep in South America is for the animals' fleece rather than for mutton, and fortunes have been made by sheep raisers where not a pound of mutton has been sold. Wool is not a product of the sheep alone. It may be wool although it comes from the backs of several varieties of goats, from the camel, the alpaca, the guanaco, the vicuna of the llama as well as the sheep. From the sheep there are many varieties of wool—long, short, straight and curly, coarse and fine. Without any other tool than a round stone, cloth may be made from wool by simply spreading it out and hammering it while it is moist.

The sheep that has many say, modified the sheep of other countries is the Spanish merino of South America, of which the wool is long, soft and twisted into silky ringlets. South America possesses in addition to the domestic sheep introduced into the western hemisphere by the early English, Spanish and Portuguese settlers a group of wool-bearing animals native to the country. This group is the "auchenia," and comprises four species—the alpaca, the guanaco, the llama and the vicuna.

The alpaca and the llama were domesticated by the native Indians long before the advent of the Spaniards in South America. The guanaco, found from the equator south to Tierra del Fuego, is about the size of the English red deer. The llama is somewhat smaller and is a habitant of Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia. Both of these animals, esteemed mainly for food and as beasts of burden, yield a fine quality of wool or hair, ordinarily sold as alpaca. The vicuna is about the size of a fallow deer and lives in the mountains of Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador. It is practically a wild animal and has an exceedingly delicate wool worth nearly twice as much as alpaca. The alpaca, like the domestic sheep, is kept in flocks in the mountains of Peru and Bolivia it is driven from pasture to pasture, being brought down to the villages to be sheared.

The wool varies from two to six inches in length and is of fine lustrous quality. These and the domestic sheep are the animals from which Spanish America derives its wealth in wool.

The sheep industry is spread over the entire southern part of the continent. The pioneers of the industry are found in the region of the Straits of Magellan.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Felix Williams of Shreveport, La., well known in Southern society, who runs a 1600-acre farm and manages 200 negro employees, advised women to take to farming as the only career open to them which they will not find overcrowded. She says, "It will bring them greater returns in health, happiness and in that delightful knowledge of an independent life than anything else that I know of."

Miss Mabel Boardman has been appointed a member of the Board of Education at Washington, the District Supreme Court making the appointment. There are now two women on the board, and without doubt Miss Boardman will give school matters in the District of Columbia the same careful attention that she has given to Red Cross matters since she became secretary of that organization.

Probably the first woman wireless telegraph operator afloat will be Miss Mabelle Kelso of Seattle. In passing the examination she received one of the highest marks given at the government's naval wireless training school, at the Puget Sound navy yard, and has been assigned to the steamer Mariposa, sailing for Alaska on July 1.

Mrs. Sadie Doran, wife of Jack Doran, of Uniontown, Pa., who has been a policeman and constable for almost his entire life, has been sworn in by Sheriff Martin Kiefer, as deputy sheriff of Fayette county. Mrs. Doran is 45 years old and weighs 196 pounds. She is the second woman deputy sheriff in the State.

Dr. Sarah N. Merrick of Cambridge, Mass., who has done considerable research work as Harvard, urges the establishment of a marriage aid bureau at Washington, conducted by the United States government with counsellors in each city to help men and women make scientific marriages.

Miss Amanda Blymer is a real estate broker in Cincinnati who is doing a good business. Sixteen years ago she took up her father's business after his death, and through a series of unfortunate circumstances lost all he had left. She had a "good cry," but that was all the regretting that she indulged in. She sold her home, and with the money started Blymer Mercantile Agency, but it was not in that she made her great success, but later in the work of a real estate broker.

OUR USEFUL EYES.

[Tit Bits:] Sometimes blindness is entirely due to nerves. A young American farmer, hailing from Ohio, had been blind for five years. The farmer had been under treatment by many eminent specialists, and had also entered a first-class eye hospital, but no cure could be effected. The doctors were of opinion he was suffering from paralysis of the optic nerve, a disease considered hopeless. During the last month the blind man began to suffer very much with his teeth, and at last he visited a dentist, who advised him to have three teeth extracted. Worn out with a long spell of toothache, the farmer consented; but no sooner did the dentist draw the second tooth than he jumped up and exclaimed: "I can see! I can see the light, the crack in the window!" And, turning to the dentist with glee, he added, joyfully: "I can see you."

The whole affair seems to have been a miracle, as up to now no scientist has been able to connect the blindness with teeth. To a commonsense person the blindness appears to have been a case of "nerves." Possibly the man feared his sight was failing, and worked himself into losing the sight of his eyes.

Another remarkable restoration of sight was the one which happened to a stone mason nearer home. He had been unable to see out of his right eye for more than thirty years, but during one of the fierce gales which happened at Easter, he had to cross a bleak common with the wind in his face, and a quantity of dust got into both his eyes. His right eye felt it the most and began to stream with water. To try to relieve the pain, the stonemason rubbed that eye gently but continuously for some secon

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

Pasadena.

LARGEST LENS IN THE WORLD.

Pasadena Will Become the Mecca of Astronomers.

New Library Building Is an Immediate Necessity.

[Office of The Times, 22 S. Fair Oaks avenue.]

PASADENA, July 7.—The time when it is to be determined whether the immense 100-inch lens being ground at the Carnegie Observatory plant, on Santa Barbara street, near Lake avenue, will soon make possible the construction of the largest telescope in the world on the summit of Mt. Wilson, or whether the great piece of imported glass, upon which eight months' of patient labor has been expended, is to be broken up and thrown away and another started, is near at hand. In two or three weeks, it is estimated, the workmen will have reached a stage in the operation where the astronomers will be able to give their verdict.

The grinding of the lens will not be completed so quickly as this. If the disc is found to be satisfactory there will remain a great deal of work to be done on it and it will probably be two years before the mountings can be obtained and set in place of the peak. But if flaws show up and the glass proves to be worthless this same amount of time, plus the time it will take to obtain a new block of glass from across the Atlantic and eight months' of work upon it will be required before the Mt. Wilson astronomers can begin the work that they expect to do with the large instrument provided, of course, that the second lens should turn out all right.

However, hopes are being entertained that the present piece of glass, which was obtained from France, will answer the purpose. Already numerous bubbles have begun to appear, but these are causing no great worry. It is declared they will be no detriment. What is feared is strains in the glass that might distort the images.

The work of grinding is proceeding with utmost care and frequent inspections of the glass are made.

When the Carnegie Observatory astronomers desired to construct the giant telescope, they were told that it would be impossible to obtain so large a piece of glass, free of imperfections. The manufacturers finally made one for them, but the work of shaping it into a lens has been carried on against such great odds that it will not be satisfactory. If it is not, the loss will be heavy; if it is perfect, the lense will be of almost inestimable value.

This disc, if satisfactory, is to be a reflecting lens. It will be used exclusively as a mirror, as are most of the lenses in use in the instruments on Mt. Wilson.

NEW BUILDING WANTED.

Members of the board of directors of the Pasadena Public Library are facing a problem of either enlarging the building now in use or erecting a new library building in order to take care of all the books that are accumulating and have plenty of reading space.

One plan that is being discussed by members of the board is to endeavor to secure a new building in the park and make of the building now used as a library an art gallery and museum.

BIG POLO PLANS.

Already the Pasadena Polo Club is at work on plans for next winter, and they are being made on a scale so extensive that if they are successfully carried out, Pasadena will become the polo center of the United States, if not the world.

A tournament in which teams from all parts of the country and from England and Canada will compete is being arranged for next winter and there will be a number of smaller tournaments during the winter months.

Although nothing definite has been learned here as yet regarding the subject, there is talk that the United States government will probably send several army polo teams to Pasadena next winter to compete in the tournaments. Another report current is that Gov.-Gen. Cameron W. Forbes of the Philippine Islands will bring a crack team of army officers from there.

AZUSA BRIEFS.

AZUSA, July 6.—This morning fifty boys under the leadership of Director C. H. Blesse, Mrs. Blesse, and four other adults, connected with the Los Angeles Municipal Playgrounds, went up to the San Gabriel Canyon for a two weeks' outing. They will be at Mountain View resort, which was given them for this purpose by R. M. Fellows. Another lot of boys will come out July 15, and two camps of girls during August. It is the second annual event of the kind, and the managers expect after this to come to the canyon every year.

Father Glass and eleven Sisters of St. Vincent College, have gone up to "The Crag," H. W. O'Melveney's San Gabriel Canyon home, for two weeks' outing.

Misses Clara Robinson and Edna Dorsey, Azusa girls, were among the 310 students who graduated this year from the State Normal at Los Angeles.

WELL CONTRACT FOR WATER.

Covina Concern to Negotiate for Three Hundred Miners Inches—Orange Growers Face New Menace.

COVINA, July 6.—The stockholders of the Covina Irrigating Company have authorized the directors to proceed and contract for 300 California miners inches of water from the Los Angeles aqueduct, the price to be paid being 2¼ cents per inch per hour. The Columbia Land and Water Company, with offices at Covina, has contracted for the same water, a flow of 200 inches for eight months at the same price. Ranchers on the south of Covina in the Baldwin tracts are negotiating for small supplies. Charter Oak is also making advances for this water, and the entire Covina territory has now made claims in the Los Angeles department of service that will bring the amount of water to be used up to about 1000 inches.

Superintendent J. R. Elliott of the Covina Irrigating Company and President John H. Coolman of the Columbia Land and Water Company have both assured the stockholders that the contracts made are merely tentative, and that the price quoted at present is subject to change, and that a uniform price will be fixed when the bids from San Dimas, Glendora, Azusa, Puente, Covina, Monrovia, Duarte and other San Gabriel Valley towns have all been received by the aqueduct officials. City Engineer Mulholland of Los Angeles will make a trip this coming week to Covina, and will be driven over the country that is to be supplied with water. He will also inspect a reservoir site which may possibly be used by Los Angeles in this district.

"Rest Cottage," the pretty bungalow in Chamber of Commerce Park, has been opened to the public by the ladies of the Monday Afternoon Club, and a member of the club will be found there each day to entertain ladies from out of town.

William Wood, County Horticultural Commissioner for Los Angeles county, has made a visit to the Covina districts, and says that Southern California as a whole must start a determined war on the red spider. He believes that the individual rancher can be aroused to this danger without pressure being brought from the county office.

Ben F. Thorpe has sold six acres of his property at the corner of Lark Ellen and San Bernardino road to Mrs Sarah E. Garrett of Los Angeles.

W. Sherwood has purchased ten acres of alfalfa and walnut land from Dr. Frank Morris, situated on Puente road in West Covina.

The City Trustees are preparing to make a rigid inspection of the work on San Bernardino road, the contract for which was let recently. This road is to be oil macadam. The City Trustees believe that good inspectors on the job will work out the old theory of "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

The Covina Chamber of Commerce must continue to pay the rent and expenses on the maintenance of Chamber of Commerce Park, as the City Trustees say the city has no money for this purpose at the present time. The city has promised to take over this park next winter.

ALFALFA MEN WILL ORGANIZE.

Lancaster Growers to Form Co-operative Society for Their Mutual Benefit and Protection.

LANCASTER, July 6.—The interest stirred up on the question of organized alfalfa hay marketing will culminate in a meeting of the growers to be held here next week, when prominent exponents of co-operative marketing from other hay districts will appear and state the benefits which have accrued to their districts by following such methods.

Chino, Imperial and other sections have, by forming marketing combinations, vastly benefited the growers by standardizing prices and introducing improved methods of growing and handling, and the benefits to accrue are being recognized by our progressive growers to the end that they are now ready and primed for the formation of such an association among themselves.

Considerable disappointment is being expressed here because of the orders just issued by the State Road Commission for the survey of the route for the State highway from Bakersfield through the Tejon Pass instead of through the Tehachapi and Lancaster. However, the orders are only for a survey and do not necessarily mean that the road will be finally located by that route. Strong efforts have been put forth here to show to the commission where the road through Tehachapi would be of more benefit to settlers than that through the Tejon, and it is hoped that the arguments set forth will yet bear the fruit desired.

Typical Antelope Valley weather was on tap last Thursday, while the Fourth of July celebration was in progress, and everyone turned out with their enthusiasm uncorked to make the day a success. The barbecue was perhaps the feature of the day and enjoyed by all, while the sports were run off in good order and brought out keen competition.

The contest instituted by the Ledger, some two months ago, for a piano to be presented to the most popular young lady in the Antelope Valley, was closed on July 4 and the piano awarded, under the terms of the contest, to Miss Harriet Cram of Fairmont.

Ezra M. Hamilton, the mining man of Willow Springs, has blossomed out as an inventor of note, he having completed during the past month or two patents on a new form of wave-motor and on a puncture proof auto tire. Not only has he successfully run the gamut of the Patent Office, but he is in receipt of many flattering offers to place his ideas before the public in commercial form. Both of the inventions have singular merit and should be made commercially profitable.

Lancaster has progressed to the point where the installation of adequate street lights became necessary and they have added greatly to the appearance of the town.

WILL BROADEN ASSEMBLY PLAN.

Long Beach Proposes to Establish Second Winona.

Many Notables Engaged to Participate in Sessions.

LONG BEACH, July 6. — The Southern California Assembly, which convenes here August 4 and continues two weeks, is intended in a measure to take the place of the Chautauqua conducted in Long Beach so many years, and discontinued when the city laid aside its village pretensions.

Rev. David P. Ward of Pasadena, manager of the assembly, arrived in the city today and will be busy for several days in the interest of the meeting, for which an interesting programme is in preparation.

For several years past the assembly has been conducted by the Baptists of Southern California, but when Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher of Temple Baptist Church, Los Angeles, was elected president last year, he began a movement to have the benefits of the convention shared by a wider constituency, and inviting the co-operation of the Christian world, without regard to denominational affiliations, plans have gone forward for a convention builded on the famous Winona plan.

The outlined programme contemplates a school of Bible study, Sunday-school pedagogy, Christian missions, training for young people's work, aided by popular lectures and entertainments. In carrying this out the department idea is being followed, with an expert leader at the head of the divisions of Bible study and evangelism, Bible-school pedagogy, Christian missions, social service or applied Christianity, and young people's work.

Among the noted church leaders who have been secured for the assembly are Rev. W. T. Stackhouse of Boston, secretary of the Baptist Laymen's Forward Missionary movement, Rev. E. L. Powell, D.D. pastor of the Louisville, Ky., First Christian church, Rev. Robert Freeman, of the Pasadena First Presbyterian church, Rev. James W. Kramer, of Spokane, Wash., known throughout the country as William Jennings Bryan's double, Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher, of Temple church, Los Angeles, Rev. Dana Bartlett, pastor of the Bethlehem church, who will have charge of the department of social service, Rev. M. A. Dowling, secretary of the Southern California Sunday School Association, who will have charge of the department of Sunday school pedagogy, Rev. Claude Kelly, of San Jose, Rev. Frederick Collett, Mt. Hermon, Cal., secretary Northern California Indian Association, Rev. A. W. Rider, of Oakland, secretary of the Pacific Coast Foreign Mission Society, Rev. A. M. Petty, Los Angeles, who will have charge of the Home mission study class, Miss Eva Clarke, a native of India, Prof. J. A. Baber, who will have charge of the training classes for teachers and young people leaders, and W. Earle Smith, who will have charge of the music of the assembly.

The Assembly will be held in the First Baptist church, with other churches for department meetings. The lectures and entertainments will be given in the auditorium. The three Sunday sessions will be conducted by Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, Dr. Robert Freeman and Bishop Edward Hughes.

The officers of the assembly are J. Whitcomb Brougher, president, John Bentzien, secretary, W. F. Harper, Pomona, O. H. L. Mason, Long Beach, G. F. Holt, Riverside, H. I. Rasmus, Long Beach, and J. F. Watson, Los Angeles, program committee.

SEWAGE PROBLEM.

One of the troubious questions of Long Beach civic life which will have to be solved in the near future is the disposition of the city's sewage. The present system is too small, covering only a portion of the city, while the septic tank is obsolete and inadequate. The City Club is giving the matter deep thought and last night listened to an address by Dr. Leon Labonde of Brooklyn, who yesterday made a complete examination of the city system. He said it was out of date and a menace and recommended a new plant, which would provide for a chemical treatment of the sewage as the safest and best, asserting that electrical treatment does not kill the bacteria.

JURORS DISMISSED.

Late this evening the jury in the case of F. L. Holmes, charged with violating the city liquor ordinance announced that it was unable to agree and were dismissed by Police Judge Hart. The case has been hard-fought and the disagreement resulted from a number of things chief of which was the revelation brought out of the methods of securing a case against Holmes by the use of private detectives, who secured Holmes's confidence by use of fraternal emblems and hand grips.

NEWS BRIEFS.

J. J. Baldwin, foreman of the Alamitos Sugar Company's ranch, was brought here today for medical treatment. The ranch has a mule which is unusually vicious and Baldwin getting too close to the beast, was kicked in the ribs and three of them broken.

Prof. James D. Graham, for five years superintendent of the Long Beach city schools, has decided to quit educational work and has entered the real estate business, associating himself with a local firm.

Mrs. Sarah Van der Does, 80 years of age, died last night at Hotel Park View. Mrs. Van der Does was a native of England and a woman of remarkable intellectual attainments. Previous to coming to Long Beach she made her home in Los Angeles for thirty years. She leaves three nephews who live in the East.

Juster Goeldner, a native of Germany died this morning at his home on Lime avenue. He was 69 years of age and leaves a widow.

TO CREATE A MUSICAL CENTER.

South Pasadena Talent Contemplates the Formation of Inter-city Choral Club with Broad Plans.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 6.—A movement is on foot among the musicians and singers of this city to continue the Inter-city Choral Club, under the leadership of Thomas Taylor Drill. It is their desire to make this city a musical center, and they feel that the founding of a choral club that would include from 250 to 500 members, would form the neucleus for such a center, and the many musical artists, who live here could have their headquarters in this city, instead of in Los Angeles and Pasadena, as they do at the present time. This would also put on a business basis the proposed municipal theater, which could be used for all local productions, musicals and entertainments. The local musicians are in favor of the plan, and will do all they can to boost it.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The South Pasadena Young People's Union held its second annual picnic in Sycamore Grove last evening, and it was an elaborate affair. The union, which was organized three years ago, is a combination of the young people's societies of the Methodist, Baptist, Christian and Presbyterian churches and is for the purpose of promoting fellowship and social life among the young people in the churches. They hold four religious union services during the year, a banquet and a picnic supper and have a membership of over 200. The Committee on Arrangements was composed of Marcus L. Godfrey, president of the union, P. P. Godson, Miss Ada Eads, W. Bursize, E. B. Lawyer, Miss Clara Johnson, Miss Pearl Nolan and John C. Jacobs.

With an armful of empty milk bottles, Harold Fugit, aged 10 narrowly escaped death this morning, when he jumped for the step of the milk wagon, slipped and fell, the horses starting up and running over the lad. He was unconscious when picked up, but no bones were broken.

The first union service of the Methodist, Presbyterian, Christian and Baptist churches will occur tomorrow evening at the Baptist Church, corner of El Centro and Mound streets. A song service of one-half hour of the united choirs, under the leadership of Miss Vail, will open the services. The speakers will be the world's youngest lecturers, Bernice and Eunice Flitterer of Australia, ages 10 and 11 years, respectively, who will lecture on "The Bible" and will cover four thousand years, from the creation, to the coming of Christ into the world.

This afternoon a trio of society girls composed of Misses Louise Sherman, Genevieve Stehman and Marjorie Palmer entertained sixty-five of the orphans from the home on Mission street with a picnic in the Arroyo Seco.

The funeral services of the 5-month-old boy of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sammons of Meridan avenue was held yesterday afternoon from the chapel of Turner, Stevens and Berry on Mission street, Rev. Father Cotter of the Catholic Church of this city officiating, and interment in Mountain View Cemetery.

WILL STRENGTHEN FACULTY.

Pomona College Is to Receive the Assistance of Noted Educators from Various Points.

POMONA, July 6.—Believing that the best gain to a college is in adding to its faculty teachers of force and character and that the backbone of the college is in its teaching force, President James A. Blaisdell of Pomona College announces a considerable enlargement of the teaching body for next semester, made necessary by the growth of the institution. Prof. W. S. Ament will come from Oberlin College to the department of English and in addition to a course in English composition will offer a practical course in journalism.

Prof. H. R. Brace will come from Beloit College, where he has been unusually successful in oratory and debate to be instructor in public address, it being the hope of the faculty to materially strengthen this department by giving ampler help to the debating and oratorical interests which are so prominent at the college. Prof. Irving O. Becker will come from Boston University as an added instructor in the department of romance languages. Prof. Eugene S. Heath of the University of Nebraska, where he has been assistant to Prof. Bessie, the noted botanist, will have charge of the department of botany. There will also be offered greatly increased opportunities in geology. To the course of descriptive geology, Prof. Heath will add a course in stratagraphic geology, these courses leading to others in the chemistry of soils.

Prof. Willis Parker, who has been assistant in the department of philosophy at Harvard University, has been engaged as associate professor of philosophy and will offer besides courses in logic and ethics, courses in the history of philosophy and modern philosophical problems. Prof. Walter Allen of Yale University will come to the department of music as assistant professor of musical theory and appreciation. Prof. Allen has been organist at Battel Chapel, Yale. Miss Francis Clapp, formerly instructor in piano, who has been studying for two years abroad, will become an assistant in piano. Victor E. Marriott has been called from Yale to be acting librarian of the splendid Carnegie library building on the campus. Miss Marion Ewing will come from Andover Seminary library to be assistant librarian.

Hon. Charles G. Neely, a graduate of Northwestern University, and for years a member of the Chicago bench and bar and a law lecturer, has been regularly elected professor of constitutional history and law and will give courses in elementary law, American constitutional history and law, and American diplomacy. Prof White, who has passed a year's leave of absence in study abroad and at Harvard, has returned and will give courses in modern history, and Prof. Frampton, who has also been away on a year's leave of absence, passed in study at Harvard University, returns to the department of English. Dr. Arthur V. Stoughton becomes a permanent member of the faculty, assuming the title of assistant professor of physiology and hygiene and besides work in physiology will have charge of courses in embriology and histology.

ANGELENO WINS HANDICAP.

AVALON, July 6.—The first handicap sweepstakes medal play on the Catalina golf course today resulted in H. Hillard of Los Angeles, with a handicap of 9, proving himself winner of a beautiful loving cup. Second honors were carried off by W. C. Clay of San Francisco. For the third place S. Sallisbury and S. W. Morris of Los Angeles tied. There was a large attendance on the links and numerous prominent golfers watched the play with interest. Several golf and tennis tournaments will be pulled off during the month.

MANY EXCURSIONS.

Ninety representatives of the Radnor excursions, representing ten Southern States, arrived on the steamer Cabrillo today and will remain on the island for the week-end. The party is under the supervision of A. W. Daniels of New Orleans.

SKIFF CAPSIZED.

Cunny Travilla, the 8-year-old daughter of Mrs. L. Travilla of this place, caused much excitement when she capsized a small skiff off Sugar Loaf today. Immediately several persons went to her rescue, but the little girl abandoned her boat and swam to meet her rescuers. Since she was 3 years of age the child has "paddled" around the water front almost like an amphibious animal. Her two brothers, Ford and Jack Travilla, taught her to swim when she could scarcely walk.

TIMES CAMP.

Last night was a night of all nights in the Times Camp. During the evening meal a discussion arose as to what was the most popular dish on the table. The boys seemed to be very evenly divided between the Carnaco marcaroni and Stetsons' baked pork and beans. A decision could not be reached by arguing so a tug-of-war was planned between the two warring factions to decide the matter. Instantly a rope was produced and the boys set themselves for the big battle. For fifteen minutes they tugged without gaining a point either way. About this time some bright bystander slipped a sharp knife across the middle of the rope and all went down with a bump. The referee declared the fight a draw.

After dinner no one wanted to go to the band concert so Roy Harris and Charles Ilch gladly consented to entertain the rest of their fellow-visitors. These two boys are accomplished musicians, and the Ellers combination piano just suited them. While in the midst of a selection one of the boys asked the performer what was a good food to produce musical temperament. Try "Everybody's" olives was the answer, and it was all ants could do to stop a raid on the commissary. Following is the menu of the day:

BREAKFAST.
Germea, fresh milk
Fried ham
French fried potatoes
Hot cakes, "Makakake"
Hot coffee, Newmark's pure
Bradford's bread and butter

DINNER.
Soup, rice tomato, "Bis Bis"
Relish, lettuce with French dressing
Entree, baked macaroni, Spanish style, Calmaco brand
Roast, prime ribs of beef
Dessert, apricot pie
Vegetables, mashed potatoes, boiled cabbage
Lemonade
Bradford's bread and butter

SUPPER.
Cold roast beef
Baked pork and beans, Stetsons' brand
Baked potatoes
Potato salad
Cocoa, Bishop's
Bradford's bread and butter

Only $4 to Conorado and back.

FATHERS RECEIVE ATTENTION.

Public Meeting at Watts to Be Devoted to the Members of the Family Usually Ignored.

WATTS, July 6.—The local P.T.A. have arranged what they call "Father's Night" for next Tuesday evening, and at the school auditorium there will be a special programme for all the fathers of the community. There is to be a programme calculated to appeal especially to fathers, the idea being to develop a greater interest in the welfare of all children. As the invitations read, "fathers who have no children of their own" should borrow some, so as to get the best benefits from this meeting. Light refreshments are to be served free and a large attendance is expected. The principal feature of the evening will be addresses by Judge Curtis D. Wilbur of Los Angeles.

On Tuesday, July 19, Dr. Jessie Russel of Los Angeles will give a confidential talk to mothers at the Graham school. She comes under the auspices of the P.T.A., also, and plans are being made to secure for her as large an audience as possible. The ladies of the Graham district are especially active in matters pertaining to the better development of child life, and they feel that a proper education of parents along these lines is one of the good starting points.

Miss Burbanker, who has charge of that department, under the direction of the P.T.A., has arranged to give free entertainments at the Watts school auditorium every Saturday from 11 to 12 for the children of the community. Her work is to instill into the young minds high ideals of right living, and she does this, in a large measure, by telling appropriate stories.

NEWS BRIEFS.

John A. Pike, who was a resident of Watts some four years ago, was in town today for the first time since he left. His surprise at the wonderful growth of this city during his absence was not small, and he at once set about looking for property to purchase as an investment. He declared there is no town with a better future than Watts has.

Rev. F. Nelson Baker, pastor of the Watts Baptist Church, has returned from Goleta, Santa Barbara county, where he held a successful revival meeting.

Rev. F. A. Ames has been returned by his conference to serve another year as pastor of the Watts Free Methodist Church.

W. F. Schubert, former owner of the Advertiser here, has purchased a job printing office in Los Angeles, and will give his attention to that business in the future.

CONFESSES HIS SHORTAGE.

Treasurer and Tax Collector of Yuba County Says he Deceived Officials for Twenty Years.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES]

MARYSVILLE (Cal.) July 6.—Admitting that for twenty years he has been deceiving the officials of Yuba county, whose duty it is to count county funds, but declaring that no reason therefor was merely to gain time to make good what he claims is a clerical error in his books, Geo. W. Pine, County Treasurer and Tax Collector, yesterday afternoon confessed to a shortage of $9400 in his accounts. This admission came after Pine had been confronted with evidence showing that he is short so much and came after he had attempted to prevent Expert J. F. Morrissey from getting possession of certificates of deposit that would criminate him.

The shortage was at once reported to District Attorney Manwell, who in turn notified Foreman McIntosh of the Yuba county grand jury. Sheriff Tevar was at once notified to keep watch of Pine, and at the Treasurer's request an officer was not sent to his home, but Assessor Tom Bevan was detailed to spend the night at Pine's home and keep him under surveillance.

At 11:30 today Dist.-Atty. Manwell swore to a complaint charging Pine with misappropriation of county funds. At 12 he was arrested and taken before Justice of the Peace Morrissey and admitted to bail in the sum of $15,000. His attorney, W. J. Carlin, says he will raise the bond this afternoon.

You Should Come to Perris Irrigated Farms

1. You Can Grow Six or Seven Cuttings of Alfalfa Each Year.
A fairly good stand of alfalfa will bring you 10 tons an acre per annum. Prices are firm—last year alfalfa averaged $15 ton, and this year it should do as well or better. I can prove by letters from farmers themselves that they made a net profit of $100 to the acre.

2. A Great Place for Deciduous Fruits.
Perris Irrigated Farms are particularly well suited for peaches, pears, apricots and other deciduous fruits, from which great profits may be derived, wonderful profits in this rich silt soil so plentifully supplied with cheap water.

3. Soil, Water, Sunshine and Markets.
The soil is a deep rich silt infused with other elements that will bring abundant crops of sugar beets and stock beets, corn, potatoes, pumpkins, beans, peas, berries and other profitable products.
A share of water stock free with each acre. A 40-acre field entitled to 200 inches of water for 24 hours every 15 days.
The climate is healthful, the altitude on the even floor of the valley being 1400 feet. The skies are usually clear, and vegetable life responds wonderfully to proper irrigation and cultivation. The location is but 2¼ hours' ride from Los Angeles. There is a busy railroad town near by, with stores, shops and lumber yards, schools and churches.

4. Low Prices and Easy Terms.
$100 to $150 an acre—four years' time to pay. You might travel for weeks in a rapid automobile over the boulevards of the "Land of Sunshine" and never find an opportunity to make your selection in a tract like this at so low a price, with water right free.

ANGELENO WITH AN ODD MANIA.

Plan Crusade Against Unsanitary Dairies.

Mexican Beats Wife for Imaginary Insult.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 6.—The District Attorney's office was terrorized this morning by a wild man, who threatened to shoot the attaches, even leveling his wrath against Dist.-Atty. R. B. Goodcell, on the ground that he has been persecuted for three years, and was instructed by a Los Angeles judge that his only remedy lay in using the revolver.

"I've just dropped in to give you fellows warning. I'll shoot you down next time we meet." Deputy R. E. Hodge, who was first interviewed by the insane man, stepped into the chief's office, apprised him of the wild visitor's threats, and a telephone message was sent to the Sheriff.

Just as the Sheriff's officers opened the door the stranger had leaped to his feet, and started threateningly toward the District Attorney, who commanded him to be seated. Dr. E. Scott Blair, former superintendent at the Southern California State Hospital at Patton, was in the office at the time. He stepped back of the stranger, and was preparing to bring the "strong arm" act into play, when the officers swarmed over the demented man, bearing him to the floor by sheer force of numbers.

"My name's Paul," was all the officers could get out of the man. He said he lives in Los Angeles. His appearance and manner of speech indicate one who has been bred in college halls. He is now being examined for observation at the County Hospital.

PLAN CRUSADE.

The San Bernardino Medical Society met last night at the Ramona Hospital, and in augurated a campaign for a sweeping crusade against unsanitary dairy conditions. Dr. Ide of Redlands announced that a wealthy Redlands man would install a model dairy midway between Redlands, San Bernardino and Colton, representing an investment of $30,000 to $25,000 in order to educate the dairymen and public in pure milk matters.

The society invited Dr. G. E. Tucker of Riverside to explain the workings of the model dairy there, where certified milk is produced under inspection of the Riverside Medical Milk Commission. The model dairy for this valley develops from Dr. Tucker's presentation of the subject. The society adopted resolutions upholding the City Health Board, and appealing to the City Council for more earnest support of the board.

RESENTS IMPUTATION.

Panteleon Taylor, who was married to 17-year-old Jesus Gasca, wakes up each night between 1 and 2 o'clock and roughly arousing his girl-wife, beats her with a strap, because he imagines that she is calling him a "billy goat," an insult of unpardonable proportions as viewed by Mexicans.

His strange conduct started three weeks after their marriage, those three weeks having been most blissfully spent honeymooning. Today Tovar was examined as to his sanity, but the lunacy commission could not find grounds from the evidence to find him insane, although the members of the commission believe he is demented during the early morning hours. When Tovar is informed by his wife in the daytime of his cruelty, and shown the bruises, he showers his wife with apologies, and in every way becomes the model husband. Physicians are puzzled over the case.

OFFICIAL'S VACATION.

County Treasurer H. D. Sibley, with his wife and son, left today for his newly-acquired ranch of 944 acres, in Placer county, forty-four miles from Sacramento. He is off on a three-months' vacation. S. E. Draper, county expert, has been installed in the treasury department as Mr. Sibley's deputy during his absence. Gassina Sibley, the son, will have charge of the ranch. He graduated from the State's polytechnic school at San Luis Obispo, and brings to his new duties a training received under the best experts the State can supply.

REDUCING VALUES.

In the first five days the Board of Equalization has been in session here reductions have been made amounting to a total of $23,050. Of this cut $9000 was lopped off yesterday, when the board reduced the assessment on the Victor Gold Mining company from $19,000 to $10,000. The company's property is near Needles, but though having valuable machinery on the ground, the property has practically been idle for three years. On application of Attorney C. C. Haskell the assessment on the Kleuter estate was reduced fifty per cent.

NEWS BRIEFS.

W. S. Conger has purchased from W. H. Swan one and a half lots on Washington avenue, just north of the H. Ham home, in The Palms, consideration $1500. Mr. Conger announces that he will at once commence the construction of an attractive Swiss chalet, to cost in the neighborhood of $5000. The Palms is rapidly forging to the front as an attractive residence section, many fine and beautiful home places having already been erected there.

A license was issued here today to John Atwood Wilder, native of Indiana, age 22, and Lena M. Hayes, native of California, age 23, residents of Los Angeles.

SPECIAL ELECTION CALLED.

Funds to Be Voted at Upland Will Not Provide Music, So Subscription Will Be Raised.

UPLAND, July 6.—The special election called for Upland for August 3 will not provide funds, even if successful in carrying, in time for a series of band concerts for this summer. So the Upland chamber, at the request of one of the directors, M. F. Palmer, who is also manager of the band, has taken the initiative in the matter of raising funds for this season's music. A series of at least eight concerts is to be given, and the various members of the committee expect to secure the funds by private subscription in a few days. The concerts will begin Thursday evening, July 11.

HEADED FOR MOUNTAINS.

With the advent of the warmer weather, the stage from the car line to Camp Baldy is taxed to its utmost to accommodate the incoming guests. The camp management reports at least three times the people there that they had at this season last year, and each train is bringing in a new supply. Requests for information regarding the camp come faster than ever before, too.

NEWS BRIEFS.

W. T. Leeke has been elected a director of the Citizens' Savings Bank, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. A. Myers. M. F. Palmer has been elected vice-president and manager. R. C. Norton is made cashier.

Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Van Wormer and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Doner leave this week for an extended automobile trip to the northern part of this State. They expect to visit Lake county, especially.

The new athletic class of the Upland Y.M.C.A., under the direction of Fred L. Wing, is progressing nicely. The membership is growing, and practices are held each week, on both Tuesday and Friday evenings. A good interest is awakening in the movement.

Henry H. B. Weichman, wife and daughter, left this week via the Santa Fe, for New York City. Thence Mr. Weichman and daughter will sail for a visit to Germany. Mrs. Weichman will remain for several months' visit with friends in the East before returning to her home in Upland.

The City Trustees have received word from the agents of Andrew Carnegie to the effect that Upland's plans for a public library have been accepted, and that $10,000 will be given for the purpose. Work is to begin in a very short time, the new building to be located on the City Park grounds, at the northeast corner of D street and First avenue.

The city fathers of Upland and Ontario are to work in unison in the improving of West Tenth street, which lies jointly between the two municipalities. Overtures to this end were made by Upland city dads, and the neighbors on the south readily "came in." Upland will improve the eastern portion of the highway, and Ontario the west end. It is hoped, also, to have the county take care of the small strip to the west, meeting with the city limits of Claremont. This is a part of the celebrated Foothill boulevard, which has become somewhat under the ban with autoists and others, owing to its wretched condition for several months past.

C. E. Grier, employed as a bookkeeper in the Commercial National Bank, has been appointed to fill the vacancy on the City Council, caused by the resignation some weeks ago of J. P. Wedel. The selection of Mr. Grier is meeting with general satisfaction, as he hails from the section of the city sought to be represented.

THIRTY-FOUR YEARS OLD.

RIVERSIDE, July 6.—An orange grove which has been the home of County Assessor W. F. Montague since 1880, and where are still growing some of the seedling orange trees started in 1878, was sold this week to Joseph A. Clark of Los Angeles, who will make his permanent home in Riverside.

The property consists of ten acres on Rubidoux avenue, one of the first thoroughfares in the city to be developed and beautified. In the transaction Mr. Montague comes into possession of the Clark home on Lucile avenue, Los Angeles.

Supervisor J. T. Hamner has sold to R. C. Andrews, Howard King and A. C. Sarrar of Long Beach 160 acres of alfalfa land on Magnolia avenue, below Arlington, for a consideration of $32,000. Forty acres of the tract is being seeded to alfalfa. A new pumping plant has just been installed. Mr. Sarrar will take possession of the ranch the first of August, and will build an addition to the ranch house.

DEALS TOTALING $350,000.

Perris Valley property changed hands at a lively rate the past week, the deals reported totaling $350,000 or more. Among the transfers was the sale of the John E. Walker ranch, comprising 150 acres. H. W. Tuttle exchanged for this property the apartment-house located at No. 2015 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, the total value of the two properties being $90,000.

C. L. Nye of Riverside exchanged the Wyatt Operahouse at Redlands for the W. L. Olmstead ranch, consisting of 107 acres. The value of these properties is $87,750.

George F. Avery has exchanged his forty-acre property at Corona, of which fifteen acres is in oranges and the balance alfalfa and truck land, to Ray P. and H. H. Hall, for their 120-acre alfalfa ranch three miles south of Perris. The values represented in these properties was $60,000. The Perris Valley deals were made through the agency of D. B. Jordan of this city and H. M. Harford of Perris.

An exchange involving properties valued at $11,000, was made through the agency of Charles N. Wagner of this city and H. A. Shiffer of Perris. The Perris Valley ranch of J. J. Atwood has been exchanged for a twenty-acre orange grove near Riverside, in connection with business property.

Ethan Allen Chase of the National Orange Company has decided to test out a portion of the lands heretofore devoted to oranges, for deciduous fruit culture. Twenty-five acres of oranges have been uprooted and several standard varieties of quince set out. The orange trees were in a somewhat frosty location, and it is believed that the conditions are admirably suited to deciduous fruit.

In this work Mr. Chase is anticipating the movement recently inaugurated to have a commission appointed to tour the State and secure information that would make possible the districting of the Riverside section with regard to the crops for which its lands are best adapted.

WOULD RESTORE PARTY HARMONY

Los Angeles Officer Starts North With Offender.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Declaring that his action was for the purpose of restoring harmony and healing the differences that exist in the Republican factions in the county, Councilman John L. Sehon, former leader of the progressives, has declined to become a candidate for Congress from the new Eleventh District. Sehon made his position plain in a letter to the Republican County Central Committee, which has been endeavoring to eliminate all but one candidate from San Diego county to make the run in the primaries against S. C. Evans of Riverside, who has been announced candidate for several months and has been making a strenuous campaign.

Prior to the withdrawal of Sehon, it has been the plan of the Central Committee to hold a postal primary to determine what candidate should enter the primaries, but since Sehon's action, this plan has been abandoned.

With the withdrawal of Sehon and the recent announcement by former Mayor Grant Conard, that he was no longer in the race, Lewis R. Kirby, who made such a strong showing at the last election against S. C. Smith, incumbent, is the only recognized Republican now in the race. William E. Smythe, who was delegate-at-large and State manager for La Follette during the recent Presidential campaign, remains determined that he will run in the primaries an independent. William Kettner has announced himself as a candidate on the Democratic ticket.

BOND FILED.

Although G. W. Pursell, promoter of the San Diego, Riverside and Los Angeles Railway, was four days late in filing a $15,000 bond for the extension of time on that part of his franchise within the municipal limits, the City Council probably will accept the surety.

The bond was deposited with the City Clerk today by Pursell, immediately after his return from San Francisco. Pursell tonight emphatically denied a report published here this afternoon that, as a result of the failure of a London banking firm to take $5,000,000 of the company's bonds, the project might be abandoned. He declared the firm mentioned (L. H. Dethier & Co.) had never agreed to purchase any of the company's bonds and denied that he had failed to meet his pay roll, as stated in an afternoon paper here. His trip to San Francisco, he says, was for the purpose of purchasing material.

NEW RATE BOOK.

A new rate book for the guidance of local fire insurance writers issued July 1 by the State Board of Underwriters of the Pacific announces a reduction in rates on dwellings averaging from 25 to 40 per cent. Reductions also are made on special hazards on business property. The change, according to local insurance agents, practically puts San Diego fire risks on the same basis as those of Los Angeles. The change by the underwriters is a result of a report showing increased efficiency of the fire department and betterment of the water supply.

WOMAN EMBEZZLER.

Captain of Detectives Joseph Myers announced today that experts who are at work on the books of the Standard Wine and Liquor Company have found that Mrs. Mary Ballert, who is a prisoner in the City Jail, was formerly book-keeper and cashier of the liquor concern, is more than $6000 short in her accounts. Police officials believe this amount will grow. According to Myers, Mrs Ballert admits taking money from the concern, but does not know the amount. He says she told him she took the funds to pay her husband's bills. He runs a road house near Nestor, south of the city. It is said relatives of the woman will make good the alleged shortage and there will be no prosecution.

IS PAROLED TO MEXICO.

Ontario Youth Who Has Given the Police Much Trouble Is Exiled to Southern Republic.

ONTARIO, July 6.—Harner Bridge, who with his younger brother, has been in trouble here innumerable times, was up before Judge J. R. Pollock this morning in connection with the passing of a bad check to J. D. Grizelle of the Star Grocery about one year ago.

Bridge, who is about 19 years of age, dropped from sight shortly after passing the check and it was only a little over three months ago the Ontario officers got track of him in Los Angeles. A visit to the Angel City disclosed the fact that the boy was wanted there on another charge, so the local officers decided to let him serve the ninety-day term there before preferring the present charge.

Yesterday his term in the Los Angeles jail was up and he was brought here for trial. The boy's mother, Mrs. Martha A. Bridge, through whose pleadings he had on several occasions been kept from the reform school, appeared in court today and asked that he be paroled. Young Bridge stated that he has been offered a position in Mexico and promised to remain in the southern republic for the three years if paroled by the court. The parole was granted.

HAY FEVER

So many patients have applied to Drs. Shores & Shores for treatment lately who have not known what their trouble was, that Drs. Shores have decided to explain the symptoms, effects and treatment of Hay Fever, that all may tell it at a glance.

In the beginning of an attack of Hay Fever the patient experiences a sense of uneasiness about the nasal passages, with a slight disposition to sneeze. Gradually these symptoms increase, and often there is intense itching of the nasal passage, with a profuse watery discharge, which necessitates the constant use of a handkerchief. In aggravated cases the discharge drips continually from the nose, later the mucous membrane becomes so congested that the secretions present a grayish color. The inflamed mucous membrane naturally causes more or less stenosis, or narrowing or closing of the nasal passages, which adds greatly to the discomfort of the sufferer, oftimes the nasal passages are entirely closed up.

If the patient lies on the side, the nasal passage which is uppermost becomes open, while the fluids collect in the parts below; or if the patient lies on his back the flow passes to the rear portion, causing a complete stoppage of the nasal passages. The fluids which escape from the nose are often irritating around the opening of the nose and lip and very frequently give rise to irritation around the nose and lip, and sometimes even result in eczema. The eyes become congested and the lips red and itching. If the disease is allowed to run, an attack of asthma often sets in. The asthmatic symptoms are usually confined to the night time, although the waking hours are often characterized by shortness of breathing, which the patient describes as wheezing.

Hay Fever is a treacherous disease and yields quickly to this wonderful treatment. Every sufferer from this insidious and deceptive disease should consult Drs. Shores & Shores at once. RIGHT NOW is the favorable season for quick cures.

NEW SEASIDE RESORT.

Carpinteria Concern Gives Valuable Property to City on Condition That It Is Improved Immediately.

CARPINTERIA, July 6.—The Chamber of Commerce has just closed a deal with the Henry Fish Seed Company, which means the opening up of another beach resort along the Southern California Coast.

The company has executed a bond for a deed to approximately two acres at the foot of Linden avenue and on the ocean front, for a public park, on condition that the public erect a suitable pier and bathhouse in connection with the park plot. The plot is to be graded and laid out and trees planted within two years, the pier to be finished within a year.

The only way by which the property could ever revert to the donors is that the people make no effort to improved it, so generous are the terms of the gift.

Joel Remington Fithoan, Jerome F. Tubbs, and W. C. Hickey the the trustees appointed by the Chamber to hold the property and approved by the Henry Fish Seed Company. Mr. Fithoan is one of the leading owners of the Santa Barbara Press, and has a country residence here. Mr. Tubbs is the president of the Chamber of Commerce and vice-president of the Commercial and Savings Bank of Carpinteria. Mr. Hickey is at the head of the big department store owned by Hickey brothers. The standing of these men make the carrying out of the conditions sure. A subscription will be taken with pledges running over a term of years to handle the improvements. The bath-house will be begun at once and the pier a little later, under the plans.

This proposition means improvements to the amount of $10,000 for the benefit of the public. As soon as the Chamber of Commerce shall incorporate, the public trustees named are to transfer the property to them, to be, by them held in trust, until such a time as Carpinteria shall become an incorporated town, when the title shall pass to the people.

IF HIS HEALTH PERMITS.

King Alfonso Authorizes Announcement of Visit to America—Mexico Prepares Fiesta and Receptions.

Following the news published exclusively in The Times that King Alfonso and his Queen are planning to visit America during the coming winter season, His Majesty has authorized the statement that if his health permits he will surely make the journey to the Western Hemisphere at the appointed time.

Through Dr. Don Antonio Alfau y Barait, the King says that he has long wished to visit the Latin-American States that he may better understand the progress made by them since their political separation from the motherland.

"Having in consideration the reserve established by court etiquette in my country I shall take great pleasure in visiting the sympathetic American continent and I hope to tighten the bonds of friendship between these countries and my own. I hope that nothing will occur to prevent myself and my beloved Queen from meeting our people on the other side of the ocean."

In his interview with Senor Alfau, the King declared that he realizes the importance of his visit, spiritually, politically and commercially, and that he believes the effect will be beneficial not only to the countries visited but to Spain as well.

"I may say that I have desired many times in the last few years to see the Spanish-speaking countries, but until now it has not been convenient for me to make the trip," he continued.

Upon receipt of the news corroborating the information already made public, steps were at once taken by the Mexican authorities to receive the King with all the dignity due his high rank.

Fiestas dear to the hearts of all Latin-Americans have already been planned in Alfonso's honor and for more than a week it is expected that the entire Mexican republic will devote itself solely to entertaining the distinguished guest and his suite.

Young Venturan Succumbs to Attack of Typhoid Pneumonia—Assessor's Report Shows Gain in Values.

VENTURA, July 6.—John H. Reppy, Jr., of this city died last night at the Bard Hospital after a short illness of typhoid pneumonia. Young Reppy was a single man and had spent nearly all his boyhood days here, where he attended school and graduated from the local High School. He was aged 25 years. When he got ready for a business career he went into the automobile and garage business and because of this had a wide acquaintance among traveling men all over the State. He had been ill but a few weeks. The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

SAVED BY MUSTACHE.

Santa Anan Brought Into Court on Wrong Charge but Is Opportunely Identified—Short News.

SANTA ANA, July 6.—Cy Camancho's mustache is all that saved him from pleading guilty to petty larceny this morning. Camancho was in jail for disturbing the peace while intoxicated, but he did not know but what it was for murder. Cy Attencio was in jail for stealing a shirt from H. Miller's store. When Constable Jackson went to the jail and called for Cy Attencio, Cy Camancho walked out. In Justice's Court he said he did not know what he had done while drinking, but he was certain that he had not stolen a shirt because he already had a shirt on. However, he was about to plead guilty when City Trustee McPhee, who was present when Attencio was arrested, walked in.

"This is not Attencio," said McPhee, "unless Attencio has grown a large mustache and has lost a lot of curly hair from his head since last Wednesday."

Close inquiry by Justice Cox then developed that the prisoner's name was Camancho and not Attencio, and Camancho was taken back to jail. Attencio's case will be disposed of next week. He entered a not guilty plea.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Reports from the mountain apiaries show that the honey crop is almost a failure. The county will produce not over forty or forty-five tons of honey this season. Last year some of the best apiaries put out as much as all of them combined will put out this year. The season has been too cold for honey-making. Many of the stands did not build up well.

Mrs. Kate Measor was found guilty of running a place where liquors are sold, and will be sentenced next Monday. She was prosecuted under the Wyllie local option law. Her attorneys, Nesbit of Los Angeles and Harding of Santa Ana, say they will take the case to the Supreme Court and test the law.

"FIVE 'N' OVER" CLUB RECEPTION.

Hamburgers' Girls Have Haven of Rest by the Sea, and Parties of Thirty Will Be Entertained the Year Around—Club Women Attend Affair and Are Delighted.

An appreciative and happy throng paid respects to the new club home of the Five 'N' Over Club of Hamburger's store, at Venice yesterday afternoon, when the women employees were for the first time at home to their friends in the splendid new vacation house, the gift of the company.

The banner of the Five 'N' Over Club floated from the flag pole and all Venice was agog over the "housewarming." Ever since the dedication, which took place at the Auditorium ten days or more ago there has been bustle and excitement among the girls who form a part of the army of employees at the "big white store."

The affair was informal and every one proceeded to inspect the premises from the shower upon the back porch to the handsomely decorated pillows upon the couches, bearing the Five 'N' Over Club insignia.

Leading club women of Los Angeles were present and expressed their joy in the new vacation gift. Among those who visited the club during the afternoon were Mrs. D. C. McCann, president Friday Morning Club; Mrs. Willits J. Hole, president Y.W.C.A.; Mrs. John H. Francis, Mrs. Jones, the newly-elected president of the Ebell Club; Miss Amelia Johnson, general secretary of the Y.W.C.A.; Miss Grace Maxwell, and Miss Ethel Amos of the Y.W.C.A.

Late in the afternoon, M. A. Hamburger, Mr. Chamberlin and other members of the firm paid their respects to the new owners of the Five 'N' Over clubhouse.

The reception line was headed by Miss Rachel Swanner and Miss Anna Dempsey, and included Miss Emila Hariot, Miss Anna Huff, Miss Lewis, and Miss M. Olson.

The committee serving punch in the hall were the Misses Hinzie, Shirr, Cline, Coyle, Pough and Constance. Misses Simms and Olson conducted the music, and Miss Lewis, Mrs. Morrow and Mrs. Warner had charge of the flowers.

Miss Elisabeth Dempsey chaperon in charge, displayed the storehouse where an ample stock of wood, as well as stocks of provisions in cans, boxes and bottles (of properly feminine brands such as ketchup, oil and vinegar) are stored.

A few men paid their respects during the afternoon, but it is distinctly understood that this is a home for the feminine employees.

Any woman or girl who is in the employ of the Hamburger establishment may spend her vacation in the seaside club home, there being accomodation for thirty at one time.

The clubhouse is built upon modern architectural lines and fitted in sanitary manner. It is substantial, gracious and airy. It is within half a block of the ocean, and there is a broad porch across the entire front of the building which affords a fine view. A spacious sun parlor above, gives opportunity for seclusion.

The handsome living-room is well and tastefully furnished and there is a piano. A book corner is already well-filled, the books being the gift of the St. Elisabeth's Orphan Association, in token of appreciation for the help extended to them during the recent campaign for funds. Late fiction also forms a part of the library.

In the dining-room, not a detail of home is lacking, from the fine napery marked in embroidery, "Five 'N' Over Club," and the graceful Chippendale glass, to the plates and steins upon the plate rail, the latter being the gifts of members of the club and individual members of the firm.

Upstairs are the dormatories for thirty girls and women.

BURIED POT OF GOLD.

Elderly Candy Vendor Arrested on Insanity Charge When She Tells of Almighty's Alleged Revelation.

Mrs. Leolta Seybold, an elderly woman, who makes a living selling candies and gum in front of the downtown theaters, was taken into custody late last night on the charge of being insane.

The woman declared she had received a communication from the Almighty in which it was stated that she was to receive a large amount of gold at present buried on the Baldwin ranch.

A large crowd collected in front of Pantages to hear the woman's story, and when she refused to move on she was taken to the Central Station. Later an insanity complaint was issued by the police surgeons

POLICE SEIZE OPIUM.

Apartment-house Alleged to Be a Hop-joint Is Raided and Two Alleged Smokers Arrested.

A large amount of opium, with several smoking outfits, was captured by members of the Metropolitan Squad at an apartment, No. 1209 East Eighth street, alleged to have been conducted as an opium joint by William Irving.

Two smokers giving their names as William Smith and Walter Dunn, were arrested in the place.

The officers assert that the joint enjoyed a large trade, owing to the belief that it was safe from police interference, as none but the initiated were allowed to enter.

The prisoners were held under $150 bail each.

DIES WHILE CALLING.

Dr. W. J. Nelson, a retired physician living at the St. Nicholas apartments, No. 762 Hartford street, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday afternoon, while calling upon a neighbor.

Early in the afternoon the physician complained of feeling ill, but he said that it was nothing serious and refused to call in another doctor. While talking with Mrs. B. A. Mayhew he fell forward and expired a few minutes later.

He is survived by a widow and three daughters, Mrs. D. A. Vail, Mrs. C. A. Foster, and Miss Elizabeth Nelson, the latter having left on a trip for Honolulu a few hours prior to her father's demise.

The body was removed to Bresee Bros., undertaking rooms, where the funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

NOW ADMITS HIS GUILT.

Redondo Beach Pioneer Says He Shot but Did Not Intend to Kill. Victim's Funeral Tuesday.

REDONDO BEACH, July 6.—William Wright, who killed John J. Bunz yesterday, admitted to Marshal Keppel this morning that he shot Bunz. Wright, who for many years has been partially under the influence of liquor, being an habitual drunkard. He had become sobered this morning and instead of denying the shooting as he did yesterday said he shot Bunz, but merely did it to "bluff" Bunz and the workmen, but did not mean to kill anyone. He also said later that the men had badgered him about their intentions to move his house away.

Wright, who is a well-educated man, is a pitable object to look upon from the effects of his constant drinking. He is probably the oldest resident as he camped here when the townsite was only a sheep hearder's camp on the Dominguez rancho. He thinks he has a perfect right to the land on which he camped. He was taken to the County Jail today by Constable Stanchfield.

The funeral of John Bunz will be held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the Cate undertaking establishment under the auspices of the local order of Eagles of which he was a member. The remains will be buried in the Inglewood Cemetery.

ORPHANS PICNIC.

About sixty-five little orphans, mostly from the Italian quarter of Los Angeles, were given a picnic here today under the supervision of four nuns from the Convent of the Sacred Heart. The children are inmates of the orphans' home conducted by the Missionary Nuns. The children had a picnic dinner on the lawn of J. I. Lechner's residence on Guadalupe avenue, where they romped happily for several hours. Later they enjoyed several hours on th bach playing in the sand. To many it was their first view of the ocean.

About ninety boys from the McKinley Home for Boys at Gardena will be given a picnic here Thursday, July 9.

COLTON NOTES.

COLTON, July 6.—Aorand D. Bailey passed away last evening at his home on East G street, after an illness of almost a year. Mr. Bailey was 52 years old. He was born in Madison county, Illinois, and had resided in Colton for twelve years, most of the time being in business here. The funeral services will be conducted Sunday afternoon by the Knights of Pythias. Interment will be at Hermosa. Mr. Bailey is survived by a widow, three sisters, Mrs. G. B. Caster, Mrs. J. J. Clem and Mrs. J. F. Flinn, all of this city, and two brothers, William Bailey of Missouri and Charles Bailey of Colton.

The City Trustees last evening awarded the contract for supplying the city with oil for the streets, it being secured by the Standard Oil Company, which was the lowest bidder on 75 per cent. asphaltum oil.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, July 6.—It is estimated that between two and three thousand participated in the Fourth of July celebration here. The festivities of the day commenced with the sunrise salute and the programme was carried out. At 10 o'clock the parade formed on the Perris boulevard and marched through the city. Nearly all the business houses in the city were represented. A striking feature of the procession was the Liberty float, Miss Zilpha Donalson, Goddess of Liberty, reigned, surrounded by a bevy of young ladies representing different States of the Union. The barbecue took place at noon.

The programme of the afternoon consisted of races and a baseball game. The Southern Sierra Power Company gave an electric display at 7:30. The day's festivities came to a close with an open-air dance at the pavilion.

The Santa Fe employees have finished excavating for the water-softening plant west of the depot. The pipe and other materials have been received and also several cars of crushed stone and gravel, and the work is being rushed to completion.

Peter Milliken, editor of the Progress, who has been quite ill for the past two weeks at the Arlington Hotel, Riverside, is improving.

Advantages of Dr. Ring's Spanish Toric Lenses.
They set closer to the eyes without touching the lashes.
They are ground to conform to the natural curve of the eye.
They permit a wider field of vision and allow you to see through them in all directions with equal distinctness—a decided improvement.
They eliminate annoying reflections from back of lenses.
They are the result of modern skill and methods and are a great improvement over the old style.
They can be ground lighter and prettier in every way.
They are especially desirable in bifocals, because they give a much more direct focus through the segment, and besides they are so much more elegant in appearance.
If you desire the benefit of my opinion and advice, do not hesitate to consult me. Your eyes are my first consideration—the sale of a pair of glasses my last.
I DO NOT, under any condition, advise the use of glasses when they are not positively needed.
If you have reason to believe there is anything wrong with your eyes, I would be pleased to talk it over with you.
MY PRICES range from $1.00 per pair for simple reading (Stock) lenses up to $4.00 per pair for the highest quality of regular compound astigmatic lenses ground specially for your eyes and guaranteed to fit perfectly.
TORICS and KRYPTOKS cost a little more than the old or regular kind, but are preferred by those who can afford them.

City That Leads.

GREAT PROJECTS NOW BEFORE LOS ANGELES COST OVER SIXTY-TWO MILLION DOLLARS.

Of These the Most Gigantic Are Far Under Way and Place the Municipality at the Head of the World's Best for Enterprise and Progress—Wonders Within a Few Years.

IN GREAT MUNICIPAL undertakings actually under way and in those for which the money has been provided with which to begin carrying the work into effect, Los Angeles leads the rest of America. Thirty millions of dollars have been raised and as much more will be provided to develop the enterprises in which the city is engaged, and within ten years the people who are developing this community into the metropolis of all the West will be in the full enjoyment of the benefits to which all their present expenditures are leading. By 1922 the municipality will have spent $62,100,000 on its water supply and distribution, its harbor and the other projects, the details of which have been planned under the direction of able engineers and designers.

The city is assured of its future and calmly assumes the direction and carrying out of enterprises that in less than a decade will make it foremost, barring none on earth, in all that goes to make up a truly cosmopolitan capital of industry, wealth and culture. With public parks that will be famous in two hemispheres; with a harbor that will be an object lesson to the nations, with an aqueduct transporting the flow of a broad mountain river—and a surplus that is a river in itself—to the doors of the people; with a series of public buildings that will be completed about a civic center within a decade; with the city lighted, the machinery of its factories moved and the wheels of its railways turned by power generated through the flow of the aqueduct water; with a municipality owned passenger and freight line connecting the harbor and the business center—with all these projects either actually pressing onward toward completion or planned almost to the last detail, the city well asks where else in the country is there such municipal activity?

To the municipal experts who are gathering in Los Angeles for their national convention, the city itself is its own best exhibit of what can be done by the energy of man, under such skies as those of Southern California and in the midst of such scenery and with such a soil. All that the rest of the world has accomplished has been an object lesson for the builders of this community and they have studied it carefully, adopting what met the needs of this century and city. It is too early to show the completed structure—ten years too early—but the plans are drawn, the contracts are nearly all either being executed or are ready to be, and the gigantic undertakings of a vigorous citizenship are on view.

The great crying need of Los Angeles is ability of the highest order in the City Hall, to bring these tremendous plans to the best fruition—and not pop-corn-stand politicians in places demanding first-class business intelligence and skill.

The greatest enterprise of any city in the entire country outside of New York is the aqueduct that is to supply Los Angeles for all the years to come with water, and is to irrigate the surrounding country, as well as give potable water to the smaller communities round about. The aqueduct will be completed by next March, and through it there will be brought to the San Fernando reservoirs 20,000 miners' inches of water. This is the surplus of the Owens River, a stream that rises in the snows of the Sierras and flows along the eastern side of the range, its waters at present going to waste in a lake that is in fact a sink. In California a miners' inch is the equivalent of a cubic foot and a half of water flowing every minute, so to those not familiar with water-inches, it may give some idea of the stupendous supply to know that the aqueduct flow amounts to 43,200,000 cubic feet every twenty-four hours, or enough water to cover 991 acres a foot deep in that time—more than one and a half square miles. To bring the flow of this river to Los Angeles the city will have spent by January next, the $24,500,000 voted in bonds.

But this brings the river only to the gates, for now the city is planning to distribute the water, not only within its own borders, but the surplus to those who want it—and that means all the surrounding country. To do this will cost $10,000,000 more by the time the system is completed with all its ramifications, and already a beginning has been made.

POWER DISTRIBUTION.

The aqueduct is not to be merely a source of drinking and irrigating water. Throughout the Sierras and the Coast Range of this State, the streams have been harnessed. Engineers have climbed into almost inaccessible canyons and along the sides of precipitous hills and have constructed great water-ways in order to procure electric power. The aqueduct makes this kind of labor unnecessary, for it is a mighty power ditch itself, and brings to Los Angeles the means from which will be derived all the power that a million inhabitants and all their manufacturing and motive industries will require for ages to come. Los Angeles finds itself the largest owner of electric power derived from the flow of a stream of any corporation, municipal or otherwise, on the Coast, and it is now considering how it will sell this power—whether as a great proprietor to customers direct, or through other agents.

In any event, the city has already provided the money for a three-unit generating system that will soon be completed and will have cost when ready for business, $3,500,000. Another plant is the necessary complement of this, and will be constructed as part of the city's work as soon as it shall be reached, and this will cost $5,000,000 more.

But, when this has been done, the city, unless it had some means of distribution of the power to customers, would be helpless. So a great distributing system within the city has been planned in detail by the special engineer in charge of this work. It is possible that the existing private plants will be utilized at least in part, but in any event the cost to the city will be $4,000,000 according to the cheapest method and $19,000,000, if the entire system shall be placed under ground. A plan under which part of the system will be under the pavement is at present most likely to be approved, calling for something like $6,000,000.

This is essentially part of the aqueduct enterprise, for the construction of the aqueduct alone made it possible. Great progress has been made toward carrying the entire project into execution.

THE HARBOR

To carry out the ideas of the people, it was determined six years ago to have a harbor second to none in the country. The natural harbor of Los Angeles had for many years been the port of San Pedro, but San Pedro was a small community, lacking the financial ability to construct and develop the resources of the harbor at her doors. State laws interefered with the annexation of a community not contiguous and between Los Angeles and San Pedro was a stretch of settled country that came within the limits of the other. Los Angeles annexed the intervening territory and then Wilmington and San Pedro voted to become part of the great city, but not until the Legislature had amended the State laws to make such annexation possible. It was a task that would have caused any other community to hesitate, but Los Angeles went straight ahead to accomplish what it had set out to do. The harbor thus came under the direct supervision of the city. Then the advantage of control by a powerful municipality was seen, for plans were at once made and are being carried out, though so far slowly, for the construction of a harbor where the fleets of the world can find anchorage and the merchandise of all the earth can be loaded and unloaded.

The greatest engineer of this specialty in the country has prepared the designs and specifications for this harbor and for its approaches and its wharves and warehouses. The city has already provided $3,500,000 for the work and is under pledge to expend $10,000,000 in and around the inner and outer harbors—the inner being at Wilmington and the outer at San Pedro. This pledge will be kept in the ensuing years.

To connect the harbor with the business centers of the city a municipal railway is projected, although this is something that the next few years will have to see undertaken. It is proposed to expend $2,000,000 on this work. In the preparation of these plans, the advice of Bion J. Arnold, great railway expert, was obtained. He furnished plans for a railway system and a great network of tracks centering at or near the Plaza, where, in the course of the next few years, the transcontinental railways will have a great union station.

CIVIC CENTER.

The Plaza is close to the locality selected by Robinson, famous authority on cities beautiful, for the civic center of Los Angeles. Already the Federal government has placed its chief center in Southern California there. The county buildings, the Hall of Records, the Courthouse and the Hall of Justice, with the detention building, under the charge of the Sheriff, already close by, and the municipality owns the gore at the intersection of Spring and Main streets, where it is proposed to rear a new City Hall some time in the future. The plot was secured for that purpose, but the citizens have so far postponed the construction, as a possible consolidation of the city and county governments is now discussed. That the site will be occupied by a stately building before many years is, however, assured.

Meanwhile the city is negotiating for the purchase, through the aid of syndicate, of a site for municipal buildings of another sort, where the Normal School of the State now stands on Fifth-street hill. Here, in the course of a few years, structures are to be erected that will cost at least $1,000,000 for the free library alone. Then there are to be built a vast auditorium, in which conventions and gatherings involving enormous throngs may convene, a municipal art gallery and other edifices of dignity and importance. The site, which the city is now preparing to secure, is to cost $500,000.

Under the guidance of a park commission that has engaged expert engineering advice, Los Angeles is preparing to expend the beginning of $2,000,000 on the improvement of its existing parks and public playgrounds. The lake feature of every one of the parks inside the older city limits, with the broad lawns and the varied trees and other plant life, make them already notable. But now they are to be joined by a parkway that will include what is called the Silver Lake project. This has already been passed by the City Council. A parkway is to be created that will lead through the heart of the newer residence quarter and yet will seem to be a part of the country. This will connect Echo Park, through the various other parks of the northern and eastern districts, with Silver Lake and Elysian Park and finally, by a wooded drive along the old Los Angeles River, will enter the Arroyo Seco park project. The Arroyo Seco is to be one of the most wonderful drives in the world. Along the banks of this torrent—for it is a veritable mountain torrent in the spring—a broad road will reach from the mountains beyond Pasadena to the heart of the city of Los Angeles, with a succession of such views of rolling hill, rock-faced mountain, fertile plain and beautiful valleys, with a distant glimpse of the ocean under a placid sky, as can be seen nowhere else in the world.

The entire park system will probably be completed within three years. Added to this the city possesses the wonderful public ground known as Griffith Park, where a rock-hewn range rises abruptly from the plain. Here herds of elk roam at will and other wild animals are to be added at no distant date. Already a zoological society has been organized that is preparing to give the municipality such a collection of live animals of the jungle and the mountain, the river and the desert, as can be found elsewhere only in the great older zoological gardens of the world. It is to be a bit of the heart of wild-animal land transported bodily to the midst of a populous and important community, where civilization is at its highest.

A municipal exposition ground is being built now with funds already provided, at Exposition Park, where some of the buildings are ready. The city in accepting this trust agreed to expend $10,000 a year in the improvement of the park, and this is being spent under the direction of the Park Commission, at this time.

In many of the newer residence districts, the streets themselves are parked, and this has generally been done under the direction of the municipal experts.

MARRIED IN HASTE.

Stealing a march on their friends, George A. Heaney of No. 957 Arapahoe street, and Blanche Sofsky were married yesterday morning by Justice Forbes, and hurried away to San Pedro to catch a boat for San Francisco. Heaney is 24 years old and is understood to be a salesman here. The bride was born in New York.

Government Indicts.

STANDARD FOUND ALONE AS LOOTER OF BANK.

THE beginning of the last chapter in the Earl Standard embezzlement case was written in the United States District Court, yesterday, when the Federal grand jury returned an indictment of six counts against the young frenzied financier. Bond was fixed at $20,000. Standard was not in the courtroom, neither was he represented by his attorney, Tom L. Johnson.

It is understood young Standard will appear in open court early this week and plead guilty to the charge of looting the American National Bank of Pomona of an aggregate sum of $150,935.13, and ask mercy. The maximum sentence under each count of the indictment is ten years, and the minimum five. It has been given out for some time that Standard intended making no defense; in fact, in an interview with The Times following his arrest last March, he declared that "I will acknowledge my guilt and take my medicine." He has not changed his mind, largely from the fact that the proof was overwhelming.

The first count of the indictment charges that on April 6, 1911, Standard embezzled $1540; the second, that on the same day he embezzled $4400; the third, that on January 21, 1911, he abstracted $2000 from the bank; the fourth, that on March 23, 1910, he misapplied $1100 of the bank's money by means of a cashier's check for the purchase of stock in the Midway Five Oil Company; the fifth that on August 20, 1911, he made a false entry on the active ledger of the bank, showing the gross balances on one page of that volume to be $11,406.62, when it should have been just $100,000 in excess of that amount; the sixth charge charges the embezzlement of the total amount of the shortage, given above.

The investigation just concluded with the return of the indictment against Standard closes the matter with the exception of the plea of guilty and the imposition of sentence by Judge Wellborn. The failure of the grand jury to indict any one but Standard settles effectually the insinuations that friends or associates knew of his misdoings and assisted in spending the money.

It is no secret that at the beginning of the investigation it was the opinion of Assistant United States District Attorney Regan, who had charge of the case before the grand jury, that Standard had accomplices. It was not thought possible that a comparatively inexperienced boy could steal one-fourth of the bank's deposits without someone else knowing something about it. Thorough investigation has developed nothing in this regard, and Regan stated yesterday that he knows absolutely nothing involving anybody but Standard.

There was on the books of the American National Bank an account labeled, "Harley Standard, special." (Harley Standard is a brother of the former teller,) and the books show that about $66,000 was secured from the bank on that account, but there was no evidence that the brother had any knowledge of the account. It is also known that in his Kern county oil field work he spent thousands of dollars, but the only evidence that could be secured in relation to the source of the money used in that enterprise was that his partners thought he was getting it from the East, but they did not stop to inquire just where or how.

The question whether Standard cached any of his ill-gotten money was also the subject of close investigation by the government, and the result was the view that he had not taken the precaution to hide any of the funds during the two years that he had free access to the cash of the bank. Municipal League.

HERE TO SOLVE CITY PROBLEMS.

Some Eastern Authorities First to Arrive.

Local Exhibit to Be Opened to Public Tomorrow.

Several well-known eastern authorities on municipal government composed the advance guard of delegates that arrived in this city yesterday to attend the eighteenth annual municipal convention which will open tomorrow night in the Auditorium. They are: Clinton Rogers Woodruff, Philadelphia, secretary of the league; Edward L. Heydecker, assistant Tax Commissioner of the City of New York; Albert S. Binkerd, secretary of the City Club, New York; M. N. Baker, editor of Engineer and News, Montclair, N. J.

William Dudley Foulke, New Jersey, president of the league, and other eastern delegates will arrive today. A few from the Atlantic Coast will be unable to get here until tomorrow morning. In addition to delegates from this State, about 150 easterners are expected.

Secretary Woodruff went into conference with the local committee yesterday, immediately after his arrival. The programme was carefully reviewed, but no new features were introduced. President Bovard of the University of Southern California attended the meeting and invited some of the speakers of the convention to address the students of the university summer school. The committee was unable to answer definitely yesterday, but it is probable that such an arrangement will be made, not only for the university, but for the Polytechnic High School.

THE BEST? NOT YET.

Secretary Woodruff and Ernest S. Bradford, statistician of the Labor and Commerce Commission, Washington, were guests at luncheon at the City Club yesterday. Secretary Woodruff spoke hopefully and enthusiastically of the coming convention and expressed the opinion that added efficiency in municipal government would result from it.

"I have been asked to name the best-governed city in the country," said Woodruff in closing. "I wish it were possible to say Los Angeles, and perhaps on my next visit I may be able to do so. You have a splendid form of home-rule government, with the true Democratic spirit. When you have added the highest possible type of efficiency you will have reached your goal.

"This city has not been afraid to try out things on a big scale and as a result has gone farther ahead than some of its older sister cities in the East."

Dr. Bradford spoke briefly on the workings of the commission form of government in cities, saying that this plan had helped to forward the movement for adequate and intelligent city planning, including housing. Dr. Bradford is author of a volume on "Commission Form of Government," which is accepted as an authority by students and civic workers.

Secretary Woodruff, who has visited this city several times before, was busy all day and evening conferring with local committees and inspecting the exhibit. "I am delighted to be here again," he said last night. "Los Angeles impresses me as being ready at all times to extend a cordial welcome, not only to the individual who comes here on a visit, but to new ideas. This city has set an example to the rest of the country by its courage in trying out advanced ideas."

SALE IS POSTPONED.

Trustees of State Normal School Extend Time Because of Defect in Form of Notice

Because of defective wording in the original notice of sale the trustees of the State Normal School in this city decided yesterday to postpone the sale at public auction of the school property from Tuesday, July 9, to Tuesday morning, July 20 at 10 o'clock. The trustees also voted to make Allison and Allison of this city architects for the new building.

The school agrees to pay the architects 3½ per cent. of the cost, the State making the provision that this expense be defrayed by the school. The appointment of the architects has been approved by the State Engineer and State Advisory Board.

The new buildings will probably be ready for occupancy for the fall term of 1913. When completed the capacity will be increased from 1900 to 3500 students. The plans will probably not be ready for several months. The sale of the school property at Fifth and Grand avenue will be made at the Grand avenue doorway, main entrance. The board reserves the right to reject any or all bids and will refuse to accept less than $500,000.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.

A warrant charging battery was issued from Justice Forbes' court yesterday against Maurice King, husband of Fannie Briggs Carr King. She complains that that they got into an altercation and he assaulted her. The couple have been in many disputes during the past two or three years. A divorce suit, charges and counter charges of assault, and several other actions have marked the marital experiences of the Kings.

OUTINGS FOR ORPHANS.

Children under the care of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart, were the guests of the Pacific Electric Railway at Redondo yesterday, a special car having been assigned them. Children of the McKinley Home will be given a picnic at the same place Thursday, also as guests of the railway. The officials of the company said yesterday that a special car would be at the service of an orphanage in the city at any date that may be selected and that the youngsters will be fed and taken care of on the outings.

STANDARD FOUND ALONE

Bailey accounts for about $148,000 of the money, and the balance could easily have been disbursed making trips over the country, and living expenses during the period covered by his defalcations.

Not only that, but the report of Bailey indicates that the steal might have still been going on but for the fact that Standard drew his last two checks on what are known as "dead" accounts in the bank, that had not been touched by the owners for many years. This aroused suspicion. The investigation of Bailey also shows that the manipulation of the books by Standard was of such a character that it should have been discovered long before the denouement came, for it was a clumsy job. This was especially true of the change of $100,000 in the footings on a single page of the open ledger account, where there were more than a score of items, each exceeding $5000, and the bottom line showed a total of only $11,000 in round numbers. Standard accomplished this by manipulating the adding machine so that the hundred-thousand-dollar figure was dropped out of the total entirely. Yet a cursory examination of that page would have given Standard's case away.

Last Christmas, just previous to his flight, Standard was presented with a fine chair, as a "testimonial of the regard" in which he was held by the bank officers. Standard laughs at that little episode yet when it is called to his attention.

In spite of the circumstances of the case it is understood a strong appeal will be made to Judge Wellborn for clemency in behalf of the young man.

SET TRAPS FOR SPEEDERS.

Motorcycle Cops Will Increase Vigilance to Catch Mad Drivers of Motorcycles and Atuomobiles.

The police will redouble their efforts to suppress speeding and put a damper on reckless driving of automobiles and motorcycles within the city limits, according to a statement made yesterday by Lieut. Butler, in charge of the Traffic Squad.

Under his direction men are marking off traps on all the paved streets in the city. These traps will be 660 feet long. They will be laid off at points where drivers of machines have been in the habit of speeding. Other traps will be set at points where speeding has not been practiced in the hope of catching drivers unaware.

"We are going to place motorcycle men on every paved street in the city," said Lieut. Butler. "That does not mean that they will be on all the streets all the time. Our force is small, so we will have to move the men around.

"From now on we will keep a record of every warning issued or arrest made. In second offenses, if the violation is flagrant, we will ask the court to impose either a stiff fine or a jail sentence."

Ten speeders, including Mrs. Morris Goldberg, whose cases were continued Friday by Police Judge Fredericksen until yesterday for sentence, were in court yesterday.

As the majority of the defendants are motorcycle drivers, and as it would work an extra hardship upon them to pay fines because of their financial conditions, the court imposed jail sentences, but suspended execution for one year.

Monte House, a colored delivery boy who has been fined and has served time, was sent to jail for ninety days. His employers promised to place the boy on a wagon.

MAY GET HERO MEDAL.

San Diego Man Who Made Brave Effort to Rescue Girl in Ohio River Arrives From East.

F. Dougherty, an insurance broker of San Diego, was given an ovation yesterday when he arrived at the Alexandria en route home from a business trip East. Business acquaintances had heard of a heroic attempt at rescue of a woman in the Ohio River, for which Dougherty may receive a Carnegie hero medal.

Dougherty, who is a trained athlete, was enjoying an excursion trip on the Ohio. The boat was crowded with the usual holiday crowd and had just pulled out of Cincinnati, heading toward an island resort, when Miss Janet Simpkins, aged 23, of Nashville, leaped overboard in a fit of despondency. Dougherty was standing near-by. He threw off his coat and leaped in after her. The girl had sunk and when she came up Dougherty seized her by the clothing. She fought him off in a determination to die. She sank the second time, and Dougherty dived after her. In coming up the girl fought so desperately that she tore the shirt from Dougherty and clawed his face. He sank with her, but lost his hold through her frenzied struggles. Dougherty himself was rescued with difficulty and was the hero of the day in Cincinnatti. The girl's body was recovered several hours afterward.

The excursionists met at the close of the day and forwarded a recommendation to the Carnegie organization, setting forth the brave effort made by Dougherty and the great risk to his own life he had incurred.

"WATTS."

Valuable trademarke or humiliating joke?

Is it to laugh, or swell up with pride?

These are pretty tough questions to answer off-hand, as almost any citizen of the thriving little municipality can attest. When a man has worked hard and successfully to help build up a city, he is naturally annoyed when he finds that the object of his pride and solicitude is generally regarded as a legitimate butt for derisive witticisms. He can't be expected to laugh at his own funeral so he fumes inwardly and racks his brain for a way out.

A strong movement for a change is undoubtedly under way in Watts. If some one would suggest a dignified, and therefore more appropriate cognomen, one that would reflect the importance of the city, it is probable that it would be adopted.

Nobody in the city believes that Watts is much of a name in itself. It is merely a question of what it has come to mean. The advocates of the change argue that it has become merely a mirth-provoking cognomen, a subject for the facile pen of the humorous paragrapher, and should be consigned to oblivion with as little delay as possible.

Others, including the Mayor, are less hasty in deciding. They are inclined to believe that the progress and growth of the city have made its name valuable and that as a well-known trademark it should not be lightly discarded for a new name of untried merit.

It is not to be denied that the movement is gaining ground every day. The proponents are only deterred from making a more aggressive campaign by the difficulty in at once selecting a proper substitute.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS.

A half dozen suggestions have been made and there seems to be a decided leaning toward a nice, long, romantic cognomen that shall suggest the shade of green trees, rugniling water and ever-blooming flowers. This leaning is on the part of the women voters of the little city, while the men scowl with scorn on such names as "Juanita Park," "Hacienda Place," etc., and suggest such truculent names as "The Hub," "Junction City," "The Junction," or would compromise on "Acacia Park."

There is a vast array of fancy names which chill the heart of the business man to even consider. He fears that if the bars are once let down there will be such a torrent of frilly names submitted that one of them might be selected and it would be a case of jumping from the frying pan into the fire.

Watts has been the butt of jest and pun for five or six years, until all dignity flees with its mention. It hurts business and property values to have strangers begin to grin at the first mention of the name of one's home city.

"LONESOME TOWN" JOKE.

They look with apprehension upon the expected revival of a comic opera entitled "Lonesome Town," in which Watts is the town in question and in which the Widow Watts occupies a prominent place. This play was produced in Los Angeles about five years ago by two popular comedians who are again appearing in a local playhouse. From this dated the poking of fun at Watts. During the run of that play a petition was presented to the comedians asking them to change the name of their Lonesome Town

"LONESOME TOWN" JOKE.

They look with apprehension upon the expected revival of a comic opera entitled "Lonesome Town," in which Watts is the town in question and in which the Widow Watts occupies a prominent place. This play was produced in Los Angeles about five years ago by two popular comedians who are again appearing in a local playhouse. From this dated the poking of fun at Watts. During the run of that play a petition was presented to the comedians asking them to change the name of their Lonsome Town from Watts to some indefinite name, but without avail.

Watts was named after a man who lived on the present site of the little city about eight years ago. There was no especial reason for calling the new place Watts, but nobody thought of any other name at the time.

Again, the citizens of Watts point out that it struggled along for several years under the undesirable notoriety of being the first city founded on the payment plan of $1 down and $1 per week.

Watts grew so rapidly and so solidly that it was at length able to overcome this alleged handicap of cheap lots and point to its business blocks and handsome homes as a refutation that it was a "city in hock" and lived "out of a paper bag."

Then came the first run on Watts. It was a play on words between two German comedians. It grew, and other puns were coined with Watts as their butt. Then came Lonesome Town, and the song by that name in which Watts is supposed to be the mark. Up and down the Coast the ribald jesting about Watts spread. Then it went East and the fame of other "rag towns" faded away before the notoriety of Watts. The mention of Watts was always the signal for a grin and then a laugh.

SUBSTANTIAL GROWTH.

All this time Watts was growing rapidly and today has about 3000 inhabitants and is less than seven years old. It has a dozen fine brick and stone business blocks and hundreds of beautiful homes. It is the junction point for all of the beach cities on the Pacific Electric system and also the terminus of the only four-track electric road in the world. Property values went up and the little town prospered. But the name still stuck and carried with it a big bunch of jokes. Now Watts is thinking of changing its name to most any old thing, as long as it is difficult to rhyme, and sounds stable and respectable.

P. F. Adelsbach, editor of one of the Watts's papers, is the father of the movement for a change and has interested a number of the influential citizens.

"There is always a great deal of prejudice to overcome in proposing to change the name of a city," said Adelsbach yesterday. "But in the case of Watts, I think that there is everything to gain and nothing to lose. The name means nothing and has been the topic for so many jests that have reflected upon the city that it should be changed. We are really the hub of Greater Los Angeles and a very important traffic junction. Some name which would reflect what this city is, would be the solution of the difficulty."

Mayor C. H. Dodd, of Watts, says that he is undetermined. "Watts is known widely and I think that if we changed our name, it might result in the loss of this publicity and would gain little. However, I realize the feelings of the other citizens that the name suggests nothing and has been the butt of numerous jokes. I would like to hear the opinions of other people and some suitable name suggested before committing myself."

THEIR VISIBLE SUPPORT.

An Austrian authority says that American hospitals are up to the European standard. They ought to be, considering how much American money has had to do with the building and support of most fashionable infirmaries abroad.

DOING IT WELL.

State by State the Taft men are effecting organizations. No State can afford to equivocate with the issues that are at stake. Republicans in no State can afford to hazard the destiny of their party by associating themselves with a cause that is lost. The time to act is now.

MELODY MAKERS.

It will be a pleasure for the Gamut Club and for Los Angeles to entertain the annual convention of the music teachers of California. No band of workers are more faithful than those who instruct in this beautiful art. No class of persons contribute more to the culture and pleasure of the State than the music teachers.

THE DESERT'S WORD.

Over at San Bernardino the sheriff received a mysterious message from the desert asking for an officer and the call was instantly obeyed. What the officer may have found on his errand is of no consequence. The point of interest is that the desert's word carries with it the weight of authority. It is large, mysterious and compelling. There is awe in the desert and here is tragedy upon its wide white wing. Men do not understand it, yet it lures them. They conquer it slowly, but they fight it forever. In the end its waste places shall yield to the singing waters that shall lave its white sands. At the last men shall tread green grasses where now is emptiness and desolation. In a little while the roses shall spring where now the cactus bares its wordlike thorns.

AN ALUMINUM YACHT.

There is a good deal of speculation in international yachting circles over the aluminum yacht which has just been built for Sir George Coats (of Coats' cotton fame.) the fastest yacht in her class ever built. Sir Thomas Lipton is said to be rolling his eyes with envy, while the New York Yacht Club and the Royal Yacht Squadron on either side of the Atlantic and the German Yacht Club at Kiel are on the tiptoe of expectation. That the new yacht will compete for the German cup has now been announced, and her lightness, her seaworthiness, her suppleness, her swiftness, not omitting her gracefulness and beauty, are the subject of much attention. She has not been named yet but the suggestion put forward by a ribald jester that it should be called "The Thread Worm" may, it is said, be adopted after all.

WAILING AN ARGUMENT.

In a discussion in the United States Senate concerning the causes of the increased cost of living, Senator Oliver of Pennsylvania laid it at the door of the middlemen. He said that he bought four pounds of nails for 4 cents a pound and that the merchant who sold them to him sold the United States steel corporation for them only 2 cents per pound.

Whereupon Senator Joe Bailey of Texas rushed to the defense of the retailer. He said that Senator Oliver paid the merchant 3 cents for nails that cost but 8 cents because he made the merchant hitch up a wagon, take a boy and send them to his house. Senator Oliver replied that he carried the nails home himself. He added candidly, amid the laughter of the Senate, that he wanted the nails "for the purpose of furnishing this example." He wanted them evidently to nail his argument with.

METCHNIKOFF MEANDERINGS.

Prof. Metchnikoff, the learned scientist who discovered that sour milk was the elixir of life, has now sprung another assertion on a harassed world.

Glycobacter is its name and you get it from dogs. You assimilate it yourself and it makes war on the indols and phenils, and that gives you perpetual youth!

Of course, we will admit having summarized the scientific document, but that's what it says.

The professor has the advantage of us, however, inasmuch as we can't prove him wrong for a long while. Before we could claim glycobacter as the everlasting elixir we would have to wait at least beyond the span of one human life. But why not try it on doggie himself? If we get it from dogs in the first place, it only seems fair that the canine race should be the first to benefit. At present fourteen years is doggie's age limit in a general way. Now if the professor will make Towser live to, say 35, we might be convinced.

THE COLONEL AND THE SHERMAN LAW.

If there ever was an act spread upon the statute books of the United States in response to a general popular demand and in accordance with the doctrine that the people should rule, the Sherman law cannot be left out of the classification. The people's voice had been urgent for some law that will enable the government to deal with monopolies and trusts and so safeguard the interests of the public generally. When the law was finally passed (differing, by the way, very much from the bill originally drawn by Senator John Sherman of Ohio) it was looked upon by the people as excellent. There has been a popular clamor during all these score of years for the enforcement of the law thereby to control trusts, combines and monopolies.

The enforcement of this law has been strongly resisted by monopolies, and it lay dormant till three years ago. Cleveland did comparatively nothing with the law, nor did any other executive, until Taft became President. He has enforced it with great vigor and with absolute impartiality.

Now we see Mr. Roosevelt rising up at Oyster Bay and telling us exactly what he thinks about this act. He thinks the law a fraud never intended to be enforced. He states that he himself, finding it a law, did enforce it; but that the way Mr. Taft has enforced it is doing great wrong to the business interests of the country, and will continue to do so.

Col. Roosevelt's claims to having enforced the law, his views as to how it ought to be enforced, and his practical declaration in favor of its repeal, are all characteristically Rooseveltian. Were he to be President again he would no doubt find no reason for repealing the act, nor would many of the great business combines be liable to fall under its condemnation or find reason to be opposed to it. In Mr. Roosevelt's hands the law would serve admirably as the biggest kind of stick to make the trusts "good" in the Rooseveltian sense. That is exactly the use he put it to when President. As he said when asking the late E. H. Harriman for $150,000 to use in his own campaign in New York two days before the election, he (Roosevelt) is always a "practical man," if we construe the expression to mean a "practical politician." In his hands a "good" trust, exempt from the reach of the Sherman act, was a trust on Mr. Roosevelt's side in politics, and a bad trust was one not on Mr. Roosevelt's side in politics.

It was somewhat of a revelation before the primary election in California, when Mr. Beveridge of Indiana, speaking in behalf of Mr. Roosevelt's ambition, declared openly that the Sherman act ought to be repealed. On second consideration this declaration did much to explain why the steel trust and harvester trust were furnishing money for the Roosevelt campaign, why men like William L. Ward of New York, Tim Woodruff of Brooklyn and Bill Flinn of Pittsburgh were on the side of the colonel.

In spite of all the cry from the Roosevelt camp about the "interests" and their alleged action in behalf of President Taft, the facts are plainly all the other way. Mr. Taft is the first President who has ever attempted with vigor and absolute impartiality to enforce the Sherman law. It is impossible to think that the Standard Oil crowd, the tobacco trust crowd, the American steel crowd and the harvester crowd should favor the re-election of the President. It is quite as clear why these great interests should favor Roosevelt, who forbade the prosecution of the harvester trust, granted permission to the steel trust to absorb its rival in Birmingham, Ala., and in a word persistently favored the trusts that were with him in politics and used the Sherman law as a club.

ONE OF ENGLAND'S LITTLE WOES.

Ireland is at it again. Just when it seemed that all her grievances were to be comfortably settled by the long-desired home-rule bill passing the British Parliament, if she doesn't spoil everything by breaking out in another way! All the large towns in the south of Ireland have now been placarded with revolutionary posters calling upon the people to repudiate the home-rule bill or any bill that keeps them even remotely under British rule, since England's days of greatness are over and she will soon be merely a German colony, anyhow!

Needless to say the poster has caused the utmost consternation in political circles, and the Irish leaders, who have devoted so many years to the attainment of home rule and appeared to be on the eve of having their ambition realized, are distrait. The poster is unlikely to help matters.

After referring to the rebellion of 1798 the placard goes on to say: "The time is drawing near when we shall be called upon to do the same again. England is certain to be involved in a big war with Germany in the near future, so it is necessary for each and every one of us to be ready for that time. Break away from England or else come under German rule! Irishmen, awake, arm at once! Delays are dangerous. The dawning day is at hand. Prove yourselves worthy descendants of the men of '98. God save Ireland!"

There is not the slightest supposition that, in the event of war, England could whack Germany—it is that part of the poster that England finds the most unkindest cut of all! Poor old England, what with her labor unions, her Ireland and her suffragettes, she certainly appears to have her hands full—and Germany making ugly faces at her across the North Sea all the time. No wonder her nerves are not what they were!

TWEEDLEDUM AND TWEEDLEDEE.

The excuse for following a State-wide vote and not a district vote in choosing delegates to a national nominating convention is that, as Presidential electors are not chosen by Congress districts, but by a State-wide vote, therefore delegates to a nominating convention should be chosen the same way.

But a national nominating convention is a body not known to the law. It and the National Committee appointed by it make and enforce their own rules of procedure and prescribe the qualifications and methods of election of its members. Neither Congress, nor State Legislatures, nor courts are given power to repeal, alter or modify the rules for choosing delegates prescribed by the National Committee. The Republican National Committee provided that delegates should be chosen by districts and no power is privileged to disregard this method. Gov. Johnson's Legislature defied and disregarded the law of the committee and undertook to substitute therefor a State law which they had no more right to enact than if they had undertaken to prescribe the method of electing members of the Presbyterian general synod.

It was within the power and right of the National Republican Committee to throw out the entire California delegation because they were not elected in accordance with the call of the committee. That they did not do so, but permitted twenty-four illegally-chosen delegates to retain their seats, was doubtless due to the fact that nobody contested those seats, and that in California all but the delegates from the Fourth District received a majority or plurality in the State at large.

If the law of the State justified and demanded that a State-wide vote and not district votes should govern the election of delegates, then it may not be forgotten that another law of the State provided that the district and not the State-wide advisory vote should govern the election of a United States Senator.

Yet the Johnson crew who defied the State law in the election of a Senator are howling "fraud and robbery" because the national convention would not disregard its own rules for the election of delegates—

"The difference is, as one may see, Twixt tweedledum and tweedledee."

"CUT-OVER" LANDS.

Wisconsin has adopted an admirable plan for sending many of her citizens "back to the farm." There are in that State large areas of fertile soil covered with stumps, brush and trees. The "cut-over" lands, or lands from which the timber has been removed, are exceedingly productive when thoroughly cleared. But to dig up and remove the stumps and clear away the brush requires considerable labor, which many home-seekers are not financially prepared to obtain.

Under the Wisconsin law when twenty-five or more settlers of any county petition the county Board of Supervisors, setting forth "that they are owners of cut-over lands and that it would promote the public welfare to clear them, and giving an estimate of the cost, the board may issue bonds of the county to cover this cost. The amount of bonds to be issued is limited to $25 an acre and they are to be a special lien, prior to all others, on the land to be reclaimed. The lands benefited are to be taxed to pay the interest on the bonds and to create a sinking fund that shall redeem them at maturity. The clearing may be done under contracts made by the owners, providing the county board approves the terms of the contracts.

In the coast range, in central and northern California, there are hundreds of thousands of acres of "cut-over" lands, from which the larger growth of redwood trees has been removed. The lands on the western slope of the mountains require no irrigation, as the ocean fogs and frequent rains supply sufficient moisture both for field crops and orchards.

Similar conditions prevail in the Cascade Mountains in Oregon and the Olympian range in Washington on lands from which the fir and cedar timber has been removed. There are large tracts in the lower Sierras in California, from which the pine trees have been cut, which might be made available.

The same principle of aid in redeeming arid land might be advantageously adopted in localities not within reach of the United States Reclamation Service. There are many valleys not reachable by canals from streams, which are underlaid with an inexhaustible supply of water at a depth of from twenty to 100 feet. If the invention of the Arizona convict for drawing electric power from the air shall prove a practical success, as now seems possible, water can be pumped at a trifling cost, and twenty-five owners of four sections of arid land could with the aid of county bonds to the extent of $25 an acre establish wells, pumping plants, reservoirs and distributing pipes that would render productive hundreds of thousands, or even millions, of acres of sagebrush and cactus deserts.

The eyes of the world will be upon the sturdy athletes taking part in the international games at Stockholm. May the best men win—and the best men wear the American colors.

POST-MORTEM CRITICISM OF KING EDWARD VII.

Sir Sidney Lee has certainly brought down the wrath of Great Britain upon his luckless head by his publication of a biography of King Edward VII so soon after his death, coupled with a very frank appraisement of the King's value as a foreign ambassador, in which capacity he was always regarded as inimitable.

Sir Sidney Lee has dared to state that his late Majesty was nothing more nor less than a charming gentleman, a bon viveur, a pleasant companion, and with a nice kingly presence that proved very useful, but beyond that he makes it very plain that King Edward VII did not deserve the fulsome eulogies that burst forth concerning him both during his life and after his death. In foreign affairs the part he played is estimated as negligible.

It is a serious thing to dispel our illusions and whether Sir Sidney Lee's estimate of his master's abilities are right or wrong, King Edward had certainly won a unique place in the heart of his subjects. It is questionable whether it was necessary to undermine his memory in this way and unless the canons of good taste are changing with changing times, it certainly seems to overstep the bounds of what we should hitherto have considered permissible. That would appear to be the view that the British nation is taking and condemnation is falling upon Sir Sidney.

STALWART MODERNS.

After having it dinned into our ears for years that our modern men were deteriorating both physically and mentally—that they were puny weaklings by comparison to old-time warriors and that the percentage of lunatics in our asylums was increasing alarmingly—it certainly does come as a happy relief to find that it is all bunkum. On irrefutable evidence, too. And we are indebted to dear old Shakespeare for this comforting enlightenment.

For with Shakespeare's tercentenary, Shakespeare balls, Shakespeare pageants, and Shakespeare exhibitions are cropping up all over the place, with the natural consequence that Shakespearean suits of armor have been much in demand—and they never fit. Not nearly large enough. Many a noble lord in England today has nearly broken a blood vessel trying to get into a Shakespearean ancestor's suit of armor.

We have always felt in our bones that we were quite as good as those old hard-drinking, hard-swearing Elizabethans, but German professors and people like that would keep assuring us to the contrary.

And doesn't it just show what a lot depends on clothes! Those old sinners have been able to maintain a reputation for physical superiority for three centuries because they were knowing enough to tog themselves out in imposing armor!

UNCLE WALT.

The Poet Philosopher.

When I was as poor as Job, and monkeyed around the globe in indolent vagrant style, my life was a joyous thing, devoid of a smart or sting, and everything seemed to smile. I hadn't a bundle then; I herded with homeless men, and padded the highway dust; and care was a thing unknown, as scarce as the silver bone, in days of the wanderlust. But now I am settled down, a prop to this growing town, respectable till it hurts; and I have a bundle fat, and I have a stovepipe hat, and all kinds of scrambled shirts. I puff at a rich cigar, and ride in a motor car, and I have a spacious lawn; and diamonds upon me shine; my credit is simply fine, the newspapers call me Hon. But Worry is always near, a-whispering in my ear—I'm tired of her morbid talks: "Suppose that the bank should bust in which you have placed your dust, how then would you feel, Old Sox? Suppose that the cyclones swat the farms you have lately bought and blow them clear off the map? Suppose that your mills should fall, and you were locked up in jail, how then would you feel, old chap?" Dame Worry is always there; she's whitened my scanty hair, she's cankered my weary breast; she never goes far away; she tortures me all the day and ruins my nightly rest. And often at night I sigh for a couch 'neath the open sky and the long white road again; for the march through the sifting dust, and the lure of the wanderlust and the camp of the homeless men. WALT MASON.

THE GIRL WHO IS MOST "ATTRACTIVE TO MEN."

BY JANIE B. JONES.

Somehow, somewhere the idea has originated and gained credence that a girl may make herself "attractive to men" by means that would not also make her attractive to women and other human varieties.

It is a misleading mistake; and many a good and otherwise sensible girl has lowered her own standard as a result of permitting herself to be influenced by it. Its implied significance as a catch phrase in familiar advertisements is absurd. It is anything but complimentary to the average girl to whom it is offered as a bait for her patronage. It is even less so to the men she could care to have for friends.

If such ideas were true the kitchen of the overly-developed Aunt Dinah would be full of artists besieging her to pose for them. But "it ain't." Aunt Dinah would oust Diana in short order and totally eclipse any little claims Venus might have as a model of feminine beauty of form. Her only really invincible rival would be the fat lady sufficiently "developed" to ornament a sideshow. The tent where the latter displayed her attractions would be the scene of many a duel among masculine admirers fighting for her smiles. But it ain't.

The time may come when the curves of Aunt Dinah and the fat lady will take the proud place of Hogarth's line of beauty in the world's great art salons. Until it does, however, it is safe to conclude that there are other and more dependable means of becoming attractive to men than by the cultivation and the rash display of such curves.

A rather striking example of the results that may follow the adoption of the advertised methods has become a familiar sight in one of our residence suburbs. A young girl still in her teens and attending school, inconspicuous among others of her age and condition, adopted the advertised methods of making herself "attractive to men."

Success attended her efforts to the full extent of the promised development. Her little immature body preceded by a matronly bosom and supported by a pair of little bow legs, all skillfully displayed by close-fitting sweater and short, scant skirt, she forges along with arms swinging a la mode, apparently proud of the attention she attracts. Everybody notices her. Strangers have been known to ask who in thunder she is. Good women who know her make a point of assuring each other that she isn't really bad—just silly thinking the men that look at her are admiring her shape.

Any day one can see these absurd young monstrosities parading the streets perfectly satisfied with themselves and the admiration they think they are receiving because people gaze at them. It would be laughable if it were not pitiful.

Girls, women, like these are the only anglers satisfied with every bite, every nibble they may get—from a tadpole to a shark. Your true fisherman knows what sort of fish he wants and prepares his bait accordingly.

It is easy enough for any girl to discover for herself what qualities are most effective in winning any sort of man's favor and admiration, friendship or love. She has only to take note of the girls that such men show a preference for.

The quality that may be always counted upon in women most attractive to men of wide choice, men whose notice, whose friendship is worth having, will be an air of refinement, of fragrant cleanliness of thought and action, of mind and body. She may or may not have a beautiful face, a beautiful form; she may or may not be intellectual or talented, but she will have the appearance of refinement, the atmosphere of purity.

A sweet, healthy, pure-minded, unaffected girl is herself the most lovable of humankind. Sometimes the most popular girl in her social set is far more noticeable for her refinement and spirituelle appearance than for her physique. How often the men who, judging by their own pleasing appearance and good position, have the widest choice among womenkind are devoted to some friend, sweetheart or wife, whose only attractions are her intelligence, her goodness, her sweetness!

Gross efforts to become "attractive to men" usually defeat themselves. In sober truth, the things that will make a girl most surely "attractive to men" will make her just as attractive to her mother and father, her sisters and brothers.

What Wilson Stands For.

[Wilkes-Barre Record:] Dr. Wilson is an uncompromising free-trade exponent, and has no use for any tariff at all. At other times, when not engaged in a Presidential campaign, he has said that the theory of protection is a colossal humbug. Now he is nominated it will be well to bear in mind what he really stands for, not what he may say in his effort to secure Republican votes. The election of Dr. Wilson would mean as near an approach as possible to free trade, taking into account the fact that some money must be raised for revenue purposes through the tariff. The election of a Democratic Congress would make this kind of tariff revision a certainty.

There is always some other woman's husband that every woman feels sorry for.

The Committee of Fifteen is not satisfied with the situation from its point of view in the Thirty-seventh Senatorial District. Earl put William E. Browne, a Christian Science reader, who is a personal friend of [illegible] into the contest, in which Elmer R. Peck, who had acted as orator for the Roosevelt League and the Good Government League, had already started his canvass. Now, Peck has the support of George Baker Anderson, W. F. Bryant and all the people that the Mayor counts as his friends, as well as a fair proportion of the men in the Committee of Fifteen, but Earl has too strong a ninety in the cimmittee to be denied. Browne is nominally the man for Lissner's factotums must work. [illegible] become a real fight. This [illegible] the advisers of both Lissner and Earl and they are now pulling every wire to get Browne and Peck out of the contest. The committee's investment has been tendered to a new man with the promise, whether authorized or not, that neither Browne nor Peck will be in his way at the primary.

Henry M. Ward, who has served one term from the territory comprised in the new Thirty-seventh District as its first Senator, has a strong following and has been given much encouragement in his canvass for signatures to his nominating petitions. Thomas K. Ford, who is chairman of the La Follette State Central Committee, his friends believe, will receive the La Follette vote in the district to a man or woman. W. T. Helms's fight has been conducted too quietly for any one else to be drawn on it, while the effect of Madison Marine's canvass will be so tangle still further the Committee of Fifteen. Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz was to have been a candidate from this district, but on ascertaining that her residence was in the Thirty-fourth Senatorial District, under the new appointment, this, of course, prevented her from being an aspirant at this election.

Ex-Speaker Stanton, who was chairman of the Taft Campaign Committee for Southern California for the primaries, has issued a letter to all members of the Taft organization in this city, drawing attention to the fact that the time for placing candidates in the field is growing short and urging the loyal Republicans in various districts to get together and place in nomination for the Legislature men of undoubted trustworthiness in the cause of Republicanism. ## POLITICAL WATCHTOWER

The Committee of Fifteen is not satisfied with the situation from its point of view in the Thirty-seventh Senatorial District. Earl put William E. Browne, a Christian Science reader, who is a personal friend of [illegible] in the contest, in which Eldridge H. Peck, who had acted as organizer for the Roosevelt League and the Good Government League, had already started his canvass. Now, [illegible] the support of George Baker [illegible] W. F. Bryant and all the [illegible] that the Mayor counts as his [illegible] as well as a fair proportion [illegible] in the Committee of Fifteen [illegible] Earl has too strong a ninety-[illegible] in the committee to be denied, [illegible] is nominally the man for [illegible] Lissner's factotums must work. [illegible] become a real fight. This [illegible] the advisers of both Lissner [illegible] and they are now pulling [illegible] were to get Browne and Peck out [illegible] contest. The committee's in- [illegible] has been tendered to a new [illegible] with the promise, whether au- [illegible] or not, that neither Browne [illegible] will be in his way at the [illegible]

[illegible] M. Ford, who has served one [illegible] from the territory comprised in the Thirty-seventh District as its [illegible] senator, has a strong following [illegible] been given much encouragement [illegible] his canvass for signatures to [illegible] nominating petitions. Thomas K. [illegible] who is chairman of the La Follette Central Committee, his friends believe, will receive the La Follette vote in the district to a man [illegible]. W. T. Helms's fight has been conducted too quietly for any [illegible] to be drawn on it, while [illegible] of Madison Marino's canvass [illegible] to tangle still further the Committee of Fifteen. Mrs. Clara Shortridge was to have been a candidate from this district, but on ascertaining that her residence was in the Thirty-fourth Senatorial District, under the new appointment, this, of course, prevented her from being an aspirant at this election.

Walter Stanton, who was chairman of the Taft Campaign Committee [illegible] California for the primary issued a letter to all members of the Taft organization in this city and state, drawing attention to the fact that the time for placing [illegible] in the field is growing short [illegible] the loyal Republicans in [illegible] districts to get together [illegible] nomination for the Legislature [illegible] of undoubted trustworthiness [illegible] cause of Republicanism. [illegible] machinery of the Republican party in this State is in the hands of Gov. Johnson and his adherents," he says in the letter. "They have publicly announced that it is their intention so to manipulate affairs that electors be selected who would favor Mr. Roosevelt for President instead of Mr. Taft. While the latter is the regular Republican nominee, nevertheless this attempt will be made deliberately to usurp the party machinery in the interests of the bolting candidate."

There is no Committee of Fifteen among the loyal Republicans of any county in California to handpick candidates and it is up to the men who are supporting the candidacy of President Taft to meet among themselves and place candidates of their own selection in the fight. Stanton yesterday said the Taft committee would not undertake, of course, to name men in the districts to run for the Legislature—that that was something for the voters of the districts to do, themselves. "However, there will be candidates in all the districts of the State," he said. "We have a strong chance to win in many of the districts. The situation is very different now from that which we faced last May. Taft candidates are almost certain of winning the nomination in most of the Los Angeles districts, and a nomination is certain to mean election."

---

The hopes of the Roosevelt third-party people that they would have the support of many Democrats have gone glimmering. The men on whom they relied are already out working for Woodrow Wilson and are hoping to carry California for him. They have not the remotest idea of leaving the Democratic party at a time when its chances of victory are greater, in their opinion, than they have been since the election of Cleveland.

The City Hall Democrats, for example, the men who are allied with the Good Government League, are all outspoken in their professions of faith and are for Wilson to the last man. As Charles Wellborn stated in the short interview in this column yesterday, they are going to invade the districts and hope to repeat the experiences of 1892, when California elected a Democratic Assembly, with several Democrats from this very county. Wellborn, it may be pointed out, is a Good Government man, was named by Alexander as Police Commissioner and is now a member of the Public Service Board. Lorin Handley, City Clerk, is another man who is out and out for Wilson.

THE WATCHMAN.

BIENNIAL METAPHORS.

BY MYRA NYE.

Back again from the Biennial! Welcome! And doesn't this old house-world look bright and shiny and clean after the thorough housecleaning it has had, especially the sitting-room, America, and its grand bay-window, California? We've taken the rugs of legislation and shaken them well, we varnished the seats of justice, veneered the wood-work of industry. Oh, the Biennial worked splendidly! It was the vacuum cleaner which, from its own point of view, took out all the grime and dust from this workaday world. For two years now we will need only the dustless and ceaseless mop of clubdom to keep things going.

Best of all, in the bay-window, hang the new curtains of suffrage. Don't tell me they obscure the vision. They soften the glare of evil and if you are a connoisseur of curtains, you will observe that they are of the colonial pattern of patriotism, the white background of purity of purpose is woven with the blue of loyalty. Moreover, the curtains prove the eternal feminine of suffrage after all; and they go to make the old sitting-room a mighty good place to be and abide.

Angelenos, and maybe Californians, were obsessed with the fear up there in San Francisco that now the men have given us the curtains, Mrs. Edson would vote against hanging them. She is so luke warm on the subject, you know. The courtesy-to-guest proposition might cause her to lay the curtains in the closet on the shelf, you think? Not she! Here's to Mrs. Edson and her valiant fight!

Speaking about courtesy, and that was the big stumbling-stone up there in Corinthian Hall, you remember that day that California met, all others excluded; what is it in a closet we don't talk about? Not curtains, but the skeleton. Now suffrage is much used, and no doubt abused, but it is by no means worn so thin as a skeleton. Why, it is our latest-born, our baby, a lovely, laughing, happy, healthy boy whom we mean to rear to maturity. And whoever could keep quiet about a baby even to a guest, and what sort of a guest would it be who would not care to see the scion of the house crow and grow?

As to bravery versus courtesy: dear Mrs. Brainerd, than whom there is no one who knows better the courtesies of life, ventured to make all of her toast suffrage, at Mrs. Helmuth's sumptuously princessly (that is more apropos if not so correct as princely.) It was the wheat and the yeast; it was browned to the right turn and even the butter was still. suffrage. I liked it immensely and was proud, too, of Mrs. Graham, the other Los Angeles woman who plucked a flower from Mrs. Helmuth's figurative bouquet of toast subjects. Her rich contralto speaking voice made a body (I saw one or two of Mrs. Carpenter's manuscripts at the Biennial and she always scratched out the elegant "one" and substituted "a body" so I do now)—made a body wonder if it is not by her song she might charm, as well as by her pen, which means typewriter.

Another Metaphor.

Said Mars to the moon last night, "What makes the world look so bright? It is swinging in its orbit with a prouder swoop than ever."

"I don't know; ask Saturn," answered the moon, who is in the dark on all questions now.

Said Saturn to the world, "Why—" but before the rising inflection could traverse the billions of miles, more or less, the world called out:

"Good morning, have you used Biennial soap?"

But Saturn, like a dirty boy, ran his course and would not be clean.

"Sour grapes, you couldn't reach it if you wanted it," and the world almost sneered, but the world is not a cynic. A cynic knows the price of everything and the value of nothing. The world knows very well the value of the saponaceous Biennial cake in his hand as he solaced himself by saying:

"Perhaps it is just as well I didn't give him any. It might not last two years; and then what?"

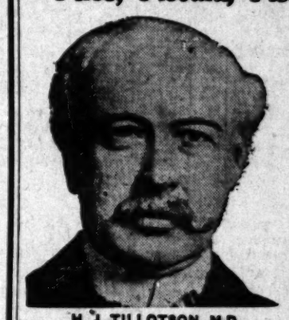
Piles, Fistula, Fissures and Hernia



H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
[Established 21 Years.]

I publish my photograph, personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. I possess skill and experience acquired in such a way that no other can share. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment should be valued.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such cases. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

Most Time Saving, Most Natural, Most Safe. No Detention from Occupation, Family or Home. A Radical and Permanent Cure.

I invite you to come to my office. I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases.

Piles, Fistula, Rectal Diseases.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful, and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and successes are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases. I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

Trusses Seldom Cure Rupture.

Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced in connection with the alleged cure of rupture. I say positively that I cure Rupture, to stay cured. I cure with perfect safety, and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's written guaranty means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Fistula or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

Public Service: City Hall, Courts.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

Chief Engineer Mulholland announced yesterday that only nineteen miles of the aqueduct remains to be constructed, but that because of difficulties of construction in the Alabama Hills the water will not flow through the full course until about March 1.

The Postal company has applied for a franchise for a conduit and pole system through certain streets, and the Board of Public Utilities yesterday considered an ordinance granting this franchise on a twenty-one-year limit.

Proponents of the Beacon-street route at the harbor yesterday announced that they have secured waivers of damage for all but two pieces of property along the proposed cut from Seventh to Tenth streets and that instead of being held up for $90,000, as had been estimated by the Harbor Commissioners, they had secured these waivers for only $5800.

ONLY NINETEEN MILES TO BUILD.

AQUEDUCT WATER HERE BY THE FIRST OF MARCH.

Chief Engineer Mulholland Reports that Slight Extension of Time for Completion of Work Will Be Necessary Because of Character of Alabama Hills Cuts.

Owens River water to flow through the Los Angeles Aqueduct along its entire course of more than 200 miles on March 1.—this is the last word on the city's great enterprise that has attracted the attention of leading engineers throughout the entire United States. The announcement was made by Chief Engineer Mulholland yesterday.

There remains to be constructed only 18.99 miles. Heretofore, it has been estimated that the aqueduct would be completed by January 1, next, but the chief engineer stated yesterday that because of a condition that has confronted the workers in the Alabama Hills, near Lone Pine, the work of cutting through this district will take longer than estimated.

Between shovel 10 and dredge 4 there has been struck a series of strata of shifting gravel which makes progress slow; but the work is forging ahead in spite of these difficulties and this section will be completed in February. There remains 30.2 miles of lining to be constructed, and other phases of the work are all progressing well.

With the Board of Public Works just on the point of awarding the contract for 1,300,000 pounds of copper wire for the 200-mile transmission lines of the aqueduct power project, and other steps having been put well under way for this enterprise, the city is now in a position to see the speedy completion of two of the greatest projects ever undertaken by any western municipality.

SEEKS FRANCHISE.

WOULD BUILD CONDUIT.

The Postal Telegraph Cable Company has applied for a franchise to construct and maintain a conduit and a pole-and-line system through certain streets of the city for the transaction of its business, and yesterday the Board of Public Utilities had under consideration a proposed ordinance granting this franchise. The draft of the ordinance submitted by the company for the consideration of this board was not satisfactory, and the one now prepared is to be discussed with the company's representatives before it is finally submitted to the City Council, so that it is likely it will not go before the granting body until Tuesday of next week.

The proposed ordinance provides for the construction of a conduit on Spring street, First to Main, Main to Commercial, thence to Los Angeles street, thence to Alameda street, and onto Macy street, where it is to connect with a pole and line system on Macy, Brooklyn avenue, Echandia, Evergreen avenue and other streets, to the easterly city limits. It is proposed to make this a twenty-one-year franchise.

While the Postal company claims the right to enter the city and operate under the provisions of a national law adopted in 1866, it is inclined to comply with the provisions of the city in regard to franchises, and therefore has made this application.

It is understood this application in no way affects the question that has been raised as to the rights of telegraph companies to rent space in the conduits of the telephone companies without payment to the city of any franchise fees therefor. This is a question that the Board of Public Utilities has referred to the City Attorney.

No Commission in Sight.

Mayor Alexander stated yesterday that he would be unable to present to the City Council at its regular meeting on Tuesday appointees for the Harbor Commission, and admitted that he had but little idea as to how soon he would be able to announce his appointments.

"If I were in a position where I could offer salaries of $300 a month, I could fill this commission with first-class men within twenty-four hours," said the Mayor, yesterday.

"The charter expressly provides that this commission shall serve without pay, but various capable men whom I have approached in regard to taking places on this board have declined because they could not afford to sacrifice the time from their business. While this board is simply advisory when it comes to matters of construction, it does have other wide powers of control over harbor matters, and the services of such men as should be on the commission should be paid for."

The Mayor is still undecided as to whom he will name as the head of the Bureau of Fire Alarm and Police Telegraph the Council having turned down his previous appointment and there having been no agreement reached as to any other name to be presented.

Beacon Street Now Ahead.

Comes now the Beacon-stret route for the proposed highway to the waterfront at the harbor with the claim that it is in the lead for consideration by the commissions and the City Council. The proponents of this route have filed with the City Attorney for verification as to their legal form waivers of damage for the entire Beacon-street frontage from Seventh to Tenth streets, with the exception of two pieces of property, this being only 100 feet. They state they are reasonably sure of being able to present waivers of damage for this frontage, also. As the City Engineer's estimate on the cost of the construction on the Pacific-avenue route was $58,000, while that for the Beacon-street route was $28,000, the proponents of the latter route feel that they have the best of the situation. When the Mayor, Council and commissioners met in San Pedro recently to inspect the two routes, the statement was made that the Beacon-street waivers of damages could not be secured for less than $90,000, but as a matter of fact all the waivers on this route were secured, except the two mentioned, that are still in abeyance for only $5800. The City Attorney is to report to the Council next Tuesday upon the validity of the waivers for both routes.

Progress at Harbor.

Information was received at the office of the Harbor Commission yesterday that the Standard American Dredging Company has completed the wall across the north end of the east channel at San Pedro and about 800 feet along the west side of the Huntington Fill. Riprapping is progressing with the use of about twelve cars or 360 tons of rock per day. This rock comes from quarries near Riverside and it is in sections of from 100 pounds to a ton in weight. About 1200 feet of this riprapping has been completed and now arises to the high-tide point. Last night the company put a night crew on the work and hereafter it will handle from twenty-two to twenty-five cars of rock every twenty-four hours.

Twenty-four-hour Limit.

The Board of Public Utilities yesterday recommended to the City Council for adoption an ordinance providing that there shall be no temporary or permanent discontinuance of public utilities service of any sort, except those pertaining to the Los Angeles water front and under the control of the Harbor Commission, without application having first been made to the Board of Public Utilities and permission therefor having been granted. Exception is made in the case of unavoidable accidents or emergencies, but in such cases the operator of the utility affected must make a written report of the case and cause to the board within twenty-four hours. The maximum penalty for each offense is placed at $500 fine and six months imprisonment or both fine and imprisonment. This ordinance is particularly desired by the Board of Public Utilities for the purpose of compelling certain water companies to give regular service, frequent complaints having been received of the shutting off of water at irregular intervals, sometimes for hours at a time, without the consumers having received the proper notice.

To Protect Bridges.

The Board of Public Works has had placed in the Los Angeles River bed a series of signposts showing the territory within which no excavations can be made or from which there can be removed no sand or gravel. The limit is within 100 feet of levees and 250 feet of bridges. This is done to protect these structures. As there has been a constant tendency to encroach on these lines, the signs have been placed as an adequate warning, and a patrolman, with the use of a horse and buggy, has been provided to see that the ordinance in this regard shall be rigidly enforced.

Retarding Street Work.

The Barber Asphalt Company yesterday protested to the Board of Public Works that the paving of Prichard street is being retarded by the failure of the utilities companies to remove their poles to the space back of the curb line. For this reason slow progress has been made in the paving, and the companies will be required to immediately remove their poles.

BUYING FINERY NEW CRUELTY.

UNUSUAL CHARGES IN QUEER DIVORCE SUIT.

Young Wife Objects to Ways of Husband, Said to Be Descended from German Nobility—Comings and Goings Restricted, Reading Censored, She Alleges.

The Von Neindorff divorce suit involving unusual charges will be called for trial in Department Six Tuesday morning. The defendant is Paul von Neindorff, commission broker, and understood to be a direct descendant of German nobility.

That Von Neindorff told his wife he was going to burn a barn which obstructed the view from his beautiful home on Edgecliff drive in Hollywood, and the barn subsequently went up in smoke, is one of the allegations of cruelty made by his wife. Attorneys William A. Freeman and Richard J. Culver, in answer filed for the husband, aver that Von Neindorff had nothing to do with the barn being burned, and that he never told his wife he intended to destory it.

Mrs. von Neindorff alleges another manner in which the defendant was cruel was in the purchase of all of her clothes. She charges he thought he had better taste than she for finery.

Von Neindorff admits having made many purchases of things which should be dear to the feminine heart, but asserts he did not restrain his wife from buying other clothing.

Whether it is cruel for a husband to misrepresent his age to his bride is a point to be determined in this suit. Mrs. von Neindorff says that when they were married in Riverside six years ago she was 17 years old and her spouse said he was 22. She charges now that he was 42 years old.

Among the other grounds urged for the separation are that Von Neindorff refused to permit his wife to read anything except articles he selected for her, and he would not permit her to leave home except with his permission. Von Neindorff denies the charges.

The case has attracted much attention in Hollywood, where the couple are well known, having taken a prominent part in social affairs there. Mrs. von Neindorff was extensively entertained previous to an extended tour abroad recently. She is represented in the suit by Attorney Bernard Potter.

ALLEGES CONSPIRACY.

STOCKHOLDER BRINGS SUIT.

In a suit to quiet title filed by George Schoenberger yesterday, he asks the court to appoint a receiver for the California Business Block Company, growing out of a transaction which he alleges in behalf of himself and other minority stockholders was a fraudulent intent to deliver property.

The complaint asserts that J. M. and Mary Sewell, his wife and H. C. Marsh, acting as the board of directors of the company, adopted a resolution to borrow $2500 from Ann E. Sewell, the mother of J. M. Sewell A trust deed was executed on property at Long Beach valued at $50,000 and a promissory note was given. Interest was defaulted August 23, last. It is alleged, and the proptrey was sold September 25, Ann E. Sewell buying it for $2910.

Shoenberger alleges the resolution was the result of a fraudulent connivance and conspiracy, and asks for the return of the property or its value and $1400 rental value. The suit is against the Sewells and Marsh individually and as trustees for the company.

BEFORE THE COURT.

HANDSOME WOMAN CHARGED.

Josephine Otis, alias Josephine Sorenson, and Howard Rudes, will plead tomorrow in Judge Wilbur's court to a charge of having contributed to the dependency of Mamie Long, aged 17 years. They appeared in court yesterday with their alleged victim, and Attorney Smith was assigned to defend them.

The complaint charges that Mrs Otis took Mamie to her house and induced her to smoke cigarettes, drink liquor and introduced her to Rudes. Mrs. Otis alleges she met Mamie in a motion picture theater and denies the charges.

Rudes has expressed a willingness to marry Mamie it was stated in court yesterday. Meantime, the court is investigating the Otis woman and it will depend on the result of this investigation what the outcome of the case will be. She is young and handsome.

WATER SUIT.

SUPPLY IS THREATENED.

Arthur G. Gage applied yesterday for a temporary injunction to be made permanent after a hearing, restraining the San Antonio Irrigating Company from carrying out its alleged threat to shut off the water supply used to irrigate 31.13 acres on the Gage Ranch in the Rancho San Antonio.

Gage and twenty co-tenants constructed on February 8, last, a twenty-inch cement pipe to protect an orange orchard at a cost of $2500.

The complaint alleges that last June the company, without authority, destroyed the water gate and caused the Foster ditch to overflow, sapping the earth. The damage is placed at $1000.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

DISSOLUTION. The Alhambra Addition Water Company filed a petition for dissolution yesterday. This action was determined at a meeting of the stockholders held June 27, when more than two-thirds of the capital stock was represented. The company was incorporated December 20, 1883, the board of directors being H. E. Huntington, O. V. Showers, W. E. Dunn, A. G. Walker and G. C. Ward. In 1908 it was sold to the San Gabriel Valley Water Company.

WANTS MONEY BACK. Representation alleged to have been false was the fighting point in the suit of Jens Jensen against the Peerless Brick and Artificial Stone Company and C. A. Conlin, heard by Judge Craig yesterday. Jensen alleged he was induced by Conlin as manager and agent of the company to buy 100 shares of the capital stock, paying $500. The company has a secret process for the manufacture of water-proof cement brick and artificial stone. Jensen asks for a recision of the contract and seeks to recover the purchase price.

HIS BUSY DAY. A busy day has been mapped out for Judge Conley of Madera county, who will sit in Extra Sessions One on Tuesday. Judge Seawell yesterday continued until that date the suits of M. F. Brady and others against M. M. Davis, and Sarah Kirvin against the Title Insurance and Trust Company and others. A motion for a new trial will be argued in each case. A divorce suit which Judge Conley heard some time ago also comes before him for final action.

SUIT COMPROMISED. A $10,000 damage suit for personal injuries was compromised for $925 in Judge Willis's court yesterday. The suit was brought by Clyde Rarick by his guardian, William Krowl, against the Washington Iron Works. Rarick was an employee of the company and alleged that through the negligence of George Rater and Jake Daper, an assistant, molten metal was spilled from a ladle. It spattered on the floor and a particle struck the lad in the right eye, injuring the sight.

SEEKS GUARDIANSHIP. Owing to old age and sickness and the further fact that money and drafts aggregating $2000 are carried around in his pockets, Mrs. Lulu K. Wiley petitioned the Probate Court yesterday to be appointed guardian of her husband, Warner E. Wiley. The latter, now at the home of Mrs. Minnie Winget, No. 121 South Manhattan place, is nearly 80. He was a volunteer in the Civil War and draws a $30 pension.

COURT SAYS NAY. Fault found with the alterations and repairs made to her property at No. 121 South Chicago street by Contractor W. E. Trimlett resulted in Trimlett bringing suit against Mrs. Sarah H. De Coursey for the balance of the bill, $422.35, before Judge Dehy yesterday. Attorney Pendell sought to show by Mrs. De Coursey that the irregularity in the flooring made her seasick when she walked across it, but an objection from Attorney Burnell was sustained by the court, and this unique experience was not given.

SMALL DAMAGES. Buell Bagwell, a boy, was awarded $500 by a jury in Judge Houser's court yesterday against the Pacific Electric for injuries he sustained when a car struck the wagon in which he was seated October 6 last. Buell asked $10,000. The testimony showed that the boy was seated on the bottom of the wagon and that the shock of the collision threw his father, who was driving, through the front of the car but without serious injury.

UNWILLING ACCOMPLICE. The remarkable plea of Edward Pardick that he had been compelled by Frank W. Smith, who held a gun at his breast, to hold up and rob G. W. Wilson on June 2 last, was confirmed by Smith, who pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced by Judge Cabaniss yesterday to serve twelve years in San Quentin. Smith said he forced Pardick to assist him in the robbery. Pardick pleaded not guilty and will stand trial. The net result of the crime was 50 cents.

WINDS UP AFFAIRS. The Los Angeles Railway Land Company filed a petition yesterday for the dissolution of the corporation. It was incorporated July 29, 1909. All claims and demands have been met, and at a meeting of the stockholders June 27 last, a resolution of dissolution was passed. The capital stock represented 500 shares. The directors were H. E. Huntington, W. E. Dunn, G. J. Kuhrts, G. C. Ward and A. G. Walker.

EXCHANGE COURTESY. Judge Willis will go to Ventura tomorrow and on Tuesday and Wednesday he will be in Santa Barbara to reciprocate the courtesy of the judges of those courts who have helped out in the Superior Court in this county.

INCORPORATIONS. Crown City Realty and Furniture Company, incorporators, E. R. Loud, M. D. Roth and H. A. Jones; capital stock, $10,000; subscribed, $3333.

IN THE INFERIOR COURTS.

Principal Witness for Defense Instrumental in Securing Conviction of Man on Vagrancy Charge.

R. J. Ross must pass the next three months in the City Jail, and may or may not obtain comfort from the reflection that his own principal witness was instrumental in securing his conviction.

Plainclothesman Wedge told Police Judge Frederickson yesterday he thought the man and his witnesses would convict Ross.

A. Jones, proprietor of a roominghouse, was Ross's principal witness. He admitted Ross had "stung" him for $6 on a realty deal.

The sale of lots for a land company which was forced to suspend operations by the police, was the most recent business engaged in by Ross, according to the plainclothesmen who arrested him.

This Hug Costs Time.

Fifteen days in the City Jail was the sentence meted out by Police Judge Frederickson to S. Ramsay yesterday for having accosted a woman on the street.

Patrolman Bomar testified Ramsey grabbed a woman on an East First-street car. When she alighted at First street and Santa Fe avenue, Ramsey jumped off and chased her to the curbing and threw his arms around her.

"I was drunk and don't remember anything about it," was Ramsay's only comment.

A Practical Demonstration.

"How did this defendant steal the pin?" asked Police Judge Frederickson of Patrolman Pautz yesterday when Jose Reyes was charged with having stolen a cheap pin from Albert Corea in a Plaza saloon.

"This way," replied Pautz as he grabbed the defendant. Throwing one arm around Reyes's neck, he made a motion as though taking a pin from his neck and dropped his hand into his pocket.

"No so rough," cautioned the court. Reyes was sent to jail for 180 days.

Battledore and Shuttlecock.

Like a game of battledore and shuttlecock, Mrs. Georgia Scott was taken from one courtroom to the other at the Central Station yesterday morning before a suspended sentence of $30 or thirty days was imposed by Judge Chambers, and was placed under bond by Judge Frederickson for her appearance before him in August on another vagrancy charge.

Mrs. Scott was arrested Friday night by members of the Metropolitan Squad with three other women at No. 321 Temple street, and charged with vagrancy. Several months ago she was arrested on a similar charge, but given a suspended sentence because she has two children dependent on her. Judge Chambers adjourned his court, to sentence the woman in Judge Rose's court.

Oriental Rug Lore

There is a curious and compelling fascination about the study of the rugs which come from the far East, that grips one's imagination and opens up a new angle of thought and gives a glimpse into the history of a people who have not kept pace with modern ideals.

We buy our rugs as your connoisseur buys his pictures, each for individual merit—beauty of design, and richness of coloring.

Oriental rugs are not bought by us in bales, sight unseen, hit or miss—and we would not expect you to buy them in any such haphazard style.

Come and enjoy an hour among these masterpieces and let us give you an idea of our "ideas" in rug buying.

Prices are based on the merit of each piece—and sentimental values are not considered—but we shall not urge you to buy. Will you look upon this as an informal invitation to come rather, and look?

One of our windows this week will present an interesting display of Oriental rugs.

LATIN UNION'S ON THE TAPIS.

Banding Together Against "Colossus of North."

Thirty Millions to Link All Operating Railroads.

Control of Fruit Trade Is Also Proposed.

Looking forward to the time when the Latin states south of the Rio Grande expect to be called on to resist the commercial and perhaps political encroachments of the "Colossus of the North," steps have already been taken to realize the dream of a powerful Latin-American union, equipped with men and money sufficient to check any movement covering designs against the sovereignty of the weaker nations.

Such is the information contained in dispatches from the capitals of Central America, announcing the consolidation of all railroads on the west coast with a view to controlling a fair share of the trade that is expected to materialize with the opening of the Panama Canal, and at the same time to prevent American financiers from obtaining too large an interest in the immensely valuable properties under exploitation.

Among the roads that have been merged under the guiding hands of Dunn, Fisher & Co. of London, are enumerated the well-known Pan-American properties, the Ferrocarril de Ocos, the Guatemala Railroad and the Salvadorean lines.

The holding company that will manage these lines in the interest of the countries themselves will be known as the "Ferrocarriles Internacionales de Centro America," and bonds aggregating $30,000,000, gold, have been authorized to build the connecting lines that will link together the roads already in operation.

Behind the plan, according to dispatches from Mexico, is the powerful Hamburg-American Steamship Company, which expects to control the fruit trade in connection with the United Fruit Company, which maintains a fleet of fruit steamers plying up and down the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico.

COAST TO COAST SPAN.

As a result of the merger, the new corporation will possess lines from Port Barrios on the Caribbean through the city of Guatemala, to the ports of Champerico and San Jose on the Pacific. At the same time connections will be made with the line from Ocos to Vado Ancho and the cities of La Union, San Miguel and Usulutan in Salvador, which will monopolize the growing fruit traffic and force exportations from the lower Mexican ports, connecting with the Pan-American line.

That this arrangement will affect American interests now in control of the trade, is admitted by the Spanish speaking statesmen familiar with the deal, and the struggle for supremacy is not expected to be confined to purely commercial competition.

For several months agitators in Mexico, Central and South America have been preaching the gospel of resistance and plans have quietly been made to form an alliance between Spanish-speaking countries, for the purpose of war, if their interests are menaced.

Candidates of the progressive parties in the countries named have been sworn to oppose intervention, and even undue commercial influence as represented by American investors will be openly fought, if the present plans are carried out.

The recent visit of Secretary Knox with a view to harmonizing conflicting interests is interpreted by many of the Spanish-speaking countries as a forerunner of American expansion, to be followed by the gradual "benevolent assimilation" of the countries themselves.

With each country depending on its own resources to check this supposed tendency, the process of absorption would be made comparatively simple, but with the combined forces of all Latin-American states facing the expected invaders, the work of subjugation would be somewhat impeded, the statesmen declare.

AFTER CANAL—WAR?

That grim war will follow the opening of the canal is declared certain by many Pan-American thinkers and the scheme to circumvent trouble by being prepared for it, has been made a popular theme in that part of the world.

According to information received from the capital of Mexico, both Brazil and Argentine have been invited to aid in the movement, and the immense budget recently adopted by the Argentine Congress providing for the building of a great navy is taken to mean that the dream of a Latin Union will soon be realized.

For the purpose of giving impetus to the movement, King Alfonso and Queen Victoria have been invited to visit the Western Hemisphere during the coming winter season and it is reported that their Majesties have accepted the invitation.

Meanwhile, the general trade of these states gradually is falling into the clutches of the French and Germans, who were quick to see the possibilities of the future when the work of digging the canal shall have been completed. That the natives are giving aid and comfort to the Europeans in filching the trade from its natural business channel is openly admitted in the halls of the Latin-American Congresses and the question frequently is asked: What are the Americans going to do about it?

SEVEN DAYS WITHOUT REST.

Charge of Violation of State Labor Law Is Made Against Superintendent of Nurses of Hospital.

Miss A. C. Janne, superintendent of nurses at the Columbia Hospital, was made the defendant in a complaint sworn to yesterday by William Tell, charging her with violation of the State labor law by working Miss Evelyn Bogert seven days without a day off.

The case will probably be called in the Police Court tomorrow. Tell is an inspector of the State Bureau of Labor Statistics. Miss Bogert was employed in one of the ward kitchens. She resigned her position yesterday.

"I did not know we were violating the law," said Miss Janne yesterday. "We did not know that law applied to hospitals. The matter has been placed in the hands of our attorney.

"It is true Miss Bogert did not have a whole day off. We give our maids a half day off once a week. They are on duty ten hours a day, but do not work all that time, because we give them several hours off during the course of the day."

FIRST WOMAN PILOT HERE.

NAVIGATED A BOAT IN DEEP-WATER CONGRESS FLEET.

She Is Now Qualifying as Doctor of Osteopathy, but Still Licensed to Guide Vessels on Inland Waters of United States.—Member of National Geographic Society.

Los Angeles has been entertaining for some time the first woman in the United States to receive a pilot's license, qualifying her to operate steam and motor craft on the rivers of the United States.

Mrs. Ida I. Ballard has that distinction, and, further, she was one of the pilots chosen to take President Taft and other members of the Deep Water Congress down the Mississippi River, about three years ago, and ran one of the boats from St. Louis to New Orleans and back.

She is a pilot still, having had her license renewed at San Francisco last year, under the law requiring its renewal every five years to prevent its lapsing. When she applied at the San Francisco office, it was so much of a novelty that the officials were at first nonplussed, but promptly issued her renewal certificate.

Mrs. Ballard is an exceedingly bright woman of middle age and is at present a student at the Los Angeles College of Osteopathy, from which institution she will graduate next year. She is also a member of the National Geographic Society, having been honored in recognition of her services in collecting Indian curios on her river trips. Explaining how she happened to become a pilot on the Mississippi, about twelve years ago, she said:

"My husband owns a fleet of boats on the Mississippi, and one night we were very anxious to get out of port but could not secure a pilot. We telephoned to the office and I was told that I had better take the boat out myself and call at the office the next day and secure a license. I had been on the river a great deal and knew all about navigating a boat, so I took it out and the next day took my examination and got a license. I have made many trips up and down the river and never met with an accident. The most exciting experiences I ever had was to be caught on the river in a couple of cyclones, but brought my boat safely through, once being the only person who remained on deck.

"When the fleet of twelve boats was made up to take the Presidential party to New Orleans, I was selected to pilot the boat that carried the ladies. I saw a great deal of President Taft during the trip, but, of course, he did not travel on my boat."

Since she has been in Los Angeles Mrs. Ballard has been active in the affairs of the Epworth Methodist Church, of which Rev. George E. Foster is pastor, and she has entertained the audiences at different times with the story of her experiences on the Mississippi.

Physicians Endorse Puritas

Any doctor will tell you that through the impurities found in ordinary drinking water, most of the diseases of the alimentary tract begin.

And the highest medical authorities—men who have made it a life work to study into the matter of foods and drinks in their relation to health—agree that distilled water is the only pure drinking water.

It becomes a question, then, with the intelligent person to find a distilled water which is uniformly pure—a water that has been carefully distilled, and that is delivered in such form that its purity remains intact.

In Los Angeles PURITAS Distilled Water alone satisfactorily answers this question. It is thoroughly distilled, scientifically aerated with pure ozone, and bottled in clean glass demijohns of five-gallon capacity, mounted on tilters for easy using.

The fact that over two hundred physicians and nurses in Los Angeles use and recommend PURITAS Distilled Water should sufficiently commend it to you.

PURITAS is inexpensive—five gallons, delivered anywhere within the old city boundary lines, cost but 40 cents—to outside points a trifle more.

Dealers throughout Southern California handle PURITAS for the benefit of you who may not live in Los Angeles. If you cannot find a dealer in your vicinity, a telephone or written request to us will bring you a prompt supply. Los Angeles Ice and Cold Storage Company. Home 10053, Sunset Main 819.

NINE THOUSAND DAILY F

THE general delivery department of the Los Angeles postoffice is now the largest in the world.

Nine thousand persons call each day at the nine windows in the classic Federal building. They run the gamut from the love-sick maiden receiving clandestine correspondence, to the safe and sane tourist, who is not sure of his address for any length of time.

This number does not include those who call for mail in the lock boxes, which give an even greater assurance of secrecy and privacy than the general delivery windows.

In this lock box department are 2000 boxes, and 50,000 pieces of first and second-class mail matter are handled each day. Over 5000 persons call here daily.

The wonderful system that has been evolved to handle this vast amount of mail resembles to the outsider nothing more than a Chinese puzzle. To the initiated it is like a smooth-running machine, the myriad parts of which interlock perfectly and show at any hour of the day or night exactly where any certain piece of mail matter is located and why it is there.

The vast tourist and transient population that flows through Los Angeles winter and summer is the direct cause of the vast growth of this department.

Their names do not appear in the city directory and they seldom have a permanent address, or at least, do so know what their correct address will be when they leave their home cities. It comes natural to them to have their mail addressed to general delivery.

TOO MANY NAMES.

While it is the tourist who forms the basis of the great volume of business in this department, there has sprung up, as in all large cities, a class of people who use the general delivery for clandestine correspondence. It lends itself wonderfully to secrecy. It is possible and actually occurs hundreds of times that the same person will be receiving mail under three or four different names. This is contrary to the postal laws and when positively known is stopped.

Detective agencies have found a use for the general delivery window and the lockbox system that is invaluable to them. It is shown that an agency having an operative in a small town investigating some happening would immediately direct suspicion to himself should he send mail addressed to the agency. So he uses the lock system. A name is also added to give an air of regular business correspondence, so it is often the case that an agency will have from one to half a dozen lock boxes at the postoffice, each under a different name.

Another of the uses of the lock box is the ordering of material or supplies in a rush from local commission merchants. The dealer keeps tab on his lock box each hour of the day and saves many hours' wait by going himself for his mail instead of waiting for delivery by carrier. Business concerns which find a use for the lock boxes give an air of solid respectability to those who call for mail from the boxes, and it is under this cloak that a great clandestine correspondence has sprung up which the postal laws do not reach, and which seems safe from molestation.

THEY KEEP HOURS.

Certain hours seem to be observed by the different classes who call for mail at the general delivery windows. The morning from 9 to 11 o'clock is the time when the well-dressed young women and some who are not so young call. They slip unobtrusively into the big corridors leading by the general delivery windows and furtively step up and ask for their mail.

Yesterday morning an electric coupe drove up to the rear of the Federal building and a young lady perfectly gowned slipped out and walked around to the front. Her clothes showed her station in life. She stood in the corridor for a moment, then stepped up to the A-to-C window and asked for mail. She did not receive any and looked disappointed. Then she hurried down the row to the H-to-K window, where she again asked for mail, of course, using a different name. At this window she received a letter, and hastily thrusting it into her handbag, continued to the last window and again asked for mail, giving a third name. Then hastily slipping out of the building she re-entered her coupe and vanished.

It is possible that the young lady was calling for the mail of two other persons in addition to her own, but the clerks at the postoffice could never be convinced that she was not conducting three clandestine correspondences, each under a fictitious name.

When an instance like this is officially reported, the postoffice authorities summon the young lady to their office upon her next appearance and she is asked to identify herself under any one of the names she has used, and then informed that no mail addressed to any of the other names will be delivered to her. But few men of this have arisen for the reason that the rush is so great and the clerks so busy that it is almost impossible to detect the multi-named young women.

The morning hours are replete with such occurrences. Then there is the girl who, perhaps, has been forbidden to correspond with a certain young man. The natural result is the use of the general delivery window to conduct an exchange of letters.

PATHETIC SIDE.

There are many pathetic scenes at these windows. Men and women who have fallen low in this world's goods and who are feverishly awaiting a letter from some friend which will again put them on their feet, call morning after morning and more often than not disappointment awaits them. Then there comes a morning when they do not call, and the clerks wonder among themselves how the riddle has been answered. Sometimes the answer is tragic and furnishes a case for the Coroner.

And Some of Them Use More Than One Name at the Los Angeles Postoffice General Delivery Department, the Largest in the World—Seen on the Outside and Inside of Grating.

In this lock box department are 3000 boxes, and 50,000 pieces of first and second-class mail matter are handled each day. Over 5000 persons call here daily.

The wonderful system that has been evolved to handle this vast amount of mail resembles to the outsider nothing more than a Chinese puzzle. To the initiated it is like a smooth-running machine, the myriad parts of which interlock perfectly and show at any hour of the day or night exactly where any certain piece of mail matter is located and why it is there.

The vast tourist and transient population that flows through Los Angeles winter and summer is the direct cause of the vast growth of this department.

Their names do not appear in the city directory and they seldom have a permanent address, or at least, do not know what their correct address will be when they leave their home cities. It comes natural to them to have their mail addressed to general delivery.

TOO MANY NAMES.

While it is the tourist who forms the basis of the great volume of business in this department, there has sprung up, as in all large cities, a class of people who use the general delivery for clandestine correspondence. It lends itself wonderfully to secrecy. It is possible and actually occurs hundreds of times that the same person will be receiving mail under three or four different names. This is contrary to the postal laws and when positively known is stopped.

Detective agencies have found a use for the general delivery window and the lockbox system that is invaluable to them. It is shown that an agency having an operative in a small town investigating some happening would immediately direct inquiries to himself should be send mail addressed to the agency. So to use the lock system. A name is also added to give an air of regular business correspondence, so it is often the case that an agency will have from one to half a dozen lock boxes at the postoffice, each under a different name.

Another of the uses of the lock box is the ordering of material or supplies in a rush from local commission merchants. The dealer keeps tab on his lock box each hour of the day and saves many hours' wait by going himself for his mail instead of waiting for delivery by carrier. Business concerns which find a use for the lock boxes give an air of solid respectability to those who call for mail from the boxes, and it is under this cloak that a great clandestine correspondence has sprung up which the postal laws do not reach, and which seems safe from molestation.

THEY KEEP HOURS.

Certain hours seem to be observed by the different classes who call for mail at the general delivery windows. The morning from 9 to 11 o'clock is the time when the well-dressed young women and some who are not so young call. They slip unobservedly into the big corridors leading by the general delivery windows and furtively step up and ask for their mail.

Yesterday morning an electric coupe drove up to the rear of the Federal building and a young lady perfectly gowned slipped out and walked around to the front. Her clothes showed her station in life. She stood in the corridor for a moment, then stepped up to the A-to-C window and asked for mail. She did not receive any and looked disappointed. Then she hurried down the row to the H-to-K window, where she again asked for mail, of course, using a different name. At this window she received a letter, and hastily thrusting it into her bag, continued to the last window and again asked for mail, giving a third name. Then hastily slipping out of the building she re-entered her coupe and vanished.

It is possible that the young lady was calling for the mail of two other persons in addition to her own, but the clerks at the postoffice could never be convinced that she was not collecting three clandestine correspondences, each under a fictitious name.

When an instance like this is officially reported, the postoffice authorities summon the young lady to their office upon her next appearance and she is asked to identify herself under any one of the names she has used, and then informed that no mail addressed to any of the other names will be delivered to her. But few cases of this have arisen for the reason that the rush is so great and the clerks so busy that it is almost impossible to detect the multi-named young women.

The morning hours are replete with interesting occurrences. Then there is the one, perhaps, has been forbidden to correspond with a certain young man. The natural result is that one of the general delivery windows is used to conduct an exchange of letters.

PATHETIC SIDE.

There are many pathetic scenes at the windows. Men and women who have fallen low in this world's goods and who are feverishly awaiting a letter from some friend which will perhaps put them on their feet, call day after morning and more often than not disappointment awaits them. Then there comes a morning when they do not call, and the clerks talk among themselves how the mail has been answered. Sometimes the answer is tragic and furnishes work for the Coroner.

Those suits in which both the wife and the husband fear that correspondence will be opened if it is permitted to come to the home in the usual way are fruitful of business there also. In fact the whole current of human activity in a great city is seen at the general delivery window as it ebbs and flows, showing sometimes its brilliant side, sometimes its dark, sinister side, and sometimes its pitiful side.

Back of those grated windows is the never-sleeping postoffice system with its myriad of details. Over this general delivery department, M. R. Vandergrift presides. He is a little slender wiry man, with dark eyes and a quick, thorough manner. Under him are sixty-three clerks, who work from 6 o'clock in the morning until midnight six days of the week and for one hour on Sunday. They form practically the only set of men who are familiar and who come in close personal touch with the vast number of transient and unsettled people in the city.

They tell you of the night traffic that ebbs and flows by the general delivery window, of the ruffians and of the underworld denizens who never emerge from their warrens until after nightfall. They meet them after 9 o'clock and on until midnight. Silently, they slide up to the windows and, looking sneakingly about whisper their names. They seize their mail and go with many looks over their shoulders. They do not know what time they will feel the hand of authority, for they realize that the general delivery window is often a meeting place for crook and officer of the law.

There are three sources from which the general delivery letters are received at the postoffice. One, and the most prolific, is the drop box at the office itself. The second is the train mail coming from all parts of the world, and the third, the matter collected at the various boxes and stations throughout the city.

THROUGH THE MAIL.

The system employed to handle this matter is beautifully perfect. The mail comes in through the drop boxes, falls directly on a moving canvas belt, and is flashed along to an endless chain contrivance with buckets at intervals, which moves slowly from the first floor to the second. The letters fall from the belt into these buckets and are raised to the second floor, where they drop upon a large table, where scores of clerks are at work. This table has what is called an adjusting machine attachment. It takes the letters and faces them the same way, preparatory to inserting them in the cancellation machine, which stands directly at the end of the table. This machine works at the rate of 800 a minute. From the moment the letter drops through the slot from the hand of the sender, it does not cease to be in motion. It goes through the cancellation machine and is taken up to the distribution table, where clerks assort it, according to divisions. Overhead runs a series of little tramways in which metal boxes with different grooves move. These boxes are filled with matter for the North, East, South, or West, and are placed on this overhead tramway and automatically carried to their destination. The little metal boxes make the proper switches when they come to forks of the tramway and seem to be things of life, as they pick their way through the maze of grooves until they find exactly the proper destination.

The mail for the city travels back to a chute and the metal box dumps its contents into this chute and continues back for a new load. The matter passes downstairs and is again seized upon by clerks who distribute it alphabetically or by lock-box number.

In five minutes after a letter has been mailed in the general drop box at the postoffice, it can be secured at the general delivery window with a perfect record remaining of its course through the office.

One of the most interesting features of this department is the amplified city directory that the postoffice compiles each day. The latest issue of the city directory is taken and from this one book, forty-five new books are made. Each page of names in the directory is given twenty-two full pages in the new books, and it is here that the changes of address and addition of names are made. Superintendent Candergrift stated yesterday that 25,000 changes in the city directory are made each month in his department. A total of 900,000 incorrectly-addressed pieces of first-class mail are received each month here.

It is estimated by the postal authorities here, that there has been an increase of thirty-five per cent. in the general delivery department during the last year.

DARROW TRIAL TO RESUME.

Attorney for Defense Announces He Will Be Ready to Go on Even if Attorney Rogers Is Not Present.

The Darrow trial will be resumed at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Attorney Appel yesterday stated that the defense will be prepared to go on, even if Rogers does not show up. Appel expects the defense will be ready to start its evidence Tuesday and if everything goes well he thinks the case will be finished by August 1.

Mrs. Dora Bain will be given a cross-examination. She will be followed by Robert F. Bain, who was one of the jurors in the McNamara case. He will testify that he accepted $400 from Bert H. Franklin, detective of the legal defense in the McNamara case, on the understanding that he was to get $3600 more provided he held out for an acquittal.

It is expected that he will be the last witness for the prosecution. The defense will probably introduce some documentrary evidence before proceeding with its witnesses. Appel says that the defense has a lot of evidence that has never been mentioned in the papers and that their case has been thoroughly prepared.

ROYAL COUPLE PLIGHT TROTH.

Kaiser's Only Daughter Selects Future Husband.

Authorities at Corfu Play Prank Upon Wilhelm.

Cellar Goethe Made Famous Is to Be Destroyed.

BY MALCOLM CLARKE.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

BERLIN, July 6.—All Germany finds pleasure in the fact, now freely admitted in royal circles, that the choice of the pretty, winsome, much-beloved Princess Louise of Prussia, the Kaiser's only daughter and constant companion, has fallen on the heir to the Dukedom of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, a fine, manlike, breezy mannered soldier of the kind called "good fellow." One thing above all others to render him acceptable to Englishmen and Americans is that he is the first all around sportman in Europe. The consent of the Kaiser has been at last obtained and only the usual official announcement remains to complete the pretty love story.

All Berlin is amused at the joke played on the Kaiser by the authorities at Corfu, where he recently spent a holiday. Knowing the interest he takes in archaeology the authorities had several statues "planted" in different parts of the island. Excavation work was started, and when the Kaiser arrived on the island he was informed of this, and immediately became interested. He himself spent some days in digging, and, of course, made finds. What adds insult to injury is that the "antiques" were made in Germany.

CROWN PRINCE ON TOUR.

The Crown Prince of Saxony has left Dresden on a tour in the east, and he is to visit Ceylon, India, China and Japan, and will return home through Canada. It is expected that shortly after the Crown Prince returns to Europe he will be betrothed to an Austria Arch-Duchess.

FOOLS GERMANY AGAIN.

William Voight, he who in the borrowed uniform of a German military dignity commandeered a regiment of soldiers and scared the Mayor of Koepenick into surrendering the town's treasury, has fooled Germany again with a hoax that would do credit to the cleverest of American press agents.

Only a few days ago the newspapers told the story of Voight's death in a London hospital, with the immediate result that the story of his world-famous exploit was revived and rewritten by every newspaper in the country. But it is now learned that Voight, so far from being dead, was very much alive and at Lauscha in the Duchy of Saxe-Meinengen as head-liner in a vaudeville troupe. He, himself, for the purpose of advertisement, had engineered the story of his death.

FAMOUS CELLAR DOOMED.

A world-famous curiosity is about to disappear at Leipsic. This is Auerbach's cellar, or drinking place, which owes its special celebrity to the fact that Goethe located in it the scene in "Faust" in which Mephistopheles, standing upon a wine cask, takes his flight into space, to the stupefaction of the drinkers.

The old building in which the cellar is found was built by Dr. Stromer d'Auerbach between 1530 and 1538, and the worthy doctor began by putting there the wine which he intended for his own use. Later, as the wine was good, he conceived the idea of selling it, and in this was established the tavern to which his name has since been attached.

FOOTBALL FLOURISHES.

One sign of the "New Germany" is the revelation proudly circulated that the Fatherland now possesses a total of 117,633 football players. These, of course, are practically all amateurs. The number represents an increase of 25 per cent. over the total registered a year ago. The game flourishes most in South Germany, but is making rapid headway in all parts of the country.

BOOSTING THE CITY.

The general passenger department of the Southern Pacific Railway has sent a letter to all agents in Southern California, Arizona and New Mexico, calling attention to the advantages of Los Angeles as a place for spending the summer vacation. Attention is directed to the admirable climate, hotels, theaters, parks, the beach resorts and other outdoor attractions.

Rt. Hon. Augustine Birrell,
Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Princess Louise of Prussia,

Kaiser Wilhelm's only daughter, whose engagement to the heir to the Dukedom of Mecklinburg-Strelitz is freely admitted in royal circles at Berlin. The consent of the Kaiser has been obtained and only the imperial announcement is awaited.

Miss Kate Malecka,

Who gave the Russians a cause celebre and who, at the instance of the British government, was released from prison and exile to Siberia by order of the Czar. She is described as a pianiste who makes a specialty of Chopin.

KING OF ENGLAND SETS A PRECEDENT.

Bids Men and Women in Plain Clothes to Dine With Him and the Imperialists Are All Talking About It. A Baronet Who Sells Cigars and Newspapers Is Found in Melbourne.

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 6.—A recent dinner at Buckingham Palace possessed one feature altogether without precedent in royal entertainments. The King and Queen, with a large party of friends, had motored back to London after a warm and dusty day at a fashionable race meeting. King George, reasoning that his company of distinguished guests would be tired, decided that only semi-dress need be worn at dinner.

The women, therefore, wore ordinary simple gowns, and the men comfortable frock coats, in place of the starchy, formal evening dress, usual on such occasions.

SOMETHING USEFUL.

Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer in the last Unionist government, and a worthy son of the distinguished Joseph of that name, tells an excellent story against himself. When he left his alma mater he traveled on the continent for some months, and then returned to Birmingham with the intention of devoting himself seriously to politics. He had been at home only a few days when he met his old nurse, who inquired what vocation he thought of pursuing. "Oh," he said, in reply, "I'm going in for politics." "For politics?" was the exclamation of the old lady. "Oh, Mr. Austen, I should have thought two in the family, your father and Mr. Richard, enough to have had in politics! Why don't you go in for something useful?"

A BARONET'S JOB.

Behind the counter of a little cigar and newspaper store in the High-street district of Kew, a suburb of Melbourne, Australia, stands throughout the day a suave, polite, courtly little man, greeting with a bland smile and a grateful "much obliged—call again" all who choose to buy newspapers, cigars or tobacco of him.

Scarcely any of those who know him under the name he has assumed for more than fifteen years are aware of the fact that he is listed in the pages of Debrett as Sir Henry Kellett, Baronet of the United Kingdom.

To the reporter of a Melbourne newspaper, who dug out the story of his descent from a high social position to the status of a shopkeeper, Sir Henry explained: "I was left without a shilling and only the rudiments of an education, came out here to earn a living and have so far succeeded. I worked from dawn to midnight. Don't you think, under these circumstances, it was wise for me to forget my title. Rather incongruous for Sir Henry and Lady Kellett to be selling newspapers from behind a shop counter."

DUCHESS IN TERROR.

An amusing story has been going the rounds about the late Duchess of Sutherland. Her Grace, an intrepid and courageous traveler in all other ways, was in terror of a storm at sea. A few years ago she returned from Egypt on a P. and O. liner, with a captain famous for his strict discipline and the wholesome fear he inspired in his frivolous passengers. The wind rose alarmingly and shrieked and howled persistently in the Duchess's ears as she was preparing for bed. Hastily she threw on a gorgeous dressing gown and paced majestically up the companion-way to the bridge, absolutely refusing to leave the captain's side until an hour later, when, the wind subsiding, the angry, though taciturn gentleman was seen escorting the gay and debonair lady to her cabin, where she insisted upon thanking him gracefully for his kind care of her, much to the amusement of those of the passengers and crew within sight and sound.

YOUNGEST RULER.

The pretty and petite Marie Adelaide, Grand Duchess of Luxemburg, who, only the other day, attained her eighteenth birthday (the legal majority,) enjoys the distinction of being the youngest reigning ruler in the world.

Eldest of a family of six daughters, she was by special decree issued in 1908 created Hereditary Grand Duchess, succeeding to the throne of this principality on the death in February of the Grand Duke. The new sovereign, who is Luxemburg's first woman ruler, is said to be the personification of girlish amiability, long ago won the hearts of her people, which is not surprising when it is remembered that she comes of the Orange-Nassau family, who, of all European royal houses, are famous for their democratic simplicity.

One result of the recent visit of the young Prince of Wales to Paris is that he takes up in earnest practice with the foils and shows promise of becoming an expert swordsman, in contradistinction to his father King George V, who is one of the best shots in Europe.

BRACELETS WITH POCKETS.

Bracelets with pockets are the latest inventions for women's use. They have a bow-shaped piece of gold on one side, between which and the bracelet a tiny handkerchief of lace or crepe de chine can be tucked. The bracelets can be worn just below or just above the elbow, where the handkerchief is hidden under the sleeve. A pocket in the garter is another new idea. Some special pocket garters are called "Keptonu," and have four-flap pockets made of chamois leather.

MODERN TILTING.

Among the many interesting revivals connected with the Shakespeare's England Exhibition at Earl's Court, the Tourney and the events which accompany it on the evening of July 11 promise to provide not the least imposing and beautiful spectacle. For the occasion the Empress Hall, where the tilting will take place, is to be turned into a perfect representation of an ancient tilting yard, with embellishments of the castles of York and Warwick closing the vista at each end. All the four thousand spectators who are expected to be present will be in costume, and of course the knights who ride in the tourney will be clad in armor.

IRISH LOOK UPON ASQUITH AS THEIR BEST FRIEND.

Gaels Believe He Will Lead Them Out of Bondage and Into a New Era of Prosperity and Happiness. Soldiers Ordered to Salute All Closed Motor Cars in Dublin.

BY THOMAS EMMET.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

DUBLIN, July 6.—It would be scarcely possible to adequately estimate the good effect that will be produced by the approaching visit of Mr. Asquith, the English Prime Minister, to Dublin.

The welcome that will be accorded to the man whom, after William Ewart Gladstone, Irishmen justly revere above all others, will be worthy of the race and of the country. For in Mr. Asquith the people of Ireland recognize the one who is destined to lead them out of the darkness of servitude.

Accompanied by the Master of Elibank, his principal aide, Mr. Asquith will arrive in Dublin July 18, and during his stay will be the guest of Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland. In the early part of the next day Mr. Asquith will pay visits to various public institutions in company with John Redmond and Mr. Birrell. In the evening a great meeting will be held in the Theater Royal, presided over by John Redmond, and in addition to Mr. Asquith's address, speeches will be delivered by Mr. Birrell and the Master of Elibank.

BUYS A MANSION.

Michael O'Connor, a New York saloon-keeper, has bought Drumhierney House, near the village of Leitrim. It passed into O'Connor's possession at auction for about $25,000, and he traveled specially from New York to bid on the property. Six years ago the entire village of Leitrim passed into his hands. He now owns the entire estate made historic by the last stand of the O'Connor clan, headed by Roderick O'Connor of Breffney.

RULERS MEET AS NEIGHBORS.

Kaiser Goes Forth to Call Upon Czar Nicholas.

Italian War With Turkey May Afford Gossip.

Russian Police Glad to Be Rid of Miss Malecka.

BY GEORGE FRAZER.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

ST. PETERSBURG, July 6.—The latest information here confirms the report of the German Emperor's forthcoming meeting with the Tsar in Finnish waters this month, and a probable meeting between King George and the Emperor Nicholas in the same region in August.

An important interchange of opinions is to take place on the first occasion between M. Sazonoff and the German Foreign Minister with regard to the desirability of finding some means of bringing the Turco-Italian conflict to a close, but Russia will continue to avoid all inducements and opportunities of taking the initiative, and will only act together with the other powers. The idea broached by the foreign press of the possibility of some written understanding being come to at the approaching meeting with the Emperor William is positively denied.

THE MALECKA CASE.

I am in a position to say on the highest authority that the recent release of Miss Kate Malecka has led to a serious difference of opinion between the Czar Nicholas and his nearest advisers.

The court officials, the Governor of Warsaw, and the Chief of Police of that city had determined that Miss Malecka should suffer the extreme penalty of the law, in other words, exile to Siberia for life. They more than all others had reason to remember the exploits of her distinguished father along the same lines, and they decided that Miss Malecka would be, perhaps, safer in a place where she was under constant espionage of the police. It is certain that but for the vigorous intervention of the British government the kindly purpose of the Czar to release her would have been overruled by the inflexible, iron-bound bureaucrats around him.

It is considered here that the Czar on the whole found the wisest and best way out of the difficulty by releasing Miss Malecka on her promise never to return to Russia.

Miss Kate Malecka is, according to advices received here, now quietly settled in a London hotel somewhere in the neighborhood of the British Museum. And there to the joy and relief of the authorities here she will probably remain. Incidentally, she is an accomplished pianist, excelling in her interpretation of Chopin.

INTOLERANCE.

An editorial writer on this paper is highly indignant because the Governors of Perm and Ufa allowed Jewish pupils to take part in scientific excursions outside the township. The consequences of such illiberality of spirit are portrayed in these fervid terms:

"Indeed, under the plea of 'scientic excursions,' the Jews would start traveling throughout Russia in search of infants, for the purpose of draining their blood. Within the Pale infant-hunting by Jews is so notorious that people protect their children by the threat of pogroms. But in the rest of Russia the knowledge of the ritual murders committed by the Jews has not yet had time to reach the masses who do not distrust them. When they are dressed like gentlemen people are unable to recognise in them the robbers who have come to feed on human blood, and, therefore, they cannot protect their children."

COWARDICE.

The recent visit of the Czar and Czarina to Moscow was accompanied by one of those acts of cowardly officialism on the part of the Russian police of the kind that tend more than all things else to fan the flame of revolution.

In anticipation of the visit the police raided the poorer districts of the city, throwing 3000 unoffending men and women into prison.

THE CHAIN IS TIGHTENING.

Detectives Say They Have Evidence Connecting Hold-ups With Crimes Other Than that Acknowledged.

The chain of circumstantial evidence which the police detectives say they are daily weaving about J. H. Moore and Harry Watson, confessed highwaymen, according to the detectives, under arrest at the University Station, was strengthened yesterday by finding among their effects a pawn ticket calling for a watch asserted to have been taken from J. Kida, one of the Japanese held up near Compton by two men on the night of June 28.

With this bit of alleged evidence against Moore and Watson, the detectives say they hope to fasten the other hold-ups committed for several nights in that vicinity by two armed and masked men.

One of these hold-ups resulted in the death of Yock Foo, a Chinese truck gardener. He was shot through the right groin. The bullet ranged upward and perforated the intestines. Yock died several days later at the County Hospital.

According to the detectives, Moore and Watson have confessed to having held up two Japanese Thursday night, near Ninth and West Adams streets, shortly before they were arrested for that particular crime. The following day they were identified by a Japanese who said they had robbed him several days before on Central avenue.

LONDON, July 6.—It would seem the story told some years ago in the Sunday magazine of a New York newspaper of a private academy in which the young sons of impecunious nobles were instructed in the art of winning American heiresses was not so very wide of the truth after all. The members of one of the band of "social promoters" who pick up a more or less uncertain income introducing tuft-hunting American millionairesses in English society will reveal to the world some of the methods used in landing American dollars.

The woman in question who turned matrimonial agent will tell how frequently the younger sons of great families came to her for American wives and frequently obtained them, her specialty being a thorough knowledge of wealthy Chicago, New York or Pittsburgh families seeking matrimonial alliances with European aristocrats.

Verily, has Consuelo, Duchess of Marlborough, seemingly acquired the beauty of making the sun stand still? For those who have met the Duchess at public or private functions recently, remark upon the youthful, almost girlish freshness of her appearance. Some extraordinary metempsychosis the Duchess has regained all the charm of person and manner which distinguished her in her earlier years and now that her second son, Lord Ivor Spencer Churchill, has recovered from the ill health which was the occasion of so much anxiety and maternal vigilance, the Duchess is expected to resume her leading part in social life.

Feeble and Aged.

EMPEROR FRANCIS NEARING END OF

BY EMIL ANDRASSY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS TIMES.]

VIENNA, June 6.—Upon the bent, feeble, aged figure of the Emperor Francis Joseph the eyes of all European diplomats are now turned in deep concern, not unmingled with alarm and uncertainty as to the future.

To all these brought in daily contact with him it is becoming more and more evident that the span of life of the venerable monarch is rapidly drawing to a close. Up to a few months, even a few weeks, ago, the figure of the Emperor had lost none of its stalwart uprightness and soldierly bearing. He had lost little if any of the inordinate industry and capacity for work which had made him one of the most remarkable of all European rulers.

And then before anyone could realize the change the familiar figure seemed to have changed as by the touch of a wand into that of a shrunken, stooping, fragile shell of a man. Gone is the precise military step, the splendid poise and imposing presence, which made him kingly even among kings, and in their place the shambling, loose shuffle, the bored, worn, wandering, furtive look of one who feels that he has somehow lost his place in the world.

Of the ability of the Archduke Ferdinand, his successor, to hold together the various provinces and races which go to make up the Austro-Hungarian Empire, there is considerable doubt. Disaffection, long smouldering in Hungaria and among the various Slav races and only held in check during the lifetime of the aged Emperor, as it is known, burst with his death, into a flame which can end only in ruin and the destruction of the empire.

DISTRACTED FATHER.

A long letter from a despairing and distracted father, published in the newspapers of today, would seem to show that in respect of wild extravagance our young men can outvie even the gilded youth of your White Way. According to this worthy gentleman a fashionable young man of Vienna wears as much on his clothes as even a valiant of women. Such items as $60 for a pair of boots, $12 for a hat, $125 for a single suit of clothes are among the least of the items in a young man's wardrobe. "In my time," wails the parent, "I should have deemed myself disgraced if I had spent in a year what my son and his comrades now spend monthly on more dress 'accessories.'"

BREACH OF PROMISE.

An extraordinary breach of promise case has come before the Vienna courts, the plaintiff being a servant girl and the defendant a railway worker named Hofer. The latter did not deny promising marriage, but said that the promise was conditional that he and his sweetheart should live together for six weeks in order to see if they suited each other. On two occasions during the trial, when he returned from work she was not in the house, and he deduced from this that she would not look after his interests. The judge found for the defendant, on the ground that he had complied a condition to his promise, but after the trial had come to the conclusion that the marriage would not be a happy one.

An Irishman from County Dublin, Mr. William Thomas Murphy, seems in danger of suffering loss through the fear of Italian espionage that has assumed proportions of a mania among military circles in the Austrian capital. After a varied and successful career as chef de cuisine in various large European hotels, he retired from the Savings Bank of Vienna last February in response to an advertisement two hotels for the summer season at the well-known watering place of Rabbil, in Southern Tyrol. Having engaged his personnel for the season beginning June 15, he made due application for a license from the local Austrian authorities. The application was refused, without reason being assigned for the refusal, supported by impeccable attestations of his British character, where he has lived, Hotel, and by the Austrian police, to the Lord Chamberlain against the application. The authorities have no reason to suppose that he was not what he appears to be, and promote Italian espionage in Vienna. Austrian statesmen, which in turn has led to the matter, the affairs of the Austrian Empire, which sweep season, are the land, according to the depth of being worked on sale to individuals at the lowest possible term payments.

Lake Texcoco, in the Valley of Mexico, which covers completely the city of Tenochtitlan, the capital of the republic of Montezuma, somewhere in the year 1520, and which is falling into the lake, as Cortez predicted. It is in vain during the past three centuries to conquer it as possible, the BABY SHOULD BECOME LAWYER.

If there be anything in heredity there is at least one baby in England who should some day make a great lawyer. He is the infant son of Viscount and Viscountess Wolmer and will one day be Earl of Selborne. His great-grandfather was the famous jurist, Sir Roundell Palmer, afterwards Lord Selborne, and Lord High Chancellor of England. His grandfather, the present Lord Selborne, was a capable barrister before he entered statecraft and became a successful High Commissioner of South Africa.

His mother was the Hon. Grace Ridley, daughter of Sir Matthew White Ridley, once Home Secretary and niece of Mr. Justice Ridley, another distinguished lawyer. For this reason alone the youngster's career should be watched with more than usual interest.

BEER AND BACON DANCES.

The latest society fad is to have "beer and bacon" dances. The form of invitation is as follows: "Do come and dance. Beer and bacon at 5."

PEER IN LOVE TANGLE.

One of the foremost peers in the Tory party has now sad reason to regret that he did not remember in time the old adage: "'Tis wel to be off with the old love before you are on with the new." It seems that he had for some months been carrying on a flirtation with a young and beautiful lady, but when she was out of town recently on a holiday he transferred his affections to another fair damsel. His first love, however, happened to ring up his flat one day, and was answered by her rival. The two had a long conversation together, and now the gentleman is in fear and trembling lest his duplicity should become known among his friends, a proceeding he is most anxious to avoid.

This was refused, without reason being assigned for the refusal, inspired by impeccable attestations and certificates from the British Consulate-General at Milan, where he is engaged at the Palace Hotel, and by a recommendation from the Austrian Consulate, he appealed to the Lord-Lieutenant of Innsbruck against the refusal of the local authorities. The appeal was rejected, no reason being given, but Mr. Murphy was informed "confidentially" that he was suspected of intending to promote Italian espionage. In despair he applied to the British Embassy in Vienna which has approached the Austrian Ministry of Commerce, which in turn promises to investigate the matter, but as bureaucratic methods are slow Mr. Murphy may in the meantime be ruined unless the Austrian government opens its eyes to the injustice of the case, and redresses an honorable British subject's grievance without delay.

An aboritive attempt on the life of the Governor of Croatia, M. Cuvay, was made at Agram by a Bosnian student named Jukies.

As the Governor, accompanied by his wife, M. Hervoic, Chief of the Education Department, and his secretary, was passing in his motor car along the Fleischhauer-strasse at a slackened speed, Jukies fired two shots from a Browning pistol at M. Cuvay. He missed the Governor, but the shot struck M. Hervoic in the neck, inflicting a fatal injury.

Jukies at once took to flight, killing one constable and injuring two others as he ran. At last he was overpowered and arrested. He admitted that he intended to kill the Governor in revenge for his regime of brutal force, and he regretted that he had not been successful. He denied having accomplices, but about thirty Bosnian students were arrested. He also declared that he conceived the plan after reading the reports of the attempt on Count Tisza.

PARIS THRILLS AT A NEW KIND OF PRISON ROMANCE.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, July 6.—The central figure of sympathy and interest to all Paris, is Mlle. Emilie Thirion, the pretty, gentle-mannered, slender, dark-eyed girl who now ponders over the man, her betrothed, who betrayed her into a prison.

The man who today is the object of execration to all men and women who know the story is Capt. Schesnur, an elderly officer in the German army.

Mlle. Thirion was teacher in a wealthy German family when she was courted by Schesnur, who swearing eternal love, followed her even to Paris, and at last won her consent and that of her unwilling parents on his promise to become a French subject.

The engagement ring was on her finger, the marriage day was near at hand, when Schesnur one day proposed that she should commit an act of espionage upon the German army.

The girl was timid, unwilling, hesitated, and at first refused. Yet he played skillfully, artfully upon her heart and her patriotism, pointing out to her that France would bless her name as it had through ages blessed that of Joan of Arc.

Mlle. Thirion's inexperience and timidity soon betrayed her to the German military authorities and she was put upder arrest.

Then it was that Schesnur was revealed as a spy suborner of evidence who had been "retired" from the German army for too great proficiency in gambling, and who now eagerly testified against her.

At the sentence "six months' imprisonment" was pronounced Mlle. Thirion looked full at her sweetheart, drew his engagement ring from her finger and flung it in his face. Then she turned and walked composedly down the steps of the dock.

But the jailers entering her cell the next morning saw that he black hair had turned grey in a single night.

Released at last she has returned to the quiet home of her parents in the Avenue Victor Hugo, living down as best she may her grief and shame. In all the records of Europe there is no sadder story.

FRENCH LAW CHEAP.

One of the most striking results of the recent convention of the International Law Association has been the profound effect produced upon the many eminent English and American barristers who attended the convention by the fact that the expense of a law suit in France is about one-half that of America and about one-fifth that of England.

All this difference is not accounted for by the avocat in France being able to deal directly with the client, though the reader of the paper suggested that the first step to lessening expense would be the amalgamation of the two branches of the English legal profession. Another reason given was that in France a good deal of the evidence is not taken orally in court, but is put into writing and used without the expense of bringing the witnesses before the judge. In Scotland at one time they had this system, and England used to have it, too, in Chancery proceedings. One matter that they certainly order better in France is the practice in regard to expert witnesses. These are nominated by the court itself. There is no difficulty in believing that this is cheaper, and it doubtless has other advantages.

MME. JEAY IS DEAD.

An interesting personality has passed away in Guernsey, as the Gazette Officielle of that island informs us. This is Mme. Jeay, who was for many years in the service of the Hugo family. She was employed by the great poet to copy his manuscripts—no easy task, as his handwriting was particularly illegible, and among the works which she transcribed during his prolonged residence at Hauteville House, in the time of the Second Empire, were the first part of the "Le Genie des Siecles," brought out in 1860; "Les Miserables (1862,) and "Les Travailleurs de la Mer" (1866.) This was a position of confidence, as Victor Hugo took many precautions to keep his manuscripts secret, and the copies thus made were forwarded direct to his publishers in Belgium. Mme. Jeay has died at the age of 82.

PHONOGRAPHIC LULLABY.

The latest novelty is what a local paper terms "un berceur electrique." The cradle is fixed to a balance, and this is connected with a phonograph. As soon as the baby cries, vibrating tablets of the apparatus are set in motion, and these in turn affect the phonograph, which emits a lullaby. The rotation of the cylinder causes the cradle to rock, and this pacifies the baby. As soon as the baby's cries cease the cradle no longer rocks. By this means the domestic occupations of the mother are not interrupted to look after the baby.

MANY COMETS.

Statistics collected by Borrelly, the famous astronomer, show that since the sixteenth century 376 comets have been discovered, of which 106 were periodic and nineteen have been visible to the naked eye, with seven that could be seen in full daylight. Nearly two-thirds of the discoveries appear to have been made in morning before sunrise, more than half in the second half of the year. The French observatories have led in discoveries, sixty-seven of the comets having been first detected at Marseilles and forty-six at Paris, but only sixteen at Geneva, which has the next highest record; fifteen at Florence, and fourteen at the Lick Observatory.

MADERO WOULD DRAIN LAKE TO PROVIDE LAND.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, July 6. — One of the plans evolved by the government through its Department of Public Welfare, Colonization and Industry, to provide arable lands for division among the people—one of the chief planks of Madero's revolutionary platform—is under way. It contemplates the drainage and filling in of the great bed of Lake Texcoco, some two and a half miles east of the capital. The work will require five years, it is estimated, and an expenditure of 4,000,000 pesos ($2,000,000 gold.) Thousands of acres of waste land, now partly covered with water to the depth of two feet, and the remainder either useless swamp or dry, sandy stretches, the latter giving rise to the frequent dust storms which sweep the capital in the dry season, are to be reclaimed. This land, according to plans which are being worked out, is to be placed on sale to individual Mexicans at the lowest possible figure and on long term payments.

Lake Texcoco is the last remnant of the once mighty body of water which covered the plateau and completely surrounded the ancient city of Tenochtitlan, now the capital of the republic. Legend has it that somewhere in its depths, the treasure of Montezuma was sunk to prevent its falling into the hands of Hernando Cortes. It has been searched for in vain during the hundreds of years since the conquest, and it is regarded as possible, though hardly probable, that it will come to light in the conversion of the lake bed.

PLANNING REFORMS.

Three bills, intended to put into effect some of the reforms which were promised to the people by President Madero, were not presented to the National Assembly because a great deal of difficulty was met in the legal technicalities of the measures. Two of the bills dealt with the land question and the third was an employers' liability act. The drafting of the bills has been in the hands of Carlos Trejo y Lerdo de Tejada, Attorney-General of the Federal District.

DIAZ PORTRAIT ESCAPES BAN.

In an inconspicious place in the National Palace, from which all pictures of Gen. Porfirio Diaz have been banished by a Presidential decree, there remains one which has escaped the notice of the new government. On the window jamb of one of the offices set aside for the President's private secretaries, is pasted a picture about the size of a postage stamp of the old warrior President. It is surmounted by two flags and over it is a legend reading: "Longe live Porfirio Diaz!"

The Y. M. C. A. Summer Excursion on July 8th, over the Southern Pacific, by special train to Lake Tahoe, will be conducted by J. L. Graham, Director of Social Work. Round trip $22.00, the lowest rate for the season. Parties wanting to go to San Francisco only can purchase these tickets and save money. For full information see Mr. Graham at the Y.M.C.A. # BIENNIAL METAPHORE.

and the oil of suavity, urbanity and reform, stirred over the enthusiastic fire in the San Francisco cauldron, corner Sutter and Pierce.

This soap is guaranteed to raise woman still higher on her pedestal, change the groans of the oppressed to the glorias of the liberated and show mere man he is not the only moonstone in the sand. He needs to be shown, even if all of him is not from the "show me" State; for it was one of his species who said that Sorosis was "a female gas company that lays its pipes on cultivated ground," while everyone, who is anyone, knows that Sorosis was the origin of this same great and glorious biennial.

The word species reminds that it was a Biennial woman, even Miss Peixotto, herself, who writes Ph. D. after her name, who dared to hurl this among the ingredients in the seething cauldron, "The female of the species spends the money of the male." That took more bravery than was needed by the dollar-a-word man who said, "The female of the species is more deadly than the male," for that last is true. Miss Biennial is dead in earnest about killing all these awful beasts—corrupt ballot, egregious graft, asinine adulteration, the million microbe, furious fashion and evanescent education—al' of which are howling abroad in the land.

The prime beast-vanquisher is "Votes for Women," followed by "Real Efficiency," "Woman's Part Among the Statutes," "Law as a Factor of Social Progress," "Universal Peace." All mighty subjects adequately handled at the Biennial, a little mixed, perhaps, as are my metaphors, but variety is the allspice of existence, and who but woman, and the Biennial woman most of all, can give it?

But if woman is an aspiring creature whose political sphere is still slightly flattened at the polls, she is not in that state of mind that leads some persons to fear every time the sun goes to bed it will never get up again. No, Biennial has hopes for the future. She sees no task too big, is afraid of nothing, handles no subject with gloves and is confidently certain of accomplishment. Her very audacity puts things over and takes away your breath.

Miss Peixotto said, too, that there were three p's we might take into account as well as Presidential possibilities: (1) press spreads knowledge, (2) pulpit spreads morals, and (3) petticoats spread considerably. No one could fail to note that it was a new point of view to take women to task at the biennial.

She said when administring the dose, "Woman in Industry and the Home:" "The doctrine of wise and thoughtful expenditure, women have not learned. We purchase on the principle of conspicuous waste and never consider the psychic income which should be the great factor in all purchases. What things are worth while to your mind?" These sentiments were like a taste of good, home-made bread after living for months on cake and honey.

Mrs. Hesslar, in her address on dress ventured, instead of corsage bouquets for biennial women to fasten the hook in the proper eye; and there was no misfit. "It is impossible to separate people from their looks and if we care for them we would better not mince around in tight skirts, totter around on high heels, nor burden ourselves with the top-heavy hat, and (I am sure our husbands will all agree) wear the dress that fastens up the back. We need to call a halt on boudoir fashions on the street. We need to teach our high-school girls by example to refrain from emulating the society woman."

What is that about getting the beam out of your eye before you can see clearly to get the mote (whatever that is) out of your neighbor's eye? Well, such wholesome advice set some to rolling their handkerchief corners to a point and getting the hand mirror ready for the optic operation.

What Is a Critic?

Only a few like to be critics. "A critic is a wet blanket that soaks everything it touches." We would much prefer to be among the poetically drifting petals of thrown bouquets than so submerged in dampness; and who is there of all that weary, footsore throng who breasted the wind around on Pierce street and braved the big policemen and shrank at the gavel's stern and peremptory fall and the call, "Sit down, right where you are," who of all these forgetting fatigue and fear did not bring home some inspiration that shall result in action. What woman, after all, is not glad to get back to the "mere man!" She notes with satisfaction and a great sense of security the easy question he puts to the conductor and peremptory orders to the porter. And didn't you feel just a wee bit sorry for this same man when you were away? How his ears must have burned at some of the things Miss Biennial said of him—things that had never been brought to your attention before.

And then the home and the children! Was ever a duty so dear as the bathing of warm, tired, little bodies: the putting to bed of white-clad children and the feel of moist hands on your cheek and loving arms around your neck and the words: "I love you, mother dear." Ah, there is nothing like that after all!

My own little lad, as he went to bed, was a kitten. He had been a bear, then a dog, and last a cat, leaping on all fours to the floor, then up on the little white bed.

"Are you a big wild-cat or just a tame kitten?" he was asked.

"The best kind of all, the one my mother knows most about—a biennial cat."

Then, when all was ready he folded his hands devoutly, lowered his head and began, "Meow, meow."

"Why, Ralph, is that the way you pray?"

"That's the only way a cat knows how to pray and a biennial cat prays a long, long time."

So the long, long prayers have been said and now come the two years to make prayers, deeds. Otherwise, as psychologists tell us, all inspiration is worse than useless.

STREET CARS INJURE THREE.

One Man May Die as Result of Fractured Skull—Child's Toe Mashed by Her Uncle.

Three of the patients treated at the Receiving Hospital yesterday were injured in street car accidents.

A. Green, a Southern Pacific shopman will probably succumb to the effects of a fractured skull. He was knocked down by a Central-avenue car near Third and Spring streets.

J. T. Larentz of No. 312 North Rowan, 52 years old, sustained severe brain concussion, a lacerated ear and two scalp wounds when he was hit by a car at Seventh and South Los Angeles streets.

A contusion of the hips and numerous bruises were suffered by Tony Buongiono of No. 1776 Mozart street, when a Lamar-street car knocked him off his wagon on North Main street.

Joe Romo of No. 310 Semol drive, received a cut under the right eye and a slight brain concussion when he rode his bicycle into an auto driven by Frank Simpson of No. 1032 Ingram street, near Sixth street and Broadway.

A dog objected to A. H. Southworth of No. 250 West Fortieth place delivering milk at a house on North Main street and bit him on the left leg.

Loretta Burger, 2 years old, whose parents live at No. 1321 Bellevue avenue, suffered a mashed big toe on her right foot when an uncle accidentally stepped backwards upon her.

A Permanent Cure For Chronic Constipation

Although those may dispute it who have not tried it, yet thousands of others, who speak from personal experience, assert that there is a permanent cure for chronic constipation. Some testify they were cured for as little as fifty cents, years ago, and that the trouble never came back on them, while others admit they took several bottles before a steady cure was brought about.

The remedy referred to is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been on the market for over a quarter of a century, and has been popularized on its merits, by one person telling another. The fact that its strongest supporters are women and elderly people—the ones most persistently constipated—makes it certain that the claims regarding it as a permanent cure for constipation have not been exaggerated.

It is not violent like cathartic pills, salts or waters, but operates gently, without griping and without shock to the system. It contains tonic properties that strengthen the stomach and bowel muscles so that in time medicines of all kinds can be dispensed with and nature is again solely relied on. It is a reliable laxative for all the family from infancy to old age.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy, before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents, or one dollar a large bottle (family size,) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 405 Washington Street, Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

DIVA DILLON'S MYRIAD OFFERS.

LOCAL SOPRANO MANAGERIALLY BOMBARDED.

Los Angeles Girl Has Been Making Great Success Abroad for the Past Half Dozen Years—Decade Promise May Take Her, Unwillingly, Back to Italy.

It does not come to every young singer—and the more particularly to those who essay grand opera—to be burdened with a superfluity of offers, yet this is the unusual and pleasant position in which Florence Dillon, the Los Angeles dramatic soprano, finds herself just at present.

Almost everybody who follows musical affairs knows of the European successes Miss Dillon has achieved during the past six years, with some of the most prominent grand opera organizations of the continent—the singer herself doesn't say much about the arduous quartette of years spent in study before she received her first chance to prove what those four long years had done for her. And since her return to her Los Angeles home, called hither by the death of her paternal parent, Miss Dillon has won musical recognition of a character generally denied to young women of ambition who "come back home" prepared to show the effects of a foreign musical education—the more generally to disappoint their most enthusiastic friends, make pater and mater wonder as to the real worth of the enormous financial outlay, and provide an eloquent lesson why those musically ambitious young women should study at home, with American teachers, and forego the so-called allurements of European instruction until after the actual merit of their voices has been solidly proved.

Anyway, Miss Dillon did return to her home town and she did "come back" in the most approved musical and artistic fashion. At her concert at the Hamburger Majestic Theater the singer demonstrated her right to be considered an artist of pre-eminent position. The critical ones of the audience quickly discovered that the Dillon temparament is distinctly dramatic—in her Puccini numbers she had all she could do to refrain from acting and if the musical untutored wondered why she didn't always hold her position in the exact middle of the stage, the learned element readily realized that the singer was always restraining herself from contributing some splendid dramatic work to her vocal efforts.

As a matter of fact, that Majestic concert was the first time Miss Dillon ever had publicly sung outside of a grand operatic production and with the nervous strain of appearing before a host of her old-time friends who very naturally assumed the proverbial Missouri attitude the task set for the young singer was anything but pleasant or easy. That she triumphed over the most trying obstacles is now a matter of local musical history, just as are her successes at her immensely-attended concert at Long Beach, and her more recent appearance as soloist at the last concert of the Ellis Club, at the Auditorium, last week.

Miss Dillon declares that her forte is not concert work—she is so thoroughly schooled in opera that she is perfectly willing to forego a concert tour, the financial outcome of which already is assured by the large number of guarantees of a decidedly substantial character.

Miss Dillon is under contract for a season at the Royal Opera, Malta—for the past six years there has existed a mutual understanding between the singer and the directors of the company—a tacit agreement that Miss Dillon, who is known to Italian and German audiences as Adele Dilli, shall sing there each season. This contract was promised to Miss Dillon when she first made her appearance in Malta. It was the first engagement she ever had and coming with a bundle of laudatory letters of recommendation from her teachers and critics who had heard her at private recitals, Miss Dillon with real American spirit and confidence in herself offered to sing for one month without compensation.

"I'm sure I shall succeed," said the young American.

"If you do, we will double your salary and give you a contract for an annual appearance for ten years."

And Miss Dillon did succeed—that was six years ago, and now, in a way, she is sorry that this ten-year promise was ever made to her.

Just now, it promises to make the singer return to the Italy, which has been so good to her at the very time she does not want to go. Max Hirsch, Andreas Dippel's chief lieutenant in the conduct of the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company; Henry Russell, the brilliant director of the Boston Opera Company, and Fortune Gallo, who attends to the business details of the Lombardo company, all want Miss Dillon for their respective organizations for the coming year. And with a list of exceptionally attractive concert engagements, the Adele Dilli of the foreign stage, finds herself in very much the position that inspired the quote: "How happy I could be with either were t'other," etc., etc.

If her request for a one-year release from the Malta contract is granted, Los Angeles will be represented among the leading prima donni of grand opera by Miss Dillon, and that she will succeed is a foregone conclusion for she has succeeded—for over six years remember, in the very home of grand opera, where everybody knows every "if," "but," and "and" of every libretto and where even the slightest deviation from operatic tradition is instantly noted by each attendant.

Miss Dillon confesses to a desire to head an operatic organization of her own—a company of real artists, who lack the reputation possessed by the big stars who sing at the Metropolitan and whose notes are canned and delivered to every city, town and hamlet in the country, but really great singers, nevertheless. She has had offers of ample financial backing from Los Angeles friends—business men who believe there is a great chance for a two-dollar grand opera company that would visit the cities not included in the itineraries of either the Metropolitan, the Chicago-Philadelphia or the Boston companies. They want to back their faith in such a venture by providing the financial aid, confident that the returns would be more liberal than the ordinary business investment yields. Miss Dillon concurs in the opinion that there is a great opportunity for such a grand operatic company, but wants at least one year in her native country with one of the big organizations before she tries offering opera with the moneyed help of her own towns-people.

"It would be fine—but then there's that awful Malta agreement staring me in the face," she says when she thinks of the prospect.

Riches.

I may neither sport nor feast;
Wealth is not for me to make;
But the sun is mine, at least,
And my blue hills none can take.
If I own no gardens fair
I can see the wild rose twine,
Wood and world are mine to share
And the hills, the hills are mine.

Though my purse can never buy place to hear the diva's song,
There's a lark against the sky,
And to me the birds belong.
Though I own no acres broad,
Though I hold no farms in fee,
Yonder glorious hills of God
Hold their purple arms to me.

If my cellar lacks of wine,
Blowing splendid from the sea,
Are not all the hill winds mine,
Brimming golden cups for me?
If my shelves of books are bare,
Have I not the skies to read,
And the wild flowers that declare
What is aye the cleaner creed?

Let the wealthy hoard their gold,
Let the famous guard their wealth;
All I ask to keep and hold
Is my path across the health;
None my freeway to withstand,
None my faith and me to part,
Just the winds to hold my hand
And the hills to keep my heart.

NOTHING NEW BUT VAUDEVILLE.

ORPHEUM, PANTAGES AND EMPRESS OFFER SPLENDID BILLS.

Hold-over Show in the "Legit" Houses Too Good to Be Shelved. "Peg" on Last Week and Cohan Show at Lyceum—"Louisiana Lou" Coming to Mason.

Probably the highest class musical organization ever presented in vaudeville is the celebrated Mountain Ash Male Choir of Wales, which tops the Orpheum bill opening Monday matinee, July 8. Famed everywhere for superb solo and concerted singing, with eighteen individual soloists in its ranks, the choir is an international favorite everywhere.

It has sung in many lands, in competition with the best, and has always won top honors, whether in its own land's festivals, or in competition with the best male organizations of the world. It has been heard here once before, in concert, at usual concert rates, and a few who then heard it raved about it.

Coming now in vaudeville, it makes its own appeal, backed by a tour of unquestioned success everywhere, to the utmost popular favor. Their programme is a varied one, appealing to all classes, and they vary their concerted work with a constant succession of solos, also changing their programme frequently. In fact, the choir is unique, not alone in the annals of vaudeville, but in its own organization, most of the members holding their positions after attaining them through the keenest competition, as membership is deemed the highest singing honor that can come to a Welshman.

Bert Leslie, "himself," knows universally as the king of slang, is returning in the newest of his disjointed English skits, "Hogan the Painter." He brings, of course, a choice collection of new colloquialisms, each warranted to become the talk of the town in a day. He also brings a fine company, and the skit in spite of its slang will be found most entertaining. Leslie is past master of slang; he has originated most of the expressions now part of current talk, and every visit is assurance of a new eruption.

The Four Ritchies do cycling, but in a different way. They have a weird collection of wheels, and their riding of them is provocative of comedy from start to finish. The pretty and shapely girl member of the troupe furnishes the artistic contrast to the clowning of the trio.

Al and Fannie Steadman are to offer a few "piano capers," and while one may not know what that means, it will all come out in the merriment—for these two are past artists in making fun of a new sort. Carl Demarest is a dancing violinist, as good with his feet as with his fiddle, and clever with both.

Florence Roberts & Co. in "The Miracle." Weston and Bentley Company and La Petite Mignon with the usual fine music and the motion views complete the bill. Tuesday will be Welsh night and all Welsh folk will turn out to do special honor to the Mountain Ash Choir. A week later come Frank Keenan in "Man to Man" and Princess Rajah in her daringly beautiful dances.

Belasco.

John Barrymore's hit in "On the Quiet" is of such a pronounced sort that a second week of this Augustus Thomas comedy is necessary to take care of the crowds that have been unable to get seats for any of this week's performances. The second and last week of the piece will commence at the Belasco tomorrow night.

Majestic.

The second week of Kolb and Dill in their revised version of "The Politicians" will commence at the Majestic Theater tonight. "The Politicians" introduce Kolb and Dill and their fine company to better advantage than anything else these popular comedians ever have made known to local audiences. The piece itself has been brought right down to the moment and brisk dialogue and merry quips of the 1913 modal comprise the major portion of the comedy element of the piece.

The company that assists Kolb and Dill in "The Politicians" is the best the comedians have ever had. From clever Bessie Franklyn as the suffrage chief of police down to the smallest "pony," "broiler" "squab," or whatever is the latest name for these sprightly, nimble, effervescent young women of the chorus, the Kolb and Dill organization is an all round efficient organization. The chorus is as fine a collection of real beauties as is to be found in musical comedy anywhere, the costuming is actually worthy of the muchly misused word "gorgeous," while the stage settings are elaborate and show attention to detail that is lacking in many of the vaunted Broadway productions of musical comedy.

Kolb and Dill themselves never had anything funnier than their roles of A. Grafter and I. M. Wurx. The second week of "The Politicians" is announced as the last owing to the limited engagement of these funmakers and the productions scheduled to be seen here. They now have in preparation an elaborate production of their well-known success, "Dream City," which will also be new in many respects.

Fischer's Lyceum.

As might have been expected, "The Yankee Prince," one of the best shows yet put on by "Pop" Fischer at his Lyceum, will go into its second big week with Sunday matinee today. That it deserves a longer run than one week has been the verdict of every one who has seen it, and in complying with the many requests, "Pop" Fischer has adhered to his policy of always pleasing his public, even though breaking his other rule of one show a week. But "The Yankee Prince" is so clever, so very Cohanesque, and so filled with sprightly numbers, bright wit, stinging lines and good songs, that it holds one from the first overture to the final curtain.

Such songs as "Money," "The ABC of the U.S.A.," "What I seen, I done" and a lot more, make one glad to be alive and hear them; such stirring marches and march songs as "Soldiers of the King" stir one's blood, and the general air of the show is bristlingly American and snappy throughout.

The all-around result has been a clever, fascinating show, with May Boley, Bob Lett, Jane Urban, Reece Gardner, Madison Smith, Laura Oakley, Lon Chaney, Texas Guinan, Charles Dudley and the rest doing their best to add to the glory of the whole.

The little chorus girls are also in the picture constantly, and the gowning, the scenery and all the accessories are complete for a first-class show. This, however, will positively be the last week of "The Yankee Prince."

Burbank.

Laurette Taylor will commence her farewell week's engagement at the Burbank Theater this afternoon, when Hartley Manners's tremendously successful comedy "Peg O' My Heart" will commence its seventh and positively final week, after having achieved the biggest record in the history of the Burbank Theater.

Nothing that has ever occupied the stage of the Main-street playhouse has ever scored such a genuine hit or won the remarkable degree of popularity that has marked the presentation of this Manners' comedy and long after Miss Taylor and "Peg" have gone, it will be remembered by thousands of theater-goers as one of the most fascinating and delightful plays that has come to the native stage.

Although it was previously announced from week to week that Miss Taylor would be seen in Hartley Manners's new play, "Barbarasa," before she closed her special starring engagement, it is now certain that local playgoers will not have an opportunity to see this play, owing to the overwhelming popularity of "Peg O' My Heart."

Following the seventh week of "Peg O' My Heart," at the Burbank, the popular actor, Richard Bennett, will commence his special starring engagement, making his first appearance in his original role in Paul Armstrong and Wilson Mizner's sensational play, "The Deep Purple." The sale of seats for Mr. Bennett's engagement in "The Deep Purple" will open at the Burbank box office Monday morning.

Pantages.

As the bright light of the new bill opening with the Monday matinee, the Pantages house offers "The Flying Dreadnaught," a pretentious musical comedy condensed into three elaborate scenes. The company is headed by Arthur Levine and includes ten people. The action of the piece takes the audience from Coney Island to the North Pole in twenty minutes.

One of the real minstrel men comes along when Sam Hood appears. This black-faced comedian, whom theater-goers know under the name of "The Man from Kentucky," is one of the most popular monologists who have come over the Pantages circuit. Sam is dispensing the same popular brand of humor with new songs and specialties.

Vic Leroy, whose name when he is at home in Los Angeles is Leroy Vickers, comes back next week with charming Marie Cahill, in a snappy, singing and cross-fire comedy. Both performers have real histrionic ability and their singing places them in a little class by themselves. Miss Cahill's gowns are marvels of beauty, and the act carries its own scenery. These two will be welcomed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

The acrobatic end of the programme will be handled by the Ernest Alvo troupe, an organization of comedy bar experts who have not been seen here for some time.

To balance the musical comedy numbers comes a quartette of instrumentalists, the "Royal Italian Four," who will be heard in classic and popular selections.

Oliver White's newspaper comedy, "A Yellow Scoop," will be presented by Frank A. Trenor & Co. This act was expected last week, but was held for a second week in San Francisco, necessitating its postponement here. The name of the author would seem to be sufficient guarantee that this act merits its reputation as one of the cleverest dramatic sketches in vaudeville.

Local interest attaches to the vaudeville debut of Miss Louise George, a favorite in Los Angeles and Pasadena social circles. A week ago Mr. Pantages heard Miss George and immediately christened her "The Girl With the Angel Voice," and the present engagement at Pantages here will probably result in a tour of the whole Pantages circuit.

Empress.

The Darrows-Lancaster company in Jean Clark's frolicsome farce, "Like Father, Like Son," and the well-known comedian, Nat Carr, are the two especially attractive features of the new Sullivan and Considine bill opening at the Empress Theater tomorrow afternoon.

The Barrow-Lancaster company is one of the best known organization of players on the vaudeville stage today and have won a reputation second to none as funmakers of the very best order. Their present vehicle, "Like Father, Like Son," is the story of matrimonial entanglements between father and son, in which a prima donna and a demure chorus girl play an important part. The piece is constructed for laughing purposes only and will undoubtedly prove one of the hits of recent weeks in vaudeville.

Another attractive feature of the new bill will be the famous star of "Wine, Woman and Song," Nat Carr, who today stands as one of the cleverest of character comedians, who is making his first appearance in vaudeville. In vaudeville Carr is offering a Hebrew character study that has won him much praise all over the circuit and he will no doubt prove one of the big hits of the new bill.

The third feature of the new bill will be Eddie Heron and Madge Douglas in Will M. Cressy's one-act play, "Jimmy Pinkerton's First Case." Cressy's reputation as a writer for the vaudeville stage is well known and his sketch will be capably presented by this clever young team.

The musical portion of the bill will be furnished by Luco & Luco with their amusing and entertaining musical oddities, while Marron & Hines, the minstrel men, will add much to the abundance of fun to be found on the programme.

Completing the new bill will be Harry Thriller, who, as his name suggests, will furnish countless thrills with his remarkable balancing and gymnastic feats. Exclusive of those splendid acts will be the new comedy and news pictures.

Colonial.

From grand opera to vaudeville and from vaudeville to a circus side show will be the routine of next week's bill at the new Colonial Theater, commencing with Monday's matinee.

De Rosier and his dogs are the headliners and they will hold up part of the circus end of the programme, while La Toska, "the original Happy Hooligan on wheels," will take care of the other half. The grand opera end will be taken care of by G. Cararadossi, in operatic selections of a vast repertoire.

The vaudeville end will be in the hands of Kelly and Massy, the Los Angeles favorites, in the comedy sketch, entitled, "The Intruder." Besides the above excellently arranged programme, three reels of the "Q" first run motion pictures and the challenged orchestra will be the other numbers. An extra added feature will be the singing of the latest illustrated song by Miss Lillian Rosine.

Mason.

The musical comedy that holds the season's record for the number of performances so far given, "Louisiana Lou," will be played for the first time in this city on July 22, in the Mason. The musical comedy will be given here by a special cast under the management and under the guarantee of Harry Askin, the managing director of the La Salle Operahouse Company, which operates the La Salle Operahouse, Chicago, and its traveling companies.

"When that day comes," said Mr. Askin, when he took possession of the La Salle, "that I cannot give on tour as good a show, at least, as I give in the La Salle, that day I will take my name down; for I should be ashamed to have one of my enterprises compared disadvantageously with another."

As Mr. Askin's name is still "up" on the company that will be seen here in "Louisiana Lou," it would appear that theatergoers of this city will have nothing to be afraid of in patronizing the new musical comedy.

Durbar in Kinemacolor.

The Durbar pictures in Kinemacolor opens a return engagement of one week at the Auditorium Theater beginning Monday night, July 15.

These pictures furnish perhaps the most interesting celluloid entertainment that the screen has divulged up to the present day. Miles of film were exposed to record the gorgeousness of King George's big splurge in India last year, when he and Queen Mary were crowned Emperor and Empress of the "Land of Mystery," amid the plaudits of half a million of people, and since the time, months and months ago, that these films were brought to this country, they have attracted widespread attention wherever shown.

They are really quite wonderful, these pictures for the striking glimpse they afford of the most picturesque aspects of India's complex and mysterious life. They let the eye and mind roam through a little known domain of romance and color and gorgeous picturesqueness. Here on this edge of the continent where wandering bands of strange turbaned Hindus bring the great Indian empire within the scope of the imagination, there should be an especial interest in the infinite variety of Indian peoples revealed by these marvelous pictures.

The Durbar pictures embrace all the ceremonies attendant on the Durbar and carry the spectator from Bombay to Calcutta, via Delhi. All the imposing ceremonies are touched in the 14,000 feet of film. By the Kinemacolor process, an old process, now in the rapid development of the science of cinematography, all the scenes and incidents photographed are reproduced true to the color that made them brilliant. Among the many scenes depicted that grips the eye and stirs the imagination is the review of 50,000 British and Indian troops by the King and Queen.

Even in the narrow frame of the picture screen there is something in this endless flood of fighting men, a flowing rainbow of color that quickens the pulse. The pictures of the pageants in Calcutta, where all the races of India mingled in an eruption of gorgeous color and magnificent accoutrements is an imposing sight.

An explanatory lecture and an augmented orchestra add to the entertainment. There will be daily matinees at 2:30 during the local engagement.

EGAN SCHOOL PLAYS.

Advanced Pupils to Appear in Three One-Act Offerings July 12 at Gamut Club.

On Friday evening, July 12, three one-act plays of considerable importance and difficulty will be presented at the Gamut Club by advanced pupils of the Egan School.

Two of these have been given before, on several private occasions, at the school itself, and are now being presented for the first time before an audience of general description.

They are "A Chinese Tragedy" and "The Japanese Butterfly," the one a graphic black-and-white study of San Francisco's Chinatown, the other a cherry-blossom love-tragedy of Yokohama.

In the "butterfly" playlet the characters will be impersonated by Miss Baird, Miss Mace, Miss Hood, Miss Hasemeier, C. Wood, Max Alexander, E. W. Pallette and Patsy Calhoun.

In the Chinese tragedy the cast and the people taking part are as follows: The Fiend, M. Radovich; Chop-Chow, M. Pollock; Chin-Fung, E. W. Pallette; Sun Luey, Max Alexander; Aoi Yoi, Violet Neitz; Hwa Kee, Marguerite Foss; Wing Shee, Patsy Calhoun; Hoo King, Charles Wood; Hoo Chee, Rose Heitz.

The "Christmas-tree act" of Clyde Fitch's "The Climbers" will also be given, with this cast: Richard Sterling, Patsy Calhoun; Ned Warden, E. W. Pallette; Fred Mason, Max Alexander; Johnny Trotter, Charles Wood; Dr. Steinhardt, Max Pollock; Jordan, N. Radovich; Leonard, Glen Gano; Mrs. Sterling, Miss Caldwell; Miss Hunter, Miss Nasemeier; Mrs. Hunter, Miss Mace; Jessica Hunter, Miss Foss; Clara Hunter, Miss Leser; Miss Godesby, Miss Neitz.

Complete scenic appurtenance and costume investiture will accompany the presentation of these plays.

SHIPMAN JOINS EGAN.

Well-Known Manager Will Take Over Business End of Flourishing School.

By arrangements completed Friday, July 5, Ernest Shipman, who has been well known on the Pacific Coast as a manager of various theatrical companies, becomes business manager of the Egan school.

Frank Egan, its director, asserts that this is preliminary to a much larger career on the part of the institution, which will be inaugurated with the school's exclusive new building and private theater on Hope street.

The dramatic enterprises of the school during the past year, such as the presentation of the Irish plays, the "Everywoman" excerpts, and the "Chinese Tragedy" and "Japanese Butterfly," both of which have been repeated by request almost half a dozen times, warrant a much larger stage and more elaborate facilities than are found in the miniature playhouse of the school at present, on the top floor of the Majestic Theater building.

The school's coming theater will not be unlike the notable "Little Theater" of New York, seating about 400 persons, and having a stage with every professional appurtenance, including a scene-loft and a complete and modern switchboard.

In this theater it is the purpose of Mr. Egan to present an annual Shakespearean pageant, in addition to the other dramatic enterprises which will claim his attention.

Mr. Shipman will be a busy man upon his own account next season, handling from the Egan offices tours of "The Havoc" and "The Silver Horde," which he has purchased, respectively, from Henry Miller and Rex Beach.

A Shakespearean company will in all probability be sent out over the John Cort time the coming autumn.

Several elaborate productions of new continental plays are now being planned within the Egan School.

The Press Committee includes Misses O'Donoughue, Goodsell and Peycke, Mmes. Elliott, Tiffany and Conklin, and Mr. Edson.

Piano—Miss Kate Cocke, Mr. Fillmore.

Tuesday the vigorous business of the session will be gotten at in strenuous shape.

Dillon Pupils.

Some of the advanced pupils of Fannie Dillon completed a series of two recitals Saturday afternoon, June 29. Both of the recitals were given at Miss Dillon's home, on Rossmore boulevard. The programmes were greatly enjoyed, and were highly creditable to both pupils and teacher.

"California."

Carl Bronson's song, "California," which was sung at the sylvan revels of the Gamut Club by Edgar Thorpe and Joseph Dupuy, has been dedicated by its author to the Orpheus Club.

Lazard With Sembrich.

Mortimer Lazard, of this city, will manage the road tour of Miss Marcella next season. Frank LaForge will be Mme. Sembrich's accompanist.

Blanchard Gallery.

In the former Blanchard Art Gallery, now a music studio, a programme of songs was presented last Tuesday morning. The songs were offered by Walter Balfour, with Mrs. Laura Seymour Wheeler as accompanist. Rob Wagner gave a talk on pictures and picture-making.

The Los Angeles Musical College presented a number of pupils in recital at the Ebell Clubhouse last Tuesday evening, and a varied and brilliant programme was heard.

From the class of Harry Gherke came Miss Ione Gale, Miss Blanche Supulveda, Miss Madge Schalk and Miss Maybelle Beringer.

From the class of Ralph Wyle, Miss Caro Morgan and John Schneberger.

The dramatic department in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Bain offered two farces.

De Chauvenet Finals.

Pupils of the De Chauvenet Conservatory of Music received certificates at the annual commencement of the conservatory Saturday afternoon, June 29, at the conservatory auditorium, No. 845 South Figueroa street. Miss Ernestine Machold assisted in the programme, giving a splendid talk on the composer, Schumann.

The exercises were opened by the ever-popular overture, "Poet and Peasant," by the De Lano Mandolin and Guitar Club. Rev. William Davies delivered the graduating address and presented certificates to the following pupils: Flora Mount, Charles Whitting, Carl Scott, Madeline Hines, Ruth Lomax, Theodore Mooney, Francis Thys, Irma Conley, Leslie Cline, Ella Cline, Julia Kessler, Mary Davies and Edna Keifer. Teachers certificates were awarded to Ardis Blanche Olds and Irene Westlund.

The numbers were enthusiastically applauded and the students received many floral offerings. Of special interest was the piano contest for the best playing, which decision by the judges resulted in a tie between the two pupils who received teachers' certificates, viz, Miss Ardis Olds and Irene Westlund.

Moore's Band.

Moore's band, at Eastlake today, will present a programme including Roberts's "Pustan Maiden," Lalo's "Ballet Egyptienne," Erkel's "Hungyada Banlo" overture, a selection from "Carmen," Ganne's "Gypsy" number and the "Tartar" march by the same author.

VON STEIN CONCERT.

Two Hundred-Sixty-Third Event of Its Kind Given at Popular Musical Academy.

Of the more important musical events of the past week, none is to be mentioned the 263rd., concert given by students of the Von Stein Academy of Music, on Tuesday evening, July 2, at Gamut Auditorium. Special interest was added to the event by the award of several free scholarships and a diamond medal of superior design. This much-coveted first prize, a $200 scholarship and diamond medal was won by Miss Rita Mitchell, a Los Angeles girl and pianist student from the class of Heinrich Von Stein. Twice within one year has this honor fallen to the Mitchell's lot, stamping her as a student of extraordinary energy and intelligence. Her rendition, earlier in the evening, of Moszkowsky's great concert valse in E major astonished the large audience by its dissembling virtuosity and mature musicianship. Second prize, consisting of a $100 scholarship was taken by Ruth Whittemore, sister of the already well-known piano-prodigy, Master Dorsey Whittington. Third prize, an $80 scholarship, was awarded to Master Lee Folsom of the academy's junior department.

The audience was asked to decide the award of a small fund of $45 odd, accumulated from the sale of reserved seats for students concerts. By a vote of better than two to one, this sum was won by Dorsey Whittington, who captured the house with his playing of Mendelssohn's Rondo capriccioso and Scariatti's Sonata in A major.

As the uniformly good quality of instruction given at the Von Stein Academy is a matter of common knowledge, further comment on the manner of the students' presentation of the programme would be a repetition of what has often been done and chronicled in these columns as occasion dictated.

A Rhyme of the Rose.

What is lovelier than a Rose?
Mark the stem that shoots and grows,
Then the leaflets that unclose,
Next the bud that swells and glows,
Till the rich ripe blossom blows
From whose cup sweet perfume flows.

In the bosom of the Rose
What a wealth of charms repose!
Colors richer e'en than these
Shining in the seven-hued haze
Which the sun through raindrops throws.

Many men in verse and prose
Sing the praises of the Rose,
And this rhyme I now compose
Its birth unto her sweetness owes.

LOS ANGELES has been like a deserted village since the opening of the eleventh biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in San Francisco. Social activities for the time were postponed and interest centered in the Bay City.

There was much entertaining of an informal nature up North between the business sessions, and friends from Los Angeles and eastern cities were guests at house parties and teas.

However, now that the excitement is over, local hostesses are perfecting plans for dinners, luncheons and other forms of pleasing entertainment for the large number of delegates who will leave San Francisco today for this city, where they will pass the remaining summer months in the land of sunshine and flowers.

Beach parties will also be popular and long auto jaunts into the picturesque canyons will figure in the attractive programme.

House Party.

Returning From France.

First Lieutenant Adna R. Chaffee, Jr., and Mrs. Chaffee, who have been in France for a year, will start August 7 for America. If present plans carry, they will come to Los Angeles and visit their parents, Lieut.-Gen. and Mrs. Adna R. Chaffee, at their home, No. 987 Magnolia avenue.

Lieut. Chaffee has been attending the School of Equitation in Saumur, France, with three other young army officers from this country, a courtesy extended to United States army officers by the French government.

In Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Carpenter, with Mr. and Mrs. Shelley Tolhurst, are in Italy. Their tour of the world will conclude about October.

Miss Fanny Todd Carpenter, who has been visiting friends in Boston, New York, Lake Louise and Banff Springs, is again at home. She is with her grandmother, Mrs. George Wilshire, at the family home, on West Twenty-seventh street.

Mrs. Wilshire and Miss Carpenter are expecting the latter's brother, Clarence Carpenter, for the summer. Mr. Carpenter has a large banana plantation in Honduras.

In Paris.

Mrs. Dan McFarland, with her attractive and vivacious young daughter, Miss Sally, when last heard from were in Paris. Their trip has been prolonged several months and they will probably not return for several months yet.

At Redondo.

Honeymoon Ends.

Dr. Francis C. Ferry and his bride, formerly Miss Lela A. Douglas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Douglas of No. 175 North Wilcox avenue, Hollywood, have returned from a delightful honeymoon trip through Southern California. They are domiciled at No. 1633 Hobart boulevard, where they will receive their friends after August 1.

At "Mission Play."

About forty guests from Hotel Beverly Hills recently enjoyed the "Mission Play" at San Gabriel. Following the performance, which was much enjoyed, supper was served at the hotel.

Fiftieth Anniversary.

The fiftieth wedding anniversary of Col. and Mrs. E. S. Ormsby of No. 732 Rampart street, was celebrated yesterday by about forty relatives, who were guests at a dinner given by Col. and Mrs. Ormsby. The home was elaborately decorated with hundreds of yellow flowers. Mr. Ormsby's only sister, Mrs. C. F. Bliven of Santa Cruz, read an original poem with a synopsis of their life, and Mrs. William Shofner sang several vocal selections. The guests marched into the dining-room to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengren," played by Miss Venita Consigny, granddaughter of Col. and Mrs. Ormsby. Mr. and Mrs. Ormsby will soon leave for an extended eastern trip.

Rev. Joseph Glass read the service which was followed by breakfast served to relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Halloran left immediately for a honeymoon trip to Lake Tahoe, San Francisco and Oakland.

Sweet Pea Luncheon.

Characterized by an originiality that rendered it particularly charming, the luncheon given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Walter Lee Purviance, at her apartments in the Kenesaw, was one of the season's most pleasing social events. A handsome fancy luncheon set was used on the long mahogany table, and embellishment of the center was a cut glass basket filled with pink sweet peas and maidenhair fern, and placed about the apartment were brass jardinieres filled with Shasta daisies. # Pre-Inventory

On Monday, July 8th, We Inaugurate This Great Semi-Annual Event with Greatest

BUT few words other than our special offerings are necessary with regard to this great event. To tell you of all the Pre-Inventory bargains to be found here Monday would require ten pages to describe them. In going over our stocks preparatory to inventory, we find that we have many odd lots, short lengths and remainders that we do not wish to enter on our invoice sheets. So to insure a speedy exit we have named prices positively without parallel or precedent.

A Garment Sacrifice That Means

It is almost necessary to apologize for selling this collection of high grade coats, suits and dresses at such a ridiculously low price. They cannot be criticized for either style, construction or beauty. But we are determined to close out all broken assortments before inventory, so have reduced the regular prices to a figure that will compel women to buy.

All are the best possible values at the regular prices quoted. Nicely finished and in the newest styles, and at this Pre-Inventory price we anticipate a selling without precedent.

SOCIETY events which clustered about the nation's holiday evinced the spirt of the season, both in their entertainment and in the motif of their decorative material. Among these events the tri-color effect was most charmingly carried out in the reception given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. E. W. Tucker and Mrs. L. Wilkinson at the home of Mrs. Tucker on Walnut street. Mrs. Anthony Rohacek, a sister of Mrs. Tucker, recently arrived from the East, was the complimented guest at the gathering which numbered 100 or more. Silken flags and profusions of blossoms in the same patriotic shades formed a gay setting for the dainty white frocks of the guests. In the reception hall and stairway red geraniums and blossoms of blue and white vied with the Stars and Stripes. In the living-room geraniums, blue hydrangeas and Shasta daisies produced the tri-color effect and in the dining-room festoons of ribbons in patriotic shades were combined with flags and blossoms for the desired effect. The approach of the national holiday was also suggested in the favors which were baby firecrackers tied with red, white and blue ribbon. The playing of patriotic airs by Miss Shepherd formed a pleasing feature of the entertainment. Other musical numbers were tenor solos contributed by R. J. White with Mrs. George Tucker accompanying.

Another delightful gathering for which decorations were arranged in red, white and blue was the party given Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Darnell of Mulberry street to the young married people's class of the First Methodist Church.

Indian agency and Miss Dorothy Daniels talked on the childhood of Henry Dickinson Smith and read a sketch of his life prepared by his mother. A letter was also read from Miss Marie P. Lyman, the absent president of the society. During the social hour which followed the programme refreshments were served by the Phi Alpha girls.

Girls! Girls! We Can All Stop Wearing Dress Shields!"

Rip Them Out—Here's PERSPI-NO

I'll never wear dress shields again, when I can get that remarkable powder, PERSPI-NO. No stir-ee! Never again for me! I just put a little in my arm-pits, with the pad that comes with each box, and then my glory begins!

No More Perspiration Like This, and No More Dress Shields if You Use PERSPI-NO.

No matter what the weight of your clothing, no matter how hot and stuffy it may be indoors, you need never be afraid of perspiring any more in your arm-pits than you do on the back of your hand, if you use PERSPI-NO.

It's a marvelous yet a simple powder that anybody is safe in using. It keeps your arm-pits just as fresh and dry and natural as any other portion of your body.

Use PERSPI-NO and hot theatres, dance-halls, and social affairs will have no more terrors for you in arm-pit perspiration. It's good-bye dress shields forever. Satisfaction guaranteed.

To Discard Freckles, Tan, Pimples, Wrinkles

[From Feminine World.]

The use of creams on the face sometimes causes hair to grow. You can avoid the risk of acquiring superfluous hair by avoiding cosmetics and using mercolized wax instead. There is nothing better for any condition of the skin, as the wax actually absorbs the offensive cutice. The latter is naturally replaced by a clear, smooth, healthy complexion, full of life and expression. It's the sensible way to discard a freckled, tanned, over-red, blotchy or pimpled skin. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's and apply nightly like cold cream, erasing in the morning with soap and water. It takes a week or so to complete the transformation.

The ideal wrinkle eradicator is made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in the solution brings almost instantaneous results.

—If we were able to place before you these 129 garments that we purchased for this extraordinary sale, were able to show you the charming ways in which they are made, the beautiful materials, and could explain to you that they are copies of fine Paris models, not too extreme, but dresses that any woman would be proud to possess, even at the full prices, you would catch our enthusiasm.

—We must rely upon this announcement, these few pictures of a few of the styles to impress you with the importance of the event.

—It was a case of where the manufacturer needed the money more than he did the merchandise, both samples and surplus, and he was glad to take spot cash for the entire lot.

—Silk dresses! but my, what beautiful ones. And some of them adorned with lace over-jacket, which is almost worth in itself the price we are asking for the entire dress.

BENEFITS THAT ARE UNEXPECTED ALWAYS FOLLOW

Toning of System Brings Better Health to All Parts of Body.

FROM FAR AWAY TEXAS

Houston, Tex.

The C. M. C. Stewart Sulphur Company, Seattle.

Dear Sirs:—Through the generosity of your Mr. Stewart, I was enabled to begin taking Sulphurro last October. It has kept my stomach and digestion in excellent condition, improved my circulation, and prevented me from taking cold through a severe winter.

I therefore feel very grateful for the benefits derived from the use of Sulphurro, and have recommended it to a number of other sufferers. As there have been a number of cases of spinal meningitis in this city, my family have been taking Sulphurro as a preventive of that dread disease. Two of my family have been benefited in ways not expected. My niece was sufferig from an incipient case of catarrh, which caused irritation of the throat and constant sneezing. This has been entirely relieved.

J. C. Harrall has been relieved of chronic sore throat and indigestion by the use of Sulphurro. Your remedy, therefore, has my unqualified indorsement as a great preserver of health, and I hope its use will be as extensive as you could wish.

J. M. COTTON.

1418 Rosalie avenue.

The experience of Mr. Cotton, in finding that Sulphurro cures where benefit had not been dreamed of, has been that of hundreds of other users of Sulphurro. By cleansing, purifying and invigorating the system, Sulphurro restores health to all its parts. Mrs. F. J. Mueller of Bothell, near Seattle, was taking Sulphurro for Rheumatism, when her blindness, covering the greater part of 37 years, was cured.

A well-known Mason and lodge man of Seattle was taking Sulphurro for stomach trouble, which it cured, but it also cured his deafness. He now hears as well as he did twenty years ago.

Sulphurro at all druggists; bottles 50 cents and $1.00. Booklet free upon application to the C. M. C. Stewart Sulphur Company, 71 Columbia street, Seattle.

GOSSIP OF THE FOREIGN STAGE.

LONDON, June 21.—Something like a month still separates us from Goodwood Day, which is the recognized end of the summer theater campaign. But as Tree remarked yesterday, "We are all more or less tired and not a little stale." This is the excuse he gave for his determination not to do Somerset Maugham's version of "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme' during the few weeks still at his disposal. "We have been hard at work rehearsing it," he declared, "but the spirit has gone out of us, and you can't whip a dead, or at least a moribund, horse into activity. So I have decided to jog along with 'Oliver Twist,' although business is by no means brilliant. That will carry us to the second week in July, and then I shall put up the shutters. I need a holiday as much as anybody, and the responsibility of producing a new play when everybody is thinking of the river, Ascot or the country-side, is too great. Better a closed theater than an empty one."

I hinted a little time ago that Tree had veered back to Louis N. Parker's historical play, "Drake" for his autumn production. That he has now practically settled to do in September, he himself going on the road in repertoire. His difficulty is to find a suitable actor for the title role. His earlier selection was Oscar Asche or Robert Loraine. The first, however, is coining money in Australia with "Kismet," the second is under contract with George Tyler to cross the Atlantic two months hence. Nevertheless Tree has in his mind somebody else whose name for the moment he declined to reveal. While I was waiting in Tree's dressing-room for his arrival, Phyllis Terry sauntered in with the manuscript of "Drake" in her hands, which she had evidently been asked to read, with the view of her playing the principal feminine character. She threw it carelessly upon the table with the remark that as Tree was five minutes late she wouldn't bother waiting for him. I am very much afraid that Miss Phyllis is suffering from that unfortunate malady which attacks so many young actors and actresses who have suddenly leapt into popularity, namely, swollen-headedness. She has been rather severely handled by the experts over her performance in "The Amazons." She explains the circumstance by the suggestion that having exhausted their stock of complimentary adjectives there was nothing left for them but to fall back upon less flattering phrases. The real truth is that, clever and charming as she is, she has not yet the experience to make the best use of her undoubted talents. So far, also, she has failed to show that she possesses the crowning gift of humor, one of the most delightful attributes of her famous aunt, Ellen Terry. It is so refreshing to discover in a new aspirant to histrionic honors even the slightest semblance of originality and of emotional power that we are, I fear, apt to carry our feelings of enthusiasm to excess. Time, however, will show whether this revulsion is bound to come sooner or later, when we begin to measure the novice's talent by the standard set by genuinely great artists. Among promising juveniles Phyllis Terry holds a particularly high position, but it is foolish to speak of her, as some have done, as a heaven-inspired genius. As a matter of fact, the acting honors in the revival of "The Amazons" went to Marie Lohr, who gave a marvelously finished representation of Lady Thomasine. I am glad to be able to say that the piece has got home with the public and promises to bring Charles Frohman's season at the Duke of York's to a satisfactory conclusion.

Charles Klein, you will be pleased to hear, is thoroughly pleased with the reception given to "The Third Degree," now renamed "Find the Woman,' at the Garrick. He witnessed the first performance from the back of the stage box and in answer to a general summons, allowed himself to be dragged in front of the footlights by Arthur Bourchier after the final fall of the curtain. Busy paragraphists announced that he had attended the last rehearsals; in making the statement they relied, however, upon their all too vivid imaginations. Although the opportunity was given him, had he wished to avail himself of it, Klein did not enter the theater until the orchestra had started the overture to the piece. He told me afterwards that some of the changes effected in it by Bourchier surprised him not a little; he was bound, on the other hand, to confess they were justified by the manner of their reception by the audience. For instance, in America, the suicide in the first act was accomplished off; at the Garrick it is done coram populo and certainly finishes an effective climax to a sensational incident. Further, the last act was given in the version played in Australia, the services of Julius Knight, who produced the piece over there, having been requisitioned for the occasion. All's well that ends well and Klein has Bourchier's assurance that the advance booking is of so gratifying a nature as to indicate a substantial success. Klein remains in England until the middle of next month, when he sails for New York in order to start rehearsals of his new play, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," the scenery for which, he tells me, is already completed.

Renee Kelly, who hails from your side, having, I believe, done some excellent work with the drama players, made quite a hit at the Criterion last Tuesday evening. The piece didn't, but that's a detail. She appeared as the heroine of Lechmere Worrall's farce-comedy "Ann." Although in the earlier scenes she overacted considerably, punctuating her points with little squeaks and squeals, she in the end captured the good will of the spectators. If we did not care for "Ann" as a whole it contained, I am constrained to say, at least two scenes so admirably and feelingly conceived and executed that they stood out from the rest of the piece. Lewis Waller and Madge Titheradge occupied a box and after the performance we all went off to supper at the Automobile Club. Prosperity has done nothing to spoil Waller: he is the model of geniality and camaraderie. He is full of his experiences in America and advising everyone with the slightest pretentions to ability to go over there. Among the pieces he has lately secured is one by Lechmere Worrall himself, which is, in Waller's opinion, vastly superior to "Ann." It has a splendid part for Madge Titheradge, who naturally is extremely anxious it should be produced without delay. I gather, however, that it will not be Waller's first production at Daly's in the fall. He has also acquired a serious comedy called "The Happy Prodigal" by Ernest Denny, who six years ago wrote "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy" for Marie Tempest. Further he has purchased a thirty-eight-horse-power Daimler motor car, luxuriously fitted. Altogether, he is fairly on the crest of the wave of prosperity.

Contrast with this the fate of Leslie Stuart, who has just filed his petition in bankruptcy. I suppose Stuart has in his time made as much money as any living English composer. Unhappily he has consistently shown an extraordinary faculty for squandering it. "Florodora" alone must have brought him a little fortune; besides that piece he has to his credit "The Silver Slipper," "The Schoogirl," "Havana," "Peggy," and other successful operas. In addition he has written quite a number of popular songs, the sale of which must have brought him in a pretty penny. Despite all this he has of late years had the greatest difficulty in keeping his head above water. "Easy come, easy go" has been his motto all through life, and now, when nearing 50, he has to pay the penalty.

Since the withdrawal of "The Chocolate Soldier," Michael Faraday has done none too well at the Lyric. Neither of his later productions, "Nightbirds" and "The Five Frankforters," has brought much grist to his mill. The usual fortnight's notice is already up for the latter, which will have registered little more than fifty performances. Unless business materially improves the theater will close at the end of this month and remain shut until the beginning of September, when Faraday will produce "Modest Suzanne," which I understand has done well on your side. Whether he will rely upon the American version by Harry and Robert B. Smith I cannot say at the moment, although I fancy the libretto is being worked up by Frederick Fenn, author of "Amasis." The piece was offered to Faraday a considerable time ago, but he then considered it a trifle too sultry for the London public.

William Brady is again in London with his wife, Grace George, for whom he is diligently trying to discover a suitable play. He tells me one of his chief objects is to complete arrangements for the London production of "Bought and Paid For," which he will produce in New York in September. For their first venture, however, they will depend upon the Belgian comedy, "Le Mariage de [illegible]," which, I remember, Haddon Chambers adapted not apparently with much success for your market. Brady is off to Stockholm in the course of a few weeks, taking his wife and [illegible] whom he has promised [illegible]

VIENNA, June 15.—Are modern women as lovely as those of yore? This is the question all Austria has been debating since Dr. Raoul Auernheimer, author of "Roses Out of Reach," "The Great Passions," and numerous other romances and plays, began discussing it, along with the further question—what is the distinctive type of beauty today?

Dr. Auernheimer has come to the conclusion that there are no more beautiful women, but only adorably pretty and charming women. The heroically beautiful Venus de Milo, he says, is dead. She is supplanted by the attractive, coquettish, ravishing Venus de Medici. This tremendous change has taken place in a mere couple of generations.

A dispute has arisen as to whether it is possible for a national type to change in a couple of generations. The objectors say that the apparent change is due to a different fashion of doing the hair, to different hats and dresses. Herr Raschy, a competent authority of Budapest, reforts that the physical type of a locality may change quickly. He quotes a traveler's observations of a village near Pest in 1825. "The natives" said the traveler, "are dark and rather small." Today this village is noted for the high stature of its population, and for their remarkably fair skins.

Dr. Auernheimer holds that beauty has changed not only in Austria-Hun-

VIENNA, June 15.—Are modern women as lovely as those of yore? This is the question all Austria has been debating since Dr. Raoul Auernheimer, author of "Roses Out of Reach," "The Great Passions," and numerous other romances and plays, began discussing it, along with the further question—what is the distinctive type of beauty today?

Dr. Auernheimer has come to the conclusion that there are no more beautiful women, but only adorably pretty and charming women. The classically beautiful Venus de Milo, he says, is dead. She is supplanted by the attractive, coquettish, ravishing Venus de Medici. This tremendous change has taken place in a mere couple of generations.

A dispute has arisen as to whether it is possible for a national type to change in a couple of generations. The objectors say that the apparent change is due to a different fashion of doing the hair, to different hats and dresses. Herr Raschy, a prominent authority of Budapest, remarks that the physical type of a locality may change quickly. He quotes a traveler's observations of a village near Pest in 1825. "The natives" said the traveler, "are dark and rather small." Today this village is noted for the high stature of its population, and for their remarkably fair skins.

Dr. Auernheimer holds that beauty has changed not only in Austria-Hungary, but all over the world. To some extent it is a change of ideals. When a particular beauty-type becomes fashionable women of that type are pushed into the foreground; they become prominent on the stage and are chosen as models by artists and photographers. The type which they have dispossessed in public favor continues to exist, but nobody notices it. Today, says Auernheimer, there live unadmired many women who in the mid-nineteenth century would have been acclaimed as miracles of beauty. The modern world is busy admiring, painting and singing the praises of women whom fifty years ago no one would have noticed.

Auernheimer finds that the beauty idea changes in a series of wave-like movements. The strictly beautiful woman dominated the eighteenth century, and attained her height towards the end of the first French empire. By the thirties of the nineteenth century the type was extinct. In art this was due to the rise of mean, bourgeois ideals.

"Every age," says Auernheimer, "has the women it deserves." Of late there has been a slight revival of beauty. Vienna today has more lovely women than it has had at any time since the generation of the painter, Hans Makart.

But this new Viennese beauty would not have been considered very beautiful in the old days. It would have been considered merely charming. Charm is the characteristic of the modern beauty. The old beauty was sombre, imposing and almost demonic. The charm of the new beauty lies in its brightness, childishness and tenderness. The old beauty tended to be redblond, whereas the new is chestnut. "The modern beauty," says Auernheimer, "inclines to keep a small pet dog, and to wear on its face the exclamation; "it does not bite."

Another characteristic of modern beauty is that it has no profile. That is why it is usually painted full face or three-quarters face. Such an irregular, winsome beauty is not dangerous. The day of the "femme fatale" with pale cheeks and vampire eyes is dead forever. The modern beauty may set a man's heart on fire, but she does so in a spirit of levity. The conflagration does not worry her. She leaves it to be extinguished by the nearest fire brigade.

This theory of beauty is accepted by most of the Austrians who have written on the subject; but they hold that it touches only the surface. It neglects to explain why the modern beauty is charming and not heroic. The reason, says the artist, Rheinlander, is that woman in the early twentieth century exists only in relation to men.

Woman today more than ever needs man, because the difference between poverty and wealth is greater than ever, and the modern beauty seeks the man who will provide her with all she needs. Here the heroic beauty of the past type cannot compete. She is too cold, too austere.

"The woman who attracts man must be coquettish, graceful and adorable." A women of this type gains position and wealth and that enables her to spread her reputation as a beauty. "Today many beautiful girls of the heroic school, die old maids because no man wants them."

Herr Rheinlander describes the modern "femme charmeuse" as "not at all without a heart; indeed with an abnormally big heart; essentially loving and determined to get love. But her big heart is not deep. At the loss of her adored one she will weep her eyes out for a week, and marry next year. The heroic beauty of the old type would perhaps not drop a tear. She would throw herself out of a window, or vanish silently into a convent. The former type charms more because nowadays we prefer passion to constancy. A man prefers to be ecstatically happy for a week rather than to be merely happy for a lifetime."

"The modern beauty," adds Rheinlander, "is the beauty of the perfect eyes and perfect lips. The beauty of a century ago had the perfect nose and perfect chin. Then it mattered how a woman walked; now it matters how she sits on a cushioned sofa. The beauty of a century ago was divine. She came from the heavenly Paradise. The beauty of today comes from the earthly Paradise. It is possible that the angels, tired of divine felicity, may look again on the daughters of men, as they did in biblical time. But the modern sons of men never weary of their adorable dolls, or lift their eyes to heaven."

An entirely different view is given by another Viennese, Herr Jarotsky. The whole world of modern beauty, says Jarotsky, is divided into Raphael types and Rubens types, into divine and profane beauty. All the subtypes come under these headings. For instance the anaemic pre-Raphaelite women of Rossetti belong to the Raphael class; whereas the women of the Titian class should go with the women of Rubens, though they in no wise resemble them. They class with Rubens's women because they are not saints or goddesses, but women.

"Nowadays there are both Raphael women and Rubens women. But the Rubens woman predominates. Modern beauty is losing its alienated touch-me-not character. Beauty dewant to prevent his flying over their property, contending the aeroplanes frighten game and stock. The Paris court has been unable thus far to reach a decision.

Of the Old Heroic Type,
Reddish-blond, with pale cheeks and regular profile—once adored but now passed by in favor of the modern "irregular, winsome beauty," who is "coquettish, graceful and adorable."

Bright and Tender Beauty,
Found in Vienna today—in sharp contrast to the somber, imposing beauty of the past.

aires fame, and photography and paragraphing in society journals. For this it pays a penalty. It sheds its inaccessibility, and becomes the spoil of the mob. Spiritually the modern Rubens beauty is in the same position as a slave girl who is exhibited naked in an eastern market place. All the world knows her and her charms. The charms remain; but by exposure they lose their effectiveness."

For that reason, says Jarotsky, the beauty of today is the most winning, appealing, overpowering beauty the world has known. But it is not the most binding, the most inspiring, or the most salutary. This latter type will never return. Modern society is too much in a hurry to have patience with the majestic and unyielding type. It wants its women to be easy, convenient and near.

"The highest type," concludes Jarotsky, "would be a compound of the Raphael and Rubens beauties. Such a woman would be half goddess and half Nautch girl. There have been such women in history. But they were individuals and not types; and they are likely to remain so."

OVER THE SEA.

Ambassador Whitelaw Reid's son-in-law, John Ward, has bought Dudley House, a historic London mansion.

Prof. Roberts Villani, a well-known teacher of acting in Paris, says that "American students of grand opera are the most enthusiastic of all foreigners who come to Paris to learn how to act their parts after they have finished the vocal study of an opera. They make the finest actresses in the world."

When Sir Rufus Isaacs was a boy his parents planned a university education for him. Not liking the prospect, he ran away to sea. Later he went into a broker's office and made a failure there. Then he fell in love. His wife (then his sweetheart) persuaded him to read law, reading it herself with him. He was called to the bar in 1887. Now he's Attorney-General, Privy Councilor and a Cabinet Minister.

The Crown Prince and Princess of Prussia, who have been married now for seven years, are about to receive the wedding present toward which a number of Prussian cities contributed. It is an immense silver candelabrum and table ornament four feet high. It has taken seven years to make it and is said to be the finest art piece in silver that has been made in a century.

One of the new birthday peers, Francis Allston Channing, was born in Boston, Mass., 71 years ago. He is a son of the late Rev. W. H. Channing; Dr. William Ellery Channing was his uncle. He is an Oxford man and a barrister. He sat in the House of Commons a number of years for the eastern division of Northamptonshire, and has been a Baronet since 1905.

The honor of being the chief dandy in Paris has just been transferred to the playwright, Henry Bernstein. Through an indiscretion on the part of his valet men about town learned with awe this week that M. Bernstein is the possessor of 147 pairs of trousers, to which a large separate room has been assigned.

SIGNAL OFFICER PIERCE RECEIVING A MESSAGE FROM GEN. McCLELLAN AT THE ELK MOUNTAIN STATION AFTER THE BATTLE OF ANTIETAM

Son, These Are Your Ancestors

They were real men; they believed in their cause and they laid down their lives to uphold it. In hundreds of thousands they died for love of country. But, my boy, the world has seen enough of war. The rule of steel is ending.

The world is growing saner—there are better ways of expressing patriotism and courage. Enough men have died for love of country. What we want now are men to live for its glory—not to spill their blood in vain, but to send its tide leaping to accomplishment, to upbuilding, to creating, to fortifying national honor. I want you to read every page of this great history of a sad and mighty conflict of brother against brother and keep in your heart and in your mind the lesson that it teaches.

The Long-Lost, Original
Brady War Photographs
With Elson's New History

belong in every home. They are the only real records of a real war. Brady, a pupil of Daguerre and one of the first American photographers, conceived the idea of photographing the Civil War from the first scenes to its sorrowful close. Hardly had the echoes of the fight at Sumter died away than he secured permission from the Government to carry his camera into the lines. With a corps of able assistants, he hurried to all points of activity and not only caught with his wonderful lens the very enlistments themselves, but he photographed as well every Commander, focused his camera upon the armies in action, brought it into the hospitals, the prisons, trained it upon the gunboats, the forts. He was everywhere. He saw everything.

No history can tell you one-tenth as much, for no historian witnessed what Brady's camera saw, no combatant could be everywhere.

Lost for fifty years these magic plates have been discovered in perfect condition and now the world at last knows the real truth of war—the real truth of the greatest of all wars.

Have You Given The Vehicle Battery Question Adequate Consideration?

No matter how distinctive in elegance, how graceful in design, how easy of operation or luxurious is an "Electric," it is of little use if its propulsion power is weak and undependable. When all's said and done, the Battery Question is the one that overshadows all other considerations.

Argument About Women.

PA JONES DISCUSSES MA'S GLAD OUTFIT AND VANITY.

"YOU are certainly a wonder, Mary, dear! You are certainly a wonder!" smilingly declared Pa Jones as ma came downstairs decked out for an afternoon walk. "I love to sit here and size you up! I love to gaze at you and giggle! You make me smile! You make me grin! You make me——"

"Is that so, Mr. Jones?" chillingly interrupted ma, pulling on a warm-weather glove. "Is there anything the matter with me? Am I really so funny looking? Am I so very different from any other woman? Am I——"

"Not on your life, Mary! Not on your life, darling!" was the chuckling rejoinder of pa. "You are all alike. You are all just the same! There is no more difference in you than there is in twin babies dressed in pink ribbon! You are all vain! You are all stuck on yourselves! Your only aim on earth is trying to look pretty! You wouldn't be happy if you didn't look like a three-ring circus! Your heart would sigh in sadness——"

"Of course, you know all about it!" broke in ma, throwing the glare eye on the old man. "You are an authority on such things! You can't tell when a woman is stylishly dressed and when she isn't! You can't tell a modern hat from an antique bonnet! And, as for vanity, I have never seen a woman half so soft and silly as a man who thinks he is sweet! I——"

"Don't you believe it, sweetheart! Don't you believe it!" exclaimed pa, continuing his critical scrutiny. "Don't you be fooled like that for one minute! Do you think that any man on earth would suffer the pain that you women suffer just for the sake of looking like the skeletonized Belinda in a fashion book? Do you think that any man would go through the torture of changing his shape to make it fit a new-fangled gown? No, dearie! No, little girl! Neither would he wear a wad of fake hair on his head that looks like a catcher's mit and then take headache powders the rest of the night to cure his cranial throbbing! He has no——"

"Your argument is very convincing!" pettishly interjected ma, drawing on the other glove. "It sounds like cigar store logic! You must think that I have never seen your simple sex sacheting up the street! Even now I can see his lavender socks, his pants turned up over his bony shins, and his hat shoved back on his head to show the girls his beautiful hair! Then there is the cute little moustache that he tries to coax out with a pair of tweezers! Also the ribbon in his oxford ties instead of shoestrings! If that isn't vanity of the vainest kind, then I don't know what vanity is! Besides——"

"They are exceptions and not the rule, madam! They are exceptions and not the rule!" stoutly asserted pa, defending the beloved brotherhood. "Where there is one man who wants to look like the Georgie in a society novel there are a million who don't need a Lunacy Commission! Where there is one who fixes himself up like a box of candy there are thousands who dress like a bale of hay! Most any esteemed citizen would rather be armor plate than a fashion plate, so, you see, you are wrong again! You have got another guess! You have got another think! You have got to admit that woman is the real vanity article! You have——"

"Do you think a woman is vain just because she dresses well?" demanded ma. "Do you think——"

"I didn't say so, Mrs. Jones! I didn't say so!" replied pa. "I didn't warble anything of the kind! I said that a woman was vain because she couldn't be anything else! It is not only her nature to want to dress well, but she has to pile it on! Can't she dress well in something else besides an abbreviated gown that is too tight for an emaciated beanpole? Can't she dress well without wearing an extra mop of hair? Can't she dress well without wearing stockings that look like if she didn't have any stockings on? Can't she dress well without wearing slippers with a heel that resembles a carpet tack? Can't she——"

"Haven't you said enough, Mr. Jones?" put in ma, showing signs of impatience. "You are beginning to make me a trifle weary! You are talking about something that is just as familiar to you as the dead language! You are chirping a subject that——"

"You don't like to hear it, Mrs. Jones? You don't like to hear!" persistently returned Pa. "You don't like to be told of your faults! It makes you peevish to hear the truth! It annoys you to hear the gospel of vanity! But that is not all, sweet child! That is not all! Besides your inch-wide dress, store hair and invisible hose you have to have a hat that would cover a haystack! One quarter of it would answer the purpose, but as I said before, vanity makes you heap it on! You also have to have ear-rings that look like a string of Christmas tree balls, and wouldn't be real happy if you weren't carrying that handful of iron attached to a chain. In connection with the junk you call a vanity bag, you have to have another bag, and perhaps yet another bag! In fact, when you go out you have so much to carry, it is a wonder to me that you don't take Willie's express wagon and——"

"You make me sick, Hen Jones!" cried Ma, looking around for little Fido and starting for the door. "I never heard such a lot of silliness in my life! Man is more vain than any woman that ever lived, and you are the vainest of the bunch! I have seen you smile at yourself in the mirror and——"

"What's that, madam? What's that, woman?" indignantly shouted Pa. "Sing that once more! Chirp it over again to me! Do you mean to say that I have got the vanity microbe? Do you mean to say——"

"That's just exactly what I said," replied Ma, "and I mean every word of it! You are not only vain, but conceited as well, and always have been!"

With this cruel jab Ma passed out, and a moment later she was gracefully rambling up the street, carrying a parasol, a vanity bag and other fads, and also leading little Fido.

The vanity argument was apparently soon forgotten, and everything was quiet in the Jones home until the following evening, when suddenly there came a wild yelp from the second story.

"Where's my dress suit, Mary? Where's my dress suit?" excitedly shouted Pa. "What did you do with it this time? Have you given it to some colored man to wear while collecting ashes? Have some of the Smith family been around here for another donation? Have——"

"What do you want a dress suit for, Henry?" asked Ma, going to the scene of the riot. "Won't your other suit——"

"What do you suppose I want it for, madam? What do you suppose I want it for?" strenuously returned Pa. "What would any man want a dress suit for if he were going to a banquet? Do you think I am going to dig in the garden? Do you imagine for one single second that I am going to mow the lawn? Do you——"

"If you are going to a banquet," interposed Ma, "I suppose you will want your dress shirt, and your patent leather ties and——"

"Your only aim on earth is trying to look pretty!"

"Of course I will, Mrs. Jones! Of course I will!" replied Pa with a pitying glance at Ma. "Do you think that I would wear a negligee shirt and a pair of gum boots with a dress suit? Have you a vague idea——"

"And also your diamond studs?" continued Ma, trying to hide a lurking smile, "and your diamond cuff-buttons, and your new cane and a rose-bud for your buttonhole, and——"

"I certainly will, madam! I certainly will, dear child!" answered Pa. "You are wise at last! You have actually awakened! I want everything that goes with a glad occasion! I want——"

"And yet," said Ma in a cold, hard voice, "it was only yesterday that you said that you were not vain! You declared that woman was more vain than man, and that——"

It was then that the real music started and the dance began, and Pa got to the banquet just in time to hear them sing "Auld Lang Syne."

JOHN H. NAYLOR.

"Where is my dress suit, Mary? Where is my dress suit?"

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Brig.-Gen. George S. Anderson, commander of the Department of the Visayas in the Philippines, will retire from active service on his own application October 1.

Dr. W. F. Sharrar of Delphi, Ind., is said to be the first person born in the town of Mount Union, Pa. He attended school at the first schoolhouse built in Mt. Union, and later, in the 50's, attended the Shirleysburg Academy. He studied medicine with Dr. Robert Hunter, and attended Jefferson Medical College in 1860-61.

John Warren was recently pardoned from the Connecticut State prison after having been confined there fifty-three years for murdering his unfaithful wife. He asked the warden if he might take with him the old cobbler's bench he had used for thirty years.

Alphonso L. Sherburne, 75 years old, for the last twenty-four years janitor of the apartment-house known as the Hotel Agassiz, Boston, announces his intention to retire, having accumulated $150,000 through the friendship of Maj. Henry L. Higginson, financier and owner and chief tenant of the hotel.

Frank J. Egan, vice-president and general manager of the Brazil Railway Company, is visiting his father in Kansas City. The father formerly held the position which the son now fills. Mr. Egan has charge of the 7000 miles of Brazil railway. The railway company, which is backed by English, French and American capital, is now developing the industrial resources of Brazil. The company is developing cattle ranches, erecting sawmills and investing money in all industrial lines. Mr. Egan also has this work in charge.

That the Hatfield-McCoy feud, one of the oldest and bloodiest in the history of the West Virginia-Kentucky border, has ended for all time was indicated last week when Dr. H. J. Hatfield, cousin of "Devil Anse" Hatfield, leader of the Hatfield clan, received a telegram from A. J. McCoy, leader of the McCoy faction, indorsing his candidacy for Governor of West Virginia.

The telegram read:

"Greetings to Dr. Hatfield from a McCoy. Congratulations. That you may win in November is my desire."

Dr. Hatfield was nominated at the Republican primaries last week.

Free Prescription That Can Be Prepared At Home Without Expense.

Grace Benson, famous for the marvelous beauty of her hands and arms in a recent interview says: "If I could tell every woman about the prescription that has caused all this talk about my hands and arms they could every one of them make their hands and arms just as beautiful as mine. I am glad to have the opportunity to give my receipt free to the world. It will help every woman to improve her personal appearance."

When I asked her if she would allow me to publish the prescription, she quickly answered: "Certainly, only too glad to have you do it." Turning to a desk she wrote it on a slip of paper and handed it to me. Here it is: "Go to any drug store, get an empty 2-oz. bottle, also a 1-oz. bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into the 2-ounce bottle, add ¼ ounce of witch hazel, then fill with water. Apply night and morning.

She further said: "This prescription touches the skin transparent and removes all defects, such as freckles, tan, sun spots, roughness and ruddiness. A single application works a marvelous transformation. Where low collars are worn it can be applied to the neck with equally as startling results. It is absolutely harmless, and will positively not stimulate or produce a growth of hair.

MRS. HENRY ASHURST.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Among the newcomers in the Senatorial set are Henry Fountain Ashurst and his wife, who was born Elizabeth Lillian McEvoy, a native of Ireland, but for the past fifteen years a resident of Arizona.

"My residence in Arizona," said Mrs. Ashurst, "came after those exciting days and when railroads had replaced the trails, and modern civilization had penetrated through the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Left a widow with a young child, I obtained a position in the Weather Bureau and resided in Washington for a few years. In 1898, I was sent as the first woman observer in the Weather Bureau, at Flagstaff, Ariz., and I remained there until 1904, when my marriage to Mr. Ashurst occurred. I count that time when I was the sole woman at the bureau, with a staff of young men under me, among the interesting and profitable years of my life. It was such a wonderful experience, coming as I had, first from the lovely quiet country about Kilkenny in Ireland and later from Baltimore and Washington. The grandeur of the mountains and the free, unrestrained life of the West, with its exact valuation of real things and the ignoring of artificial ones, made a deep impression and one which has never failed me. Many young men came to Arizona in those days in poor health and fortune, and it was as if the entire country was organized into a vast co-operative society. I have always felt much compassion for young men in a strange country and among those with different ways, and independently of my office in the Weather Bureau, which was absorbing enough, there was, and in fact there is still, plenty of philanthropic work to do. It is our boast that the climate furnishes one of the most glorious natural sanitariums in the world, and our broad plains, mountain ranges, and varied industries, abundant occupation for a livelihood.

Mrs. Ashurst is making her first visit to Washington after many years' absence and she is taking note of the great improvements in the Capitol city. She finds some old friends, though Washington has perhaps even a more transient population than the new cities of the West and to be away for fifteen years unmistakably means to meet a city of strangers. It is probable that she will remain here all summer, as the latest verdict appears to be that both House and Senate will sit until September.

Mrs. Ashurst was born and reared in that lovely part of Ireland in what is known as the Dublin district, Kilkenny. She was educated in the Convent of the Presentation in that city and possesses all the accomplishments of the gently born daughter of Erin. She came to this country first to visit an aunt in Baltimore and married there Milton G. Raines of Virginia. After his death, she entered the government service in Washington.

"My home city, called popularly the marble city," said Mrs. Ashurst, "has rich treasures historically and architecturally considered. In dark ages for Erin, it was the stronghold of Dermott of the Foreigners and was given by him to Stronbow as part of the marriage dower of his daughter, the lovely Eva. Afterwards it passed through purchase into the possession of the Butlers, Lords or Ormonde. A parliament was held in Kelkenny in 1367 to endeavor to take steps to prevent the ancient Irish race from being absorbed into the aliens. It was made a penal offense for an Englishman to wed an Irish woman and it was a crime to wear the ancient garb or to follow the old Irish costumes. Today it is beautiful and quiet and attracts the attention of all visitors. The Cathedral, the Round Tour, the Black Abbey, a thirteenth century foundation of the Dominicans are well known. After many vicissitudes, this famous shrine Black Abbess has again come into the possession of the Dominicans and they have restored its former glory. From the market place, the visitors may enter the Castle the noble seat of the Butlers and one of the stattliest palaces in Ireland. The picture gallery is the pride of the family and is accessible to the public. It has a marvelous Murillo, Saint John, Coreggo's Marriage of Saint Catherine and Giordana's Assumption of the Virgin. Few spots in Ireland have more attractive environments than Kilkenny. From the picturesque little river Nore, the Castle is seen at its best and then the silver stream wanders off among flowery fields and along fringes of willows and junipers. I am always hoping to find time to get back to my old home but we are very busy in Arizona and in Washington, I have found many agreeable ways to pass the time."

Mrs. Ashurst has one son, John Russell Raines, now studying in Arizona. He will come here to pass the vacation in case the sessions of Congress prevent the Senator and his wife from taking more than a flying trip west. Mrs. Ashurst may be described as a woman to whom philanthropy and works of mercy have become a profound study of all causes leading to illness and to poverty, and she is particularly tender toward young men whom loneliness or feeble health or association with evil companions has given the terrible alcoholic habit. Arizona has not more than its average of these, but they appeal strongly to Mrs. Ashurst, and she is known through the length of the Territory for her kindness and practical aid. Like all of her race, she is deeply religious and one of the most broadminded. If she finds one in whom she is interested is of her own faith, the Catholic, or has been and fallen away from it, she strives most earnestly to reawaken his religious feelings. If he belongs to another faith, she is just as anxious that he should return to its active service, and she believes most firmly that of all the aids which can be brought to rescue young men from bad habits, religion is the most powerful. Had she means she would establish a home for such as have fallen by the wayside and need a helping hand to get back to health and a means of earning a living.

"Our home city, Prescott," said Mrs. Ashurst, speaking of her devotion to the home of her adoption, "is no different from the popular idea of Arizona, that I wish more eastern people would visit it. In the heart of the mountains and lying very high, we have one of the most modern and attractive of towns, with a population of about 6000. We have mountain fountains in our public squares and water of the most perfect pure, cool and abundant. The water comes from the mountains [illegible] eighteen miles away, and no

"Our home city, Prescott," said Mrs. Ashurst, speaking of her devotion to the home of her adoption, "is different from the popular idea of Arizona that I wish more eastern people would visit it. In the heart of mountains and lying very high, it is one of the most modern and progressive of towns, with a population of about 6000. We have mountains in our public fountains in our public parks and water of the most perfect quality, cool and abundant. The pines come from the mountains fifteen miles away, and no ice could make it so cool and inviting as it is just from the pipes. Our community is the center of our vast mining section, and we are a very wide-awake people. The State is rich in minerals and seems inexhaustingly so, and the industry is of prime importance. It is among the richest copper-producing sections of the world and has a good share of the precious metals, gold and silver. The mines add to the picturesqueness of life and will make the State more or less the scene of adventure and the theater of those who are seeking the foot of the rainbow. Another touch of picturesqueness comes from the great Indian reservations. We have the Zunis and the Hopis, and they are fascinating tribes in many ways. The Hopis are a gentle sort of people, though their snake dances and other wierd rites give one a creepy feeling just to hear of, still less to see. The famous Navajo reservation is partially within Arizona, and it attracts pilgrims from every part of the world. The pottery is splendid, and is in use in nearly every Arizona household. The rugs and mats are more difficult to procure. The Indians, like the remainder of the present generation, are trying to perform their work easily and with as little expense and as much profit as may be. Consequently, they have abandoned their ancient method of preparing vegetable dyes. Instead, they use minerals, which are quicker, but much inferior to the old ways. The rugs no longer present that clear, deep color as formerly, and I hear they do not withstand sun and rain as old ones. We have also the Colorado Indians and a number of smaller tribes, the Gila, the San Catalina, the Mogollon. The fierce Apaches, under the guard of the United States soldiers, roam their mighty reservations in the east, looking sullen and unhappy as of yore. They were the scourge of the early settlers, and one may hear thrilling tales yet of these bloodthirsty warriors of the plains and their awful propensity to scalp all prisoners."

WOMEN'S WORK, WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY SYDNEY FORD.

THE call of the camp! Have you heard it? Louder and more insistent even than that of the mocking birds that make merry our dawn and twilight these sunny days. More compelling than call to office, or kitchen, or club.

Just at this season, after the Fourth of July festivities, are safely over, one seems suddenly to acquire a very large and active distaste for ordinary, everyday, humdrum duty and is possessed with a desire so strong that it becomes a perfect fever of impatience to shake the city's dust from one's feet, and hie away to mountain camp or beach tent, and live in the open—far, far away from the madding crowd.

To be, as dear old "Ik. Marvel" puts it, "within the hearing of romping brooks, and beneath the shadow of oaks; to lie upon the brook-side and count the white clouds that sail, softly and tranquilly, along the sky; to steep one's soul in a sea of quiet, with nothing floating past, as one lies moored to his thought, but the perfume of flowers, and soaring birds and shadows of clouds."

Sounds restful, doesn't it? That's what a bevy of Y.W.C.A. girls are going to do for a long solid month. Not the same bunch of girls all the time. Oh, dear no! That would be quite too much luxury. They'll take it turn about, in companies of twenty-five for a fortnight at a time. First the juniors—the young girls between the ages of 14 and 18—who will start tomorrow morning bright and early for Switzer's Falls, where the camp has been made ready by a trio of pioneers—Y.W.C.A. secretaries, Miss Margaret Henderson, Miss Sue Barnwell and Miss Ethel Palmer—who preceded them last Thursday to the rendezvous, which is thirteen miles above and beyond Pasadena. When I asked for explicit directions, I was told:

"Go nine miles by stage up the arroyo from Pasadena, and then hike four miles farther over the ridge and there you are under the wide-spreading oaks right on the banks of a running stream."

Miss Barnwell has discovered from somewhere a chef par excellence in the person of "Emmy," a real, genuine, dyed-in-the-wool colored cook, who knows how to make "cohn bread" and all the delicious southern dishes to tempt a jaded appetite.

If you'll believe me, those Y.W.C.A. girls have ordered $100 worth of groceries in a lump to help out on the month's supplies. I have it from perfectly good authority that the bill includes $10 worth of marshmallows—to be roasted in the camp fire of evenings—and heaven knows how much popcorn to be turned into toothsome snowflakes over that same coal-ing camp fire. They are going to sleep on cots right out under the stars and the sheltering branches of the trees, and every girl of them is armed with a shrill police whistle to be sounded in case of alarm, for help from the husky guardians of the peace within calling distance. Every girl has her khaki suit—blouse and bloomers—made by her own fair hands right in the sewing-room of the Y.W.C.A. building. Daytimes they will prowl about the mountain fastnesses, and scout along the streams, and fish for the finny tribe, and ride burros, and read stories, which have been carefully prepared expressly for the occasion by the Y.W.C.A. librarian who has been busy clipping from magazines fascinating tales and making them up into booklets just the handy size to hold when lying lazily in a hammock.

I hear it whispered that these girls will take steps to form a regular camp fire girls' organization. That's the new and popular club you know which takes the place among girls that the famous scout movement has among boys.

Camp Fire Girls of America.

This movement, known as the Camp Fire Girls of America, has spread all over the country, becoming national in character, and is a medium through which American girls from 12 to 20 are to be gradually led to understand and to take pleasure in performing those particular tasks and in fulfilling those distinctive duties which, as civilized women, will soon face them.

The idea of the organizers of the Camp Fire Girls' Association is to invest home duties with a new interest and glamour, and it developed out of the various camps for girls which have been increasing in number very rapidly of late. Not only domestic duties, but rules of health are among its objects. Girls are taught the advantages of co-operation; are inducted into the mysteries and attractions of the gang spirit; are made to know what is happening in the world about them; are taught to become alert and resourceful and efficient.

There are three chief ranks in the order, with certain costumes and order badges evolved in form from the costumes and ceremonies of the American Indian. Fire is taken as emblematical of service and romance. The Torchbearer is the highest rank, and the Wood Gatherer is the lowest, from which the girl advances to that of Fire Maker. While the organization is based on utility, nevertheless, poetry, adventure and emulation are introduced as a stimulus, and to answer that love of romance which is a part of the natural endowment of the normal girl. The chief requirements of the candidate when she enters the organization as a Wood Gatherer are exceedingly practical. For instance, she is required to help prepare and serve at least two meals for camp fire meeting; to mend a pair of stockings, a knitted undergarment and hem a dish towel; keep a classified, written account of all money received and spent; to tie a square knot five times in succession correctly without hesitation; to take an average of at least half an hour daily outdoor exercise; to name the chief causes of infant mortality in summer; to know what to do in the emergency of clothing on fire, fainting, an open cut; to know the principles of elementary bandaging and how to use surgeon's plaster; to know what a girl of her age needs to know about herself; to commit to memory some good song or poem; to know and sing all the words of "My Country 'Tis of Thee"—these are some of the requirements for membership in the Camp Fire Girls of America.

The idea has reached into practically every State in the Union, and is being taken up with enthusiasm in boarding schools, Y.W.C.A.'s, playgrounds, and summer camps and settlements. Dr. Luther H. Gulick, author, educator, and head of the child study department of the Sage foundation, is chairman of the Committee on Organization, which has its headquarters in New York.

She's a Y.W.C.A. Girl.

Miss Jennie Wilson, second daughter of Woodrow Wilson, Democratic nominee for President, is an active worker in the Young Women's Christian Association. She is a member of the National Board of Managers, and last month conducted at Eagle's Mere, Pa., the first student conference for private school girls ever held.

The New Woman in the New East.

A Japanese journalist and writer of authority, Adachi Kinnosuke, writes in an interesting and illuminating way of the new woman in the Far East—of that social revolution in which the oriental women are playing such an important and heroic part. The languorous ladies of Persia are stirring, and in Turkey and Egypt they are already wide awake. The women of the East have farther to go than the women of the West, but they are setting out upon the journey that leads to a larger participation in life. There are more than 250 women physicians practicing medicine in Japan; there are 1,100 women teachers—more than one-third the entire number in the whole empire. The business head of the biggest drug store in Tokio is a woman.

Agnes is Quite Right.

Agnes C. Laut, writing in the Review of Reviews concerning the Panama Canal, points out in vivid words and illuminating figures what this great waterway will mean to the Pacific Coast in general and the metropolis of Los Angeles in particular. In the outset she shrewdly remarks that it goes without saying that Pacific Coast ports are not spending a hundred million dollars on "hot air" and "tall talk," and street-corner prophecies. They have carefully figured out the benefits from the canal in dollars and cents and expect a very definite return from the investment.

Agnes is absolutely correct. California's commercial kings rarely reckon wrong when they compute interest on capital expended.

Women's Clubs in India.

The opening of women's clubs in metropolitan cities and even in country places in India is the order of the day now, observes a native writer in Review of Reviews. Women club together and subscribe for papers and magazines, and in their after-dinner meetings the one that can read reads the latest news and all comment on the recent development of national and even international affairs. In Madras there is not an important place where there is not a woman's association. In Bombay they are abundant and in Bengal they are springing up like mushrooms. The Indian women are invading the precincts of journalism, too. There are many first-class magazines conducted by them, both in English, and in the different vernaculars. The Indian Ladies' Journal, printed in English, is by far the best woman's paper in India. The Bharati is edited by a woman and half a dozen other journals, any one of which would do credit to the periodical literature of any country in the world.

The Domestic Worker.

There's a woman in New York—Mrs. Pearce Bailey is her name—who runs two houses, a city house and a country house, and keeps ten or twelve persons to do the work. She doesn't call them servants, or hired help. She refers to them as domestic workers. She takes issue with Ida Tarbell, Rheta Childe Dorr and other women who write and talk about the hardships of women who go out to domestic service. She holds that they know little or nothing about it by experience, since they do not preside over domestic establishments, whereas, she has had twenty years' experience as a housekeeper, and therefore knows what she is talking about. Mrs. Bailey is strongly of the opinion that domestic workers as a class are in a very independent position. "The women in my house," she says, "have just as nice and pleasant rooms to sleep in as my children do; they have the same food that the family does; they have a place to entertain their friends and they have plenty of liberty. I don't believe I am at all exceptional, either, for in the houses of my friends, and among the people I know, the domestic staff fares much as mine does."

Monument to Noble Woman.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock the ceremony of unveiling the beautiful monument that has been erected in Inglewood Cemetery over the grave of the late Mrs. J. D. Burch, will take place under the auspices of the "We Boys" Sunday-school class of the First Methodist Church, of which she was the founder and teacher for so many years. Dr. Charles Edward Locke will have charge of the ceremony.

A Perilous Pastime.

"For those who have cultivated a conscience in such matters, the reading of modern books has become a perilous pastime," observes a writer in the Atlantic Monthly, in a dissertation on "The Crisis in Taste," as he goes on to point out that Mr. Wells's "Ann Veronica" is in the van of that whole rout of brazen heroines.

One Arthur B. Reeve now breaks into the world of fiction with a detective tale, which has as its heroine Typhoid Mary, the puzzle and despair of the New York Health Department. Mary gives off fatal germs as an onion sheds its odor, and the author uses her as a means to murder the enemy of the hero of the story.

Another Missionary Lost.

Another Methodist missionary is lost to the work—she got married and will live in Montana ever after. Two years ago, when we landed in Shanghai, I chanced to sit next at the hotel table to an attractive young woman who told me she had just come down the Yangtse River from Chinkiang on her way to Edinburgh to attend the International Missionary convention. She was on a year's furlough and would visit her home in the United States, after which she intended to return to China and resume her missionary work. But she won't. She met her fate—up in Montana—and Miss Grace Almeda Crooks that was, known to many Methodist women hereabouts, is now Mrs. John Adam Weinstock, Jr., and her postoffice address is Sula, Mont.

Los Angeles Woman's Will.

The late Mrs. Louise Y. Pratt, who died June 12, remembered in her will several institutions in which women are particularly interested, notably the Protestant Orphans' Home and the Children's Hospital, each of which received a bequest of $5000; the George Junior Republic, $2000, and a special bequest of $1000 to the trustees of Occidental College for the establishment of a scholarship for the assistance, maintenance and education of girl students, to be known as the Shipman scholarship fund, in memory of her brother, Dr. D. M. Shipman.

For Chinese Women.

Great preparations are going forward for the annual picnic for the Chinese women and children of the city, given under the auspices of the various missions. Automobiles will be used to transport the picnickers to Eastlake Park, Mr. Wilcox, proprietor of an auto touring company, acting as chief chauffeur in this capacity, as he did last year. An abundant lunch, with plenty of ice cream and cake, and the piece de resistance of all American dishes to the Chinese—ham sandwiches—will be furnished. Two returned missionaries will address the women, one of whom, Miss Wilcox, did acceptable work in Chinatown here before she went to the foreign field. The merry-go-round will be put in commission to amuse the Chinese children, and there will be boating on the lake.

Wilshire Sunshine Society.

The Wilshire branch of the National Sunshine Society held its last gathering for the summer Tuesday at Hotel Trebor. The branch began its philanthropic work last April, the aim being to furnish a business scholarship fund for boys. A sufficient sum has been realized for one student and the Investigating Committee will report upon the boy selected for this privilege. Officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. Peter McClelland; vice-presidents, Mmes. Paul Ridley, Robert Griffith and Floyd Baker; recording secretary, Miss Emma Jean Wilson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. W. Henderson; assistant secretary, Mrs. Francis Earl Brown; treasurer, Mrs. C. K. Lawton; parliamentarian, Mrs. George Kramer.

SHOP GIRLS' HOMES BAD, SAYS DOCTOR.

This statement was made by Dr. Robert Woods of South End House, Boston, before the Federation of Settlement Workers. It is the conclusion arrived at from a study of the returns of 1000 investigators.

One in which the father and mother are really the head of the family.

Where there is sympathy with the children.

Where there is a real standard of living.

Where rooms are not overcrowded.

Where girls have a certain degree of privacy.

Where there are no boarders.

The most optimistic students of the returns would not place the percentage of such homes at higher than 50 per cent.

"Practically every standard in life has been changed by the entrance of the adolescent girl into industrial life," said Dr. Woods. "The American home has not been able to adapt itself to the girl's introduction into industry.

"The suddenness with which the girl is thrown upon her own resources, and made responsible for her life, is nothing short of cruel, especially when it is considered that certain places of employment almost put virtue on sale.

"The girl's womanly ideal is affected. She looks down upon the stay-at-home woman. She chafes at home authority. She looks upon the home merely as a place to eat and sleep.

"The old attitude between sexes has changed. The old attitude of the girl being sought after is frankly abandoned when a girl wishes to attract a man. This means a real drop in marriage standards.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Jennie Denny, 50 years old, a popular resident of Grand Rapids, Mich., was a member of the graduating class of the Central High School there this year. Mrs. Denny was a teacher in the city schools before her marriage, and as she intends to enter the University of Chicago next fall, she took a short high school course to prepare for the required entrance examinations.

Miss Martha Berry, well known as the founder of the hill schools in the South, is now in Rome, where she has gone, to investigate the Montessori method of education. Miss Berry will visit the Montessori schools in Berlin and Paris.

Miss Alma Hummel, who had been postmistress of Wetmore, Kan., twelve years, left the postoffice building, its equipment and the lot upon which it stands, all of which were owned by her, to the town of Wetmore, a prosperous country community of about 800, about ninety miles northwest of Kansas City.

Martha Hale, an armless girl, ranked the highest of any grammar school graduate in Glenn county, California, this year. This fact was made known when the various schools, of the county, made their reports to the county superintendent. Her general average was 98.9-16 per cent.

Mrs. Laura C. Hammond entered Englewood (Ill.) High School three years ago as "Miss Hammond." She was in short skirts and appeared about 16 years old. She has just graduated near the head of the class, and it now develops that she had been married for thirteen years and is 33 years old. Her ambition is to practice law.

Miss Cecelia Beaux, the artist, of Philadelphia, who has just been given the degree of M.A. by Yale, is the third woman so honored by that institution. Some years ago she received an honorary degree from the University of Pennsylvania. She has just been a guest of Mrs. Arthur T. Hadley, wife of Yale's president. One of Miss Beaux's commissions which brought her fame was the life-size portrait of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, posed in the White House.

Miss Elizabeth Ross has been appointed manager of the household service which has just been established in Jamaica Plains, Mass., by the Women's Municipal League. The enterprise is patterned after the Brattleboro Mutual Aid Association, a neighborhood service which affords mutual aid for the sic

Wherein We Excell Our Forefathers

In none of the articles of intimate, personal use are we so far ahead of Auld Lang Syne, as in the making of the watch, that most faithful servant of mankind and womankind.

We may revere the heirlooms that have come down to us, a heritage from a well-meaning ancestor, but we decline to wear the progenitor's watch.

We have improved on the work of the craftsmen of those days—and are duly thankful.

Elgin, Howard, Hamilton, a trinity of absolutely reliable timepieces, are the American watches we feature, and send forth with a Feagans guarantee behind each.

From Europe we bring among others, the famous gem-set and enamelled watches from the shops of Edouard Hussan of Paris, and those equally famous made by Koehn, both of which are shown here only by Feagans and Company.

A wealth of selection in the musical watches—enamel cameos, Sautoir or Pendant with chains to match. All platinum watches; jeweled Ball watches, bracelet watches, closely paved with perfect diamonds, on platinum, others in 18 karat gold, with gold platinum or leather bracelets attached.

The Feagans' watch story is a continued story with too many chapters for so brief a space as this. We shall be pleased to have you conclude it, at your pleasure, in this store of watch satisfaction.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOVEL.

CHRISTOPHER. By Richard Pryce. Houghton, Mifflin Company, New York.

WHEN the architects of criticism are confronted with such a book as "Cristopher" they are ard put for an adequate means of riting a notice. The easiest and ost fluent way—the way which overs the greatest amount of space nd therefore is universally popular -is to take the story up in detail, omewhat after this manner:

Christopher was a little English oy who lived with his mother in oulogne. His mother was a widow. e had a nurse by the name of rimmer. There were two French oldiers in the house. One of them, robably not properly vaccinated, fell ill with the smallpox. They were fraid Christopher might contract the isease also. But he did not. Later, hristopher went to England with is mother and Trimmer. (Comment nd description of London in 1871.)

This method is eminently unsatisfactory—except to the reviewer. It ives an idea of the book, but at e same time gives no idea of the ook. The same review with words, ates and names changed, would apply to David Copperfield, Barry Lyndon, Pere Goriot, The Gospel According to St. Matthew, or the chronicles f Sir John Mandeville.

On the other hand, a reviewer may imply state, for instance, that Christopher" is a minute life story f an English boy, written in iographical fashion, taking him om his birth at sea to his somehat sentimental attachment to Miss ora St. Jemison. These critics ight add—truthfully enough—that is book is written after the manr of Arnold Bennett, Theodore reiser, Eden Philpotts, H. G. Wells, obert and Stephen French Whitman. And while this characterization f the novel would be accurate, it ould not be fulfilling. Stephen hitman does not write like . Wells; nor does Arnold Bennett ook like either of them. Further-ore, there is little similarity between hitlet and Theodore Dreiser. What he critic would mean, of course, is hat "Christopher" is leisurely, minute in detail, closely woven, delicate, almost lingering, with a plot structure entirely subordinated to the minutiae of human existence.

"Christopher" has called forth from its literary reviewers from Boston to San Francisco principally these two types of criticism. And although I have read many of these specimens of melancholy rhetoric from the newspapers and literary monthlies, I have not found one which has added that final remark which would make their accounts of "Christopher" comprehensive to connoisseurs in modern fiction—namely, that, while "Christopher" may be like Arnold Bennett; while it may be early Victorian; while it may be painstaking and detailed; while it may even show the earmarks of tradition; while it may be romantic, and at times humanely impressionistic; while it may interest and give a fairly vivid picture of Christopher Merrick and those people whose life paths crossed his—it never once attacks at any vital human problem, nor lays any intricate human emotion, portrays any profound human characteristic or adds any data to our knowledge of that mysterious animal, man.

"Christopher" is a book with all the earmarks of a great noel without any of its greatness. While we catch many of the humor of life and of the details which go to make up the existence of existence, we never once plunge beneath the surface unto the undercurrents of human transactions. "Christopher" is a well-written but superficial book. It never once steps outside of the narrow circle of the obvious. And there are times when it plunges into the sticky waters of sentimental melodrama. Therefore, while "Christopher" may be speciously conceived and sapiently written, it is without significance or importance.

A VILLAIN FOR HERO.

A NOVEL which has for its subject a theme which, in the hands of a more competent writer than Evelyn Brentwood, would have resulted in a distinctive piece of fiction, is "Hector Graeme."

Today we cling to the theological superstition that all heroes of novels shall be virtuous. Man is not a virtuous animal, either by nature or instinct. His system is too complex and the result of too many complicated environmental and congenital influences to be entirely free from those desires and actions which experts in morality assure us are detrimental to the species. Even the moralist, no matter how sublime his indifference to temptation, harbors—like all of us—a smoldering admiration for rogues when once he comes to know them and to understand their humanity.

Where, indeed, is that person who does not think back with tenderness to that dashing devil of our youth, Jack Sheppard? And who does not warm up at the memory of Philip Bridoak? But the modern fictional convention is that heroes must be virtuous—criteria for the young of the species, paragons well versed in the moral subtleties of the fathers, beings to be emulated by the republic's rising young voters. If, in our novels we label this man or that man a villain and call down upon him the wrath of God—or what is perhaps worse, the prejudices of the police department—the process is considered a worthy one. If, on the other hand, we label this man or than man a hero, and at the same time make him human and credit to him those weaknesses to which all flesh is heir, we have the amateur professors of criminology hot on our trails. It is always possible, of course, in any work of fiction, to relieve such a situation by bringing about eleventh-hour repentance on the part of our hero, by having him look into the eyes of the Only Woman and see there The Better Things of Life, and having him become, by the ocular process, a New Man.

But the hero of "Hector Graeme" runs foul of no reformative feminine eyes. He starts out a villain, and he dies a villain—a consistent conception, by any student of psychology will tell you. It would have been quite easy for Miss (or is it Mrs.?) Brentwood to have reformed her hero-villain, but she chooses the less-popular—and more accurate—method of permitting him to die wallowing in his bestiality.

Do not misunderstand me: I am making no defense of the book. It is not a convincing work. Though realistic, it seems strained rather than natural realism. Evelyn Brentwood is not a master of the difficult craft of writing. But in her conception of Graeme she shows an originality and a freedom of opinion which are not to be scorned.

A MELANCHOLY "DODO."

JOSEPH IN JEOPARDY. By Frank Danby. The Macmillan Company, New York.

IN "Joseph in Jeopardy," we flounder in the intrigues of the elite. Its pages are full of near-climaxes, near-polygamies. There are times when we are brought to the very precipice of what is known in polite circles as a statutory offense. In fact, the whole book is an elaborate preparation for the great adventure between Dennis Pas-Wayne, the widowed sister of the Honorable Cosmo Merritt, son of Lord Loughborough.

Both parties to this intrigue were opulent and dashing creatures. The widow, we learn, had a Greek head and a small foot. She was slender, pale as a statue, and possessed but seven and twenty years. She dressed magnificently, and as she look at herself in her mirror, there was not a line nor a curve that she would have altered. Dennis, on the other hand, was a powerful, masculine creature of exquisite mannerisms, a champion cricketer, a virtuoso, and a man of great business capacity. Haverford could not compete with Dennis. And to make matters more perilous, Lady Diana was very generous by nature. She was wholly feminine likewise. She rejoiced in the gifts she could give to a lover; and Dennis was chosen as the recipient. But, at the last minute, alas! the voice of duty called Dennis from the temptress. Passion withered; and chemical purity was sustained.

COSMIC FLUIDS ET AL.

IN "The Body of His Desire," (subtitle "A Romance of the Soul") we hot-foot it through the interstellar reaches, hear the babble of esoteric jargon, sniff the transcendental asphodel—in short, we wallow in theosophical hallucinosis.

The Rev. Reginald Chalmers was a theological spellbinder, a reputed ascetic. His life, it seems, led him into wild visionings, and before he knew it he had materialized out of his own vital essence and the all-pervading ether a beautiful Egyptian lady clad in a diaphanous purple gown, with coiled golden snakes about her arms, a jeweled zone, and a red ruby heart on her bosom. This vision turned out to be none other than Neseta, a lady once beloved and forsaken by Chalmers in an earlier incarnation. At this time he was not Chalmers, but Thaan, a priest of Amen-Ra.

As anyone can see, it was disconcerting for the reverend doctor to find himself suddenly confronted with an ancient inamorata. The situation was made even more delicate by the fact that Neseta was far from cold. She pleaded with the ascetic Rev. Chalmers to make himself a heaven upon her breast. She passionately entreated him to forego his formulas and spend a very human hour with her. While thus pleading, we learn, her "tender voice ranged in its music all the gamut of feeling," that "in the passionate depths of her eyes there seemed to lie all the mysteries of earth and heaven," while her "heaving bosom promised as sweet a resting place as the fairy of the garden could have offered to the prince whom the eastwind bore to paradise."

Poor old Reggy! He made a tottering movement toward the recumbent and inviting figure of Neseta, but "even as she stretched her arms toward him, the dear dream-vision melted slowly out of sight, dissolving into pearly mist, and she was gone."

A disappointment—believe me!

However, this was not Chalmers's last struggle with the devil. Neseta returned. On page 288 the materialized lady of Egypt and the Rev. Chalmers have another ethical catch-as-catch-can. Even St. Anthony was never harder put than the Rev. Dr. Chalmers. For six pages our hero battled with the "entwining arms," the "tumultuous heart-beats," the "yielding shape," the "perfect form," the "vision of her beauty," the "magnetic influence," the "exquisite tenderness," the "childlike self-abandonment," the "endearing words" of this resurrected Egyptian.

But the wiles of woman did not rob him of his biological purity on that fateful night. "An arresting force" dropped down from heaven, and ere long Chalmers was on his knees offering up the following prayer: "Oh, merciful God, grant to this woman that which by nature she cannot have. Grant that all carnal affections may die in her, and that all things belonging to the spirit may live and grow in her."

One would think that after these numerous unsuccessful efforts the Egyptian spook would go else-whither. But no. Again she appeared. But this time she was a changed woman, and told the Rev. Chalmers that before long they would meet in dim Amenti, pluck posies in the shining fields of Aalu, pray to the Lady Hathor, and pay homage to Osiris Ausankh-triumphant; they would hobnob, too, with Ea, Bel and Ishtar by the living waters of Tammuz, with Mother Isis, Zeus and Hero, Demeter and Aphrodite. Athene and Eros are also mentioned.

Experts in the metaphysical may understand this astonishing book, but its mysteries are beyond the mundane intelligence of woodsheekers like myself.

ANCIENT TYPES OF MAN. By Arthur Keith. Harper Bros., New York.

THE latest book to be added to Harper's Library of Living Thought is "Ancient Types of Man," by Arthur Keith. The science of anthropology, of recent years, has undergone considerable change and much rapid progress has been made in this line of research. Anatomical science claims to be able to tell the age, muscular development, and degree of intelligence of ancient men by the study of their skeletons. Geology claims to be able to ascertain the approximate period in which the specimens of prehistoric man lived. The combination of these sciences forms the basis of anthropology.

Prof. Keith does not cling to chronological order in his book, but opens with the consideration of the skeleton of a British woman supposed to have lived about 4000 years ago in the late neolithic or early bronze age. The author says that were this woman living today she would still pass as a good representative of her sex and race.

Another interesting example is brought forward to show the antiquity of the modern type of man. In the Valley of the Thames was found a skeleton whose period was determined at 30,000 years ago. Making a comparison between this skeleton and that of Jonathan Wilde, an eighteenth-century criminal, preserved in the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, we find that the two types of men agree in many essential respects. Says Prof. Keith: "Historians have led us to believe that in comparatively recent centuries invasions of Jutes, of Saxons and of Danes completely replaced the ancient Britons. Here, then, is an important fact, that very many thousands of years before written history begins and far beyond our most enduring traditions, there existed in the Valley of the Thames a man who in stature and in head form is plentifully represented among Englishmen of today."

Gilbert K. Chesterton,

The largest living mullah, the world's most sapient sophist, a believer in fairies, and the most flabbergasting and resourceful of modern rhetoricians. In his latest book—though by the time this is in print there may be a dozen more on the market—he has carried paralogy and symbolism to an incomprehensible limit. "Manalive" is a strange jumbled affair, shot through with brilliant streaks of poetical writing, but unintelligible to the ordinary logician. It leaves one with an impression very much like that left by a "futurist" painting. It is Chesterton gone mad.

RECENT MAGAZINES.

The importance of John S. McGroarty's "Mission Play" is by no means a local one. This fact is attested to by the large number of eastern literary magazines and periodicals which have devoted space to descriptions of it. The latest indication of this interest in the "Mission Play" is to be found in the July number of the Bookman, which devotes many pages to the San Gabriel pageant. The article is really a pictorial one, being a series of views of the play, in chronological order, with a lengthy descriptive caption beneath each picture. The critics who have followed the development of the drama and the pageant seem to be agreed that in this mission play Mr. McGroarty has established a new standard in community pageantry through his amalgamation of the two forms of art—the drama and the pageant. In this article in the Bookman the historical as well as the educational significance of "The Mission Play" is gone into.

A new serial story by William Heliger starts in the July American Boy. It is entitled "The Captain of the Nine," and will doubtless make a hit with thousands of Mr. Heliger's loyal boy readers.

Frank M. Schulte, of the Chicago Cubs, champion hitter of home runs, has written an article for this number that tells the boys how they can learn to bat. Oscar Stanage of the Tigers tells how to play the catcher's position.

There are a number of Fourth of July stories and a very attractive cover depicting the battle of the Constitution and the Guerriere. The short stories, articles, serials, and departments will give the boy many minutes of pleasurable excitement. Better buy it for him.

The July number of Scribner's will have special significance in containing a group of articles dealing with the new suburb—covering the subject both in England and the United States. With the ever-increasing pressure of population in the cities, it would be hard to think of a subject of more vital and personal interest to everyone. The idea of the new suburb is to put an end to the haphazard go-as-you-please town building and use the land to the very best advantage, and to provide for both the present comfort and the future welfare of its people.

"We apparently owe much to the recent tendencies toward better ideals to England. Over there they have realized very keenly the demoralizing effect of the city slums, and the improvement in transit facilities has given birth to the garden cities," Frederic C. Howe, the well-known authority on municipal administration, who has just been elected the president of the People's Institute, in New York, succeeding the late Charles Sprague Smith, has written an article dealing with "The Garden Cities of England."

Following this is one by Grosvenor Atterbury, the well-known New York architect, one of the men chosen to carry out the plans of the Sage foundation at Forest Hills, L. I., His subject is "Model Towns in America." It is an article of practical value in every way and the accompanying diagrams are very helpful and suggestive.

Elmer Grey, one of the best-known architects on the Pacific Coast, writes of "The New Suburb of the Pacific Coast." Nowhere in the country has the suburb been more carefully considered, and from California to Oregon are towns that both in their architecture and plan are notably beautiful. California might well be called the birthplace of the bungalow.

All the articles are illustrated.

WITH THE AUTHORS

"Davidee Birot" is a new novel by Rene Bazin, who has been called "France's premier novelist"—the sixth to be published in this country. M. Bazin, member of the French Academy, is now in the United States as one of the French commission to the Champlain Tercentenary. He is one of the very few French writers whose works are brought out in this country at the same time that they appear in France; indeed, he is almost alone as a French novelist of this day who has a large and overgrowing public in America. "Davidee Birot," a love story of a fine young French girl, who becomes a school teacher in a little town in Ardesie through an intense desire to be of service, is published by the Scribners, as were all Bazin's earlier novels—"The Barrier," "This, My Son," "The Coming Harvest," "Redemption" and "The Nun." This book is concerned with the social problems introduced by the prominence of labor unions. Its plot largely depends upon a strike of miners, who throng the town in Ardesie, where Davidee's school is.

M. Bazin was born in Angers in 1853. He was a delicate boy and spent most of his early years on an Angevin farm. As he grew up he studied and practiced law at Angers and for many years held a professorship of criminal law in the university there. His natural inclinations were literary, and he was driven toward novel writing by his intense feeling that the run of French novels misrepresented the French people, partly through their concentration of the life of Paris. He set himself to reveal the nature of the people of the French provinces—a section of French life which he felt had been strangely neglected.

He aimed to show France and the world that his people had depth and simplicity of nature, and were at root an intensely moral people. Partly because of this some of his earlier novels turned mainly on religious questions—and, since he was a Catholic, a large section of his American public has been Catholic. He has set forth his literary creed in these words: "Our novelists, by occupying themselves with this unrepresentative part too exclusively, have created and spread a conception of our country which is not only inadequate, but is also essentially false.

"If I have held myself resolutely aloof from the society novel, which I might have done, perhaps, as well as another, it is because I desire to portray sweetness, purity and beauty of French family life, and not to perpetuate a gross libel upon it.

"I am also anxious to dispel the illusion that the French are a godless people. If I make a great deal of religion in my novels, it is because religion plays an important role in our life."

When M. Bazin was asked his impressions of America, he said that he was so confused by the magnitude and beauty of all that he had seen in such a small space of time that the reporters must let him wait a while before he expressed himself.

Dean George Hodges, author of "The Garden of Eden," and "When the King Came," was given the degree of L.L. D. by Hamilton College last week. Dr. Hodges is preparing a new volume of Bible stories for children, entitled "The Castle of Zion," which Houghton, Mifflin Company will publish next autumn.

It has been stated in a number of papers that Rachel Capen Schauffler, the author of "The Goodly Fellowship," is the widow of a missionary who was killed in Persia in the discharge of his duties. The facts of the matter are that the missionary who was killed in Persia and whose death is said to have been the inspiration for the writing of "The Goodly Fellowship," was Miss Schauffler's brother-in-law, Benjamin Labaree.

L. P. Jacks, dean of Manchester College, Oxford, editor of the Hibbert Journal, and author of "Among the Idolmakers" and other works published by Messrs. Henry Holt & Co., received an honorary degree from Harvard this week. While in Boston, Professor Jacks went into the offices of the Atlantic Monthly, and was immediately taken to task for not returning his proof of a story for that magazine. He had sent them back promptly, and after comparison of dates, it was discovered that they had been sent by the Titanic.

BOOK NOTES.

Messrs. Henry Holt & Co. expect to publish, about November first, "Some English Story Tellers," a book of the younger novelists, being a companion volume to the author's "Some American Story Tellers," which is already in its second edition here and has been republished in England.

"Rolling Stones" will be the title of the new book of O. Henry material, which has only recently been brought to light from the old attics and storerooms where it had lain forgotten for many years. Most of this material is taken from copies of O. Henry's little magazine, "The Rolling Stone," which was edited by him in Austin, Tex., early in his career. Also, there will be a number of letters written by the author of "The Four Million," etc., and several short stories hitherto unknown. Besides this, "Rolling Stones" will contain several early photographs of O. Henry and examples of his cartoons and caricatures which were published in his magazine. The volume is intended by the publishers, Doubleday, Page & Co., to round out the existing O. Henry collection and complete the picture of his work.

There is to be a new book by Alice Hegan Rice, whose first book, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," was one of the most popular sellers in publishing history. The new story is to be called "A Romance of Billy-Goat Hill," and The Century Company will publish it in the early fall.

"An American Wooing," by Florence Drummond, published this week by Houghton Mifflin Company, is the result of the author's first visit to America. It tells the story of a triple romance, and gives a young Scotch girl's vivid impression of places, persons and customs in America from Boston to Bar Harbor.

It is announced that the right to publish the authorized editions of the writings of Walt Whitman has been transferred to Mitchell Kennerley by the executors, Thomas B. Harned and Horace Traubel. Mr. Kennerley announces new editions of "Leaves of Grass" and "Complete Prose Works." The publication of Horace Traubel's monumental biography, "Walt Whitman in Camden," has also been undertaken by the same publisher, and a third volume is to be issued in the fall.

"Mastering Flame" is the title of an anonymous novel Mitchell Kennerley publishes this week. Though written by an American, "Mastering Flame" was first published in London two months ago, where it received unusual praise. So far the identity of the author has been effectively concealed.

There is something a little surprising in the suggestion that a single institution in New York is so extended and so complicated that it demands a Baedeker all to itself. An official guide to all the manifold activities of Columbia University and to all its many buildings will be issued immediately by the Columbia University Press, with two maps and many illustrations. It has been edited by a special committee and President Nicholas Murray Butler has written an introduction.

That the aeroplane is fast becoming a wonderful war weapon of infinite possibilities is interestingly set forth by Claude Grahame-White and Harry Harper in their new book, "The Aeroplane in War," just issued by the J. B. Lippincott Company. It is particularly timely in view of the wide use that has been made of it by the Italian government in the present war. The Lippincotts have also issued "Current Educational Activities," by John Palmer Garber, a report upon educational work throughout the world during the year 1911. This important work is volume two of the "Annals of Educational Progress" which covered 1910, and "Mouth Hygiene," by Dr. J. S. Marshall, a practical manual for dentists, social workers and others shows how the attention to oral hygiene in children may save many of them from lives of misery and crime.

Whether such innovations as the initiative and referendum, the recall and the primary, shall prevail in the United States over the older methods of representative government, depends in large measure upon the success with which these devices meet in Oregon, where they have been tried upon a larger scale than anywhere else in the United States, or even in the world. Hitherto the story of the attempt of the citizens of Oregon to govern themselves directly has been told in a partisan spirit. But in "The Oregon System: The Story of Direct Legislation in Oregon," (A. C. McClurg & Co.) Allen H. Eaton, the oldest member in point of service in the Oregon Legislature, tells the story of the growth and workings of the system from an unbiased standpoint. Although Mr. Eaton is a friend of direct legislation, he points out many weaknesses in the workings of the system, some of them weaknesses which had neither been provided for by the friends or even foreseen by the foes of the movement.

"The Soddy." Under this strange title, that might be perplexing to any not familiar with the mode of life on the boundless plains of Nebraska and Kansas, Doubleday, Page & Co. will bring out this fall a dramatic novel by Sarah Comstock. The title is taken from the popular name for the sod houses in which the early settlers of Nebraska lived, and which can still be seen dotting the plains in the western part of that State. The novel gives a new picture of the great stretches of prairie.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

When Gertrude Atherton maintains that "Julia France and Her Times" was not written in behalf of woman suffrage and that the issue is but one incident in the life of her heroine, and when, on the other hand, a leading suffragist characterises the novel as an "extremely interesting story of the suffrage movement," what is one to believe? But let the twoprincipals speak for themselves. Writing to the editor who reviewed "Julia France and Her Times" in the Chicago Evening Post, Mrs. Atherton says: "I am ashamed of you! The idea of your treating Julia France as a suffrage move! I expected that of the riff-raff, even with the subtitle, but from the Post I certainly expected treatment of the book as a whole—not an almost exclusive attention to Book IV of the six books in Julia France. To my mind, suffrage was but a stormy and picturesque incident in Julia's life—just as it occupies that position in the latter-day development of women."

Many guesses as to the authorship of "The Great Analysis: A Plea for a Rational World-Order," said to be by a man of distinguished reputation both here and in England who withholds his name. One man well known in literary circles says: "It sounds like Wells, but with a difference." Several others have guessed that it is G. Lowes Dickinson, the author of "Letters of a Chinese Official." "A Modern Symposium," etc. Several have suggested John Galsworthy, who is known by his writings to be keenly interested in the problems of social organization. One or two have suggested the name of Lord Rosebery, and a number are inclined to think that it is somebody who has had more or less actual experience in matters of politics and statesmanship.

"The Diary of Frances Lady Shelley, 1787-1817," which the Scribners have just imported, throws a great deal of light on the celebrated characters connected with Napoleon's career. Take, for instance, this picture of Talleyrand, whom Lady Shelley first met a few months after the Battle of Waterloo when she was in Paris:

"Although I did not sit by the Duke I saw a great deal of him both before and after dinner. I sat between the Prince of Orange and Metternich. Talleyrand and Schwartzenberg were opposite. I never saw so diabolical a countenance as Tallyrand's. He has no very marked feature, is pale, has a crafty expression, and a most villainous mouth. His fiendish laugh still haunts me.

"After dinner we retired to a small apartment where I noticed a bust of the Duc de Montesquieu. Talleyrand told us the following anecdote. He said that one day Boneparte, in a towering passion, gave him his conge as Grand Chamberlain. 'I retired to my apartment, and in an hour a servant entered and announced, "Monsieur le Grand Chambellan de l'Empereur." It was Montesquieu who had come to pay his respects to me.' Tallyrand repeated the last sentence in a most malicious manner, called Montesquieu bete, and added, 'Voila ce qu-on appelle "gentleman," n'est-ce pas?'

"Tallyrand may be clever but he has evidently a very little mind or he would not dwell on such an incident. At dinner Metternich was very entertaining. I wonder if one may believe what he said?"

It has been announced recently that Richard Washburn Child's first complete novel was about to be published. This is an error, as Mr. Child's first novel was published nearly two years ago. It was entitled "Jim Hands."

A Swede named Johnson evidently believes in hitching his literary wagon too a star, for he has given the dairy of his war services exactly the same title as Miss Mary Johnston's well known novel of the war between the States, "The Long Roll." Bookbuyers should take note of this "curious literary coincidence."

With the season of college commencement at hand, the contemporary writer is consistently being neglected in favor of the highbrows by the young men and women who are presenting their graduation theses. O Henry, however, is one of the contemporaneous writers who is not receiving this college commencement treatment, for a large number of requests for information have been received by his publishers from graduating students, who declared that their commencement theses had as its subject, O. Henry, his work and his influence on American literature.

The college students, however, are not the only ones who give testimony to the fact that O. Henry is a standard author, for within the last six months requests have been received from a number of producers, wanting to bring out plays or vaudeville sketches based on the O. Henry stories; one of these large popular magazines has devoted one whole article to O. Henry and the discovery of new material about him, and a great many schools and colleges have asked permission to use the O. Henry books as text books or supplementary reading.

GREAT INITIATES.

BY ANDREW LANG.

The very words "initiates" and "mysteries" have their attractions for some sweet enthusiasts, while they terrify the mere student of comparative religion and the history of the early human mind. Mr. Rothwell has translated a work by Monsieur Edouard Schure, styled "The Great Initiates." Of such initiates are Rama and Krishna, Moses, Pythagoras, Orpheus and the founder of Christianity! One regards books of this kind with an apprehensive eye, as a sort of romance. Concerning Rama and Krishna, I know nothing, while of Moses, my information is derived from the Old Testament alone. However, Orpheus is a very familiar figure, if only because he went down to Hades to seek his dead Eurydice, won her by his minstrelsy, and lost her by infringing a well-known taboo of folk lore; he looked back at her before she had reached the upper air, and she flitted among the shades. This story is found in many regions; perhaps its most beautiful and pathetic form is in one of the versions of the North-American Indian tribes; it is known from the Salish of the West to the Iroquois of the East. Among the Maori of New Zealand the tale has a happy ending; the brown Eurydice is permanently recovered by her lover, and they "lived happily ever afterwards." Orpheus did not; he was torn to pieces by the wild Bacchic women of Thrace, whether because he was indifferent to their charms, or for some motive connected with "Sex Totems," as M. Salomon Reinach conjectures, or for some other exquisite reason, is unknown. I prefer to hold that he recovered Eurydice by simply dying, as another Greek tale tell us that he did, and that "about his forest grave the nightingales sings most sweetly." However, the story of Eurydice was perhaps afloat before Orpheus's time, if ever he were a living man, a mystic teacher (as I understand Miss Jane Harrison to believe;) and really dwelt on earth. There is an enormous amount of learning about Orpheus as about many other persons, concerning whom nothing is actually known. There is plenty of Greek "Orphic poetry," sometimes pretty, which Orpheus did not write, and abundance of legend connected with ritual. Homer, if I remember rightly, never mentions Orpheus, and has no interest at all in mysteries and initiations and freemasonry and Rosicrucianism, to which Mrs. Henry Pott tells us that Bacon was addicted. But one never can get at a single fact about the Rosicrucians. All genuine, serious tribal mysteries, I take it, are savage in origin, and are connected either with the initiation of boys into the laws and lore which the men of the tribe conceal from the women and children, or with magical services for the behoof of articles of food, whether animal or vegetable. Homeric society took no count of such barbarisms. But as the yellow-haired, conquering Achaeans melted into the mass of a dark-haired, earlier race, which had preserved its old barbaric mummeries, these rites came again into the daylight with some bloody and disgusting revels, which were put under the protection of such undistinguished deities, hardly Olympian, as Dionysus Zagerus, and Demeter. I conceive the Greeks of the dark centuries from the ninth to the seventh, B.C., as having wandered or relapsed into oriental and wild Thracian superstitutions. To these they gave a new mystical interpretation, trying to find a soul of good in things evil, or at all events savage. The Greeks tried to "turn all to favor and to prettiness," but there were horrible rendings and eating of living animals; perhaps there were human sacrifices, horrors to be undergone preliminary to the living of a life of ascetic purity and strict vegetarianism. This appears to be indicated in passages of Euripides concerning Cretan religion and in a late Cretan hymn, found inscribed on stone, I am apt to think that the historic Greeks who abandoned themselves to such rites of blood, and such asceticism, were not sober citizens, but guilds of decadents, and that the whole affair resembled the orgies attributed to Gilles de Rais. He had ridden beneath the banner of the Maid, and stood beside her at the coronation of Charles VII; but later, if the evidence against him, and his own confessions, be honest, he was "nane the waur o' a burning," which he duly received. He was wealthy, and a combination of clerical and lay potentates shared his lands. Conceivably, he was innocent, and confessed only to avoid torture, but I fear that this great initiate was a filthy and cruel decadent, and that the late Greek initiates of the "bleeding feast" were not much better.

As for Orpheus, we know nothing about him historically. To myself it appears that Orpheus was adopted as a name for a fabulous personage, supposed to have regulated, and reintroduced, and mysticised the revived or foreign superstitions which certainly overran Greek society in the two centuries preceding the great struggle against Persia.

M. Schure, however, takes Orpheus to have been "the life-giving genius of sacred Greece, the rouser of her divine soul." My view is that Greece was much more divine and sacred before Orpheus was heard of, with his resuscitation of savage rites, and humbug of purity and asceticism. Orpheus, says M. Schure, with no reference to any evidence, was "contemporary with Moses, five canturies before Homer"—and when did Homer live? I would decline to put him before 1050 B.C.; and the learned often make him a syndicate which flourished from about that date to the fourth century. At all events, Greece, according to M. Schure, had already been colonised from Egypt and India. This is the view of the Ingoldsby Legends:

Consider the cheeks
Of these well-booted Greeks,
Their Egyptian descent was a matter of weeks.

Prof. Ridgeway will not accept the Schure-Ingoldsby theory; nor, I think, will Prof. Murray, nor will anybody. No, nor will we believe that in these ancient days mighty fleets "passed beneath the legs of the Colossus of Rhodes." The priests on board carried to Attica the worship of Isis under the name of Demeter. Perhaps M. Foucart may believe that; and M. Fabre d'Olivet is here said to believe that Thrace (where Orpheus was much at home) "is derived from the Phoenician Rakhiwa, the ethereal space or firmament." I do not advise anyone to advance these opinions in the schools.

"At this time Thrace was engaged in a mighty and desperate struggle. The solar and lunar cults were disputing for supremacy. There was war to the death between the priests of the sun and the priestesses of the moon." The women had the better of it; and drove the mere men "to lofty mountains in deserted countries." The ladies captured the worship of Bacchus. "Drink for Women" was the slogan, it appears, and they assumed "a bloody and formidable character."

"There were naked forms, lascivious dances in the depths of the woods, and a hundred Bacchantes flung themselves on the stranger, hurling him to the ground." I wonder that the men stood all this feminine ferocity. At this moment of history, according to M. Schure, appeared a beautiful young Dorian, with whom the female enthusiasts fell in love. But he softly and suddenly vanished away to Egypt, whence he returned at 40, rather gray, rather bald, one may fancy, but now an initiate, called Orpheus or Asypha, a Phoenician word, composed of Aour, "light," and rophae, "healing,"—"he who heals by light," by Rontgen rays, probably. The middle-aged Orpheus "tamed the Bacchantes" for a while. He established the worship of Apollo at Delphi; revealed the heavenly Dionysus, and "created the Mysteries," which, perhaps, he brought from Australia or Africa, where they flourish unto this day. Seriously, I cannot regard all this, or any of it, as scientific history of religion. It becomes rather like a dream by some too earnest student of Bulwer Lytton's and Sir Rider Haggard's treatises—"Zanoni" and "She"—with the interesting adventures omitted.

As for Moses, he was "an Egyptian initiate and priest of Osiris." He might as well be called a Franciscan or a Primitive Methodist. Moses used the ark "as a kind of receptacle or concentrating agent or of attraction for the production of electrical phenomena of a most formidable nature." That the ancient Egyptians had anticipated modern electrical science is a theory not attested by research, and really we cannot hail Moses as at once a religious innovator and as one who anticipated modern science from Franklin to Marconi. As he confesses when he begins to romance on a more sacred theme, M. Schure "reconstructs" the unknown past "by means of the esoteric light," which is another word for guessing at large. Here is a sample of his equipment: He speaks of "the sublime cosmogony of Orpheus, so gloriously chanted by Homer." Homer says nothing about Orpheus, and as to cosmogony, only drops a hint obvious that he knew more or less of the far from sublime and entirely savage cosmogony of Hesiod, which is very like that of the New Zealanders. It is hardly true that "the Conscript Fathers declared war against the whole Roman race." M. Schure, according to his translator, is an eminent critic of Wagner and a historian of the Musical Drama, but as an authority on prehistoric religion he cannot be seriously accepted—at least, such is my poor opinion.

SUNDAY MORNING.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty

Miss Hester Ross of Ross Spur, a flag station on the New Orleans, Mobile and Chicago Railroad, is the most talked-of young lady in Mississippi at the present time. A few nights ago some cars broke loose on the main line and ran wild in the direction a fast freight train was proceeding, and Miss Mary Monday, the long-distance telephone operator of the Cumberland Telephone Company, when asked to get whoever she could and ask them to flag the freight train, called up the Ross home. It was then 1 a.m. and at 1:10 the freight was due to pass the little town. No answer to her frantic rings was obtained for nearly five minutes. Finally a drowsy voice answered at the Ross home. Learning of the terrible situation, and without waiting to arouse any others of the family, and having but five minutes to reach the station, Miss Ross, in her night clothes and bare feet, armed herself with a lantern and dashed down to the depot.

No. 72 whistled and was about half a mile down the track. The cut of runaway cars could be discerned coming in an opposite direction to the fast freight. Standing in the middle of the track, Miss Ross swung the lantern desperately and jumped aside as the freight rolled by, coming to a halt a few feet further on. The cut of runaway cars bumped into the engine, but did no damage. The cars had run away for about five miles.

King George and Queen Mary show no less interest in charity than did their predecessors. It is impossible for any one, except those dealing with the actual figures, to estimate correctly the amount the sovereigns annually give away, but it can be said on good authority that it exceeds $250,000.

About 200 applications for charity are received every day at Buckingham Palace. The most of these are scrupulously investigated by a special staff which is retained for that purpose alone. If it is found that the applicant is deserving, he or she is certain to be helped either in money or in other ways. Of course, the King and Queen must limit the amount of money they give away annually, and it is often found that there is no money available for an applicant. In such a case the applicant is passed along to some charitable society with a royal recommendation, thereby insuring the relief of the sufferer.

William Barker, 27 years old, who has been suffering five months from rheumatism, told a pathetic tale to the police of the Morrisania (New York) Station. Barker said he had spent more than two months in a hospital, that he now lived with his wife and four children, the eldest 5 and the youngest barely 6 months old, in a three-room apartment at No. 1449 Boston road, and that all his money had gone.

"I want to go to work, but most of all I want something for my wife and children to eat," said Barker. A policeman pulled off his hat and silently passed it to his comrades, all of whom "chipped in." "Many thanks," said Barker, as he bobbled home.

Dr. Andrew H. Whitridge, who died recently in Baltimore, left the sum of $15,000 to the Hospital for Women of Maryland, and $10,000 to the Baltimore Orphan Asylum. Several other smaller charitable gifts were also included in the will.

Mother Superior Katherine Drexel, founder of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored People, and a member of the Drexel family of Philadelphia, will establish a parochial school for negro children in the Harlem negro colony of New York, where there are said to be 60,000 colored people. Mother Drexel renounced society about twenty years ago and since then has been laboring for the uplift of the negroes of the South and the Indians of the West.

Earl Grey and others are going to start a George Junior Republic in England, the cottage for the young citizennesses will be a gift from the Duchess of Marlborough.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Miss Clyde Giltner Chandler, a Chicago sculptor, has been awarded, in competition with five other sculptors, the commission for a $20,000 fountain to be erected on the State Fair Grounds at Dallas, Tex., to the memory of the late Capt. Sidney Smith, for twenty-five years secretary of the Texas State Fair.

Lionel DeJersey Harvard, descendant of John Harvard, founder of Harvard University, who has finished his first year at that institution, and returned to his home, in England, likes American college life and is enthusiastic over baseball and football.

In an effort to recall her charming granddaughter, Miss Edith Deacon, to the joys of the society life which the young debutante has forsaken since the pathetic death of George Lee Peabody, her fiance, Mrs. Charles R. Baldwin of Newport has offered a fortune of $100,000 as a wedding gift.

Two officers of the post at Vancouver Barracks, Washington, are to retire from the army. Col. John Conlin of the Second Field Artillery, effective August 1, and Lieut.-Col. Henry C. Cabell, unassigned, whose retirement takes effect at once. Both have served the required thirty years in the United States Army, and both were graduates from the military academy at West Point. Each has made an enviable record in the service.

William R. Grace and Joseph P. Grace, sons of the late Mayor William R. Grace of New York, have acquired 300 acres near Manhasset, L. I., in order that they may have a place to chase foxes without molestation.

C. A. Burckhardt, president of the Alaska Fisheries Company, who has just sailed from Seattle for Skagway, has taken the family cow with him, that his children may have fresh milk on the voyage and during the summer in Alaska. The cow has a special stall on the deck of the steamer.

For more than thirty-one years Sallie P. Hoxie has worked on the section of the Boston and Albany Railroad between North Adams and Renfrew and for more than fifteen years has been foreman. He has been absent from duty but two weeks in all that time and he never took a vacation.

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

The Swans—A Pastel.

Under the pale October sun I was wandering by the Lake of Enghien. The swans floated slowly, in white and mysterious bands, upon the great surface of the lake, amid the autumnal landscape, grave, pompous and solitary.

The trees, from which the dry leaves had not yet fallen, looked like trees of gold, such as are seen in the pantomimes of the Chatelet Theater; the wind moaned melodiously in the branches; under the pale October sun I was wandering by the Lake of Enghien.

I wandered till evening, and when the pale gloom had fallen I saw the little stars appear, the little stars that are compassionate to nocturnal melancholy; and the swans floated slowly, in white and mysterious bands.

But soon they swam away, and in the vague darkness they seemed a sheet of snow rapidly melting. One only, motionless and ecstatic, remained on the great surface of the lake amid the autumnal sunset.

And in spite of myself I thought of my soul, which so many dreams and so many loves haunted of yore. Where are the roses of the faded April? In my soul, which night oppresses, a single love has remained, grave, pompous and solitary.

Under the pale October sun.

The Painter and the Patron.

Every picture has its reverse side.

Two weeks ago I painted, in the most vivid colors at my command, the picture of the home artist in the pathetic plight of waiting for the home connoisseur to come and buy his canvases. He is still waiting.

Why?

Because—and this is the reverse side of my picture painted specially for Art and Artists—he obstinately refuses to paint the themes the public wants to buy. This, at any rate, is one reason. There are others, but today we'll consider this one, perhaps the most important one of all.

Let us look at the case dispassionately.

The landscape painter under consideration is a man of the highest ideals. He wouldn't paint a pot-boiler—no, not even if he starved in his studio. Now, nobody wants him to starve, and moreover, nobody asks him to paint pot-boilers.

The patron of art courteously asks him to paint an attractive subject, and the artist immediately jumps to the conclusion that he has been requested to paint a "pretty picture." And no artist worthy the name—at least, no modern artist—will paint pretty pictures. Therefore, to show how highly idealistic he is, how noble, how true, how free from bribery, he immediately goes out and paints the ugliest brown hillside in all Southern California—though Southern California is full to running over of beautiful hillsides, charming vistas, glorious purple mountains, sunsets and sunrises that exhale the very spirit of poetry.

The patron of art, who also happens to be a lover of beauty, yearns for a sunset, a view of mountains and valleys at daybreak, a glimpse of cascades under the twinkling feet of spring—and the painter presents him with a brown hillside, dull, uninspiring, absolutely uninteresting, a picture no healthy-minded man would hang upon his wall if given him as a gift.

An attitude of independence is a good thing, but bread and butter are also good—in their place. A brown hillside is a paintable subject, but far-off mountains are equally paintable and much more attractive in a picture. Then why not paint the distant mountains, and give us the subject we want to look at and live with? They are no easier to paint than the hill. Indeed, I suspect they are much more difficult, and that the lazy artist fights shy of them for this reason very often.

For there really are lazy artists, though they're not so numerous as the world thinks. Most painters work like stevedores from the rising of the sun till the setting of the moon, and if their monetary returns are not commensurate with their pictorial output it is probably because they persist in painting the wrong thing.

A bare brown hill may be made beautiful by the right painter, just as Velasquez painted beautiful works of art from such unpromising subjects as a long-chinned king and his short-legged mountebanks. But every painter isn't a Velasquez in genius. Therefore, as all hills are not brown and ugly, let's turn to those that are green and lovely. Let's paint the things our patrons want.

The old masters did, every blessed one of them. They painted madonnas and cherubs till their poor old heads swam, but nevertheless they made money hand over fist, many of them—and incidentally they turned out works of everlasting beauty. They acknowledged the rights of their patrons, the men who paid out the cold cash for their canvases. Now and again, I suppose, they painted to please themselves, but history doesn't keep very extensive records of that. If they ever painted ugly brown hillsides, those same slopes were not handed down to posterity. From a technical standpoint, of course, a brown hillside may be as interesting as a pink madonna, but for a decoration give me the simpering lady every time. Nicht wahr, ye patrons of art?

Knights of the brush, be true to yourselves. But, being true, be also kind to your patrons. Give them what they want, if the giving doesn't conflict with conscience. Don't compel them to buy merely to avoid the unpleasantness of seeing you starve. Make them buy because your pictures are so altogether lovely that they can't help themselves.

Choose subjects that are pictorially attractive!

California Landscapes.

Thirty pictures are shown in the present exhibition of the Salon of the South, held in the Blanchard building, and of these thirty exactly half are new, and exactly fifteen artists are represented. I shall speak of only a few of the new pictures. The others, equally good, will receive attention next week.

My caption, "California Landscapes," is not a misnomer, even though this is a general exhibition, for landscape painting is pre-eminently the big field of activity among our painters, and numerically the landscapists, when compared with the painters of portraits and genres, are as ten to one, or more probably as twenty to one. A few of the artists paint both figures and landscapes, and often equally well.

This exhibition may be declared, with some degree of confidence, the best general show of pictures by California artists ever held in Los Angeles. The jury of admission was composed of eight of our best painters, who did their work well and without prejudice. The standard is therefore high, and while not manly masterpieces are shown—for even the masters don't paint masterpieces every day—there is that unity of excellence which tends to give even the collected works of many minds a certain solidarity of effect. You may note the same thing in a well-chosen library, or in a room arranged by an occupant who is lucky enough to have money and good taste at one and the same time.

As a community we are advancing in our artistic appreciation. We are tolerant of innovations, we don't look askance at the new idea, we are willing to let a painter express himself in any way he pleases. If we don't quiet understand his language, we don't laugh any more. We have learned—at least, many of us have—that "foreign" is not synonimous with "barbarian." Indeed, we make preparations to learn the "foreign" language, and quickly discover that it isn't so different from our own as we supposed, and that it has shades of meaning peculiar to itself and very delightful to study.

Has the lesson of the cubists been conned by William Wendt? I almost thought it had when I looked at the four beautiful landscapes he is showing, four of the most perfect that ever came from his brush. I saw—or thought I saw—cubic signs in the shape of his clouds and the modeling of his live oaks. However this may be, I felt sure of one thing—that William Wendt had "arrived," and that he is a big artistic personality, much bigger than he was last year. He has a technique of remarkable vigor and directness, a deep knowledge of nature, a high aim. Nothing trivial or unconsidered ever comes from his brush, and now that he has so evidently gone in the deliberate search for beauty for its own sake, he has actually "arrived" at one leap. All these canvases testify that he need search no longer—wherever he may turn he will see it and express it.

"Wild Mustard" is the title of the largest of these canvases. I have always considered wild mustard unpaintable. It has seemed to me that it never lends itself gracefully to the general scheme of things—in a picture. William Wendt has almost convinced me, through this picture, that I was mistaken. Almost, not quite. For I believe that the wonderfully modeled hill in the foreground would have been still more beautiful if covered with green grass instead of yellow mustard. Beyond the mustard we have a magnificent view of the hills and valleys of San Dimas, full of living greens—trees, shrubs, grass. California's immensities are in the picture—her immensities of land and sky—her almost overwhelming beauties.

Another perfect picture is "The Mountain," painted in Cahuenga Pass, a place of tender tones of fawn and lavender. The picture is rugged, direct, simple, yet exquisitely suave in handling withal. The sky, with its clouds, is very beautiful. A still more beautiful sky is found in "The Road to the Valley," also painted in Cahuenga Pass. The sunlight of morning is on the hills, the road lies on them like a long strip of tawny ribbon. How finely the hills are modeled! What harmony of color is found in them! We see the bigness of California in "The Canyon," painted at San Dimas. Oaks huddle in the foreground, the earth shows raw and vital at the sides of the canyon.

Benjamin Chambers Brown is also at his very best in this exhibition, and he too shows four landscapes. Brown is an excellent painter of the figure, but he seems to have deserted it entirely in favor of landscape. He has gone in search of the "big stuff" in "Morning on Tamalpais," and has found it. The mountain, impeccable in drawing and modeling, is covered with a wonderful glow. An immense bluish shadow lies over the foreground and middle distance. Clouds trail along the mountain.

Brown's "Morning on the Marshes" is painted in delicate mauves and purples. We see the graceful line of a stream among the lithe and lush grasses. "Silver Moonlight" is in greenish tones, and pictures slim eucalypts by a pool.

The brilliancy of sunlight is Helena Dunlap's aim. She places figures out of doors, and paints them with a sparkling vitality that is delightful. Her color is bright, often crude, and her impressions are quick and vivid. As a technician she belongs among the ultra-moderns of Paris, the artistic world from which she has only recently been transplanted to Los Angeles. "In a Garden" shows us a girl gowned in pink working by a white table. Spots of sunlight fall on the grass and the table. The scene is full of outdoor light, yet it is without warmth. Brilliancy of light is also found in her still-life study of fruits, cups, etc., arranged on a table set outdoors.

Pictures by C. Harry Allis, Detlef Sammann, Lillian Drain, Fannie E. Duvall and Jean Mannheim will be reviewed next week.

Art Notes.

At the exhibition of students' work now being held in the Cannon Art School, Copp building, are to be found some excellent architectural drawings by Louis Blaire, and one or two illustrations in color by the same young artist; there is good painting in the draped figure of a woman by Johnsen; Harry Craft's pen and inks are admirable; Blackburn shows fine feeling for nature in his outdoor sketches, and the same is evidenced by Frank Guchi's oil landscape.

The Palette Club of the Los Angeles School of Art and Design met on Thursday evening. Instead of the usual hour of study, there were several little speeches—a talk by Mrs. L. E. G. Macleod on Rodin, one on Velasquez, Hals and Rembrandt by Henry Lovins, while Car Wellinburgh spoke on "Decorating and Decorators."

Helena Dunlap has just sent her first life-size picture, "The Japanese Umbrella," to the Beaux Arts Salon of Paris. It shows a young girl seated under a gay umbrella at Laguna Beach. To the Salon of the Independents she sent three pictures, "Cafe," "The Gate" and "The Garden."

The Sketch Club, which has moved to No. 222 Copp building, directly opposite Blanchard Hall, met on Saturday evening.

Xarifa Hamilton Towner is at Laguna Beach. She will remain there for five or six weeks, sketching.

A Boston Witness.

[Chicago Tribune:] "Now sir," asked the lawyer, "can you give me the true facts in this case?"

The witness hesitated.

"Well, sir, can't you answer?"

"I was just wondering," said the witness, "whether or not a true fact argues the existance of an untrue fact and, to carry the idea a little further, what might be the precise shade of difference between a true fact and an untrue falsehood; or, on the other hand, if there is any real distinction between an untrue fact and a true falsehood. Sometimes, I apprehend, analogy is less convincing than dissimilitude. The introduction of a startling contrast may enable the mind to grasp the salient points of—"

"You can take the witness," gasped the lawyer, waving his hand feebly at the attorney for the other side.

The smallest pony in the horse show at Olympia, Eng., Finy, a docile, brown, shaggy 5-year-old, thirty inches high, has been sold to the Queen of Holland for her daughter, the Princess Juliana.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC.

OTHERS MAY COME AND GO

BEAR IN MIND STANLEY
Is here to stay for all time.
HIS $3 READINGS FOR SHORT TIME.
50c—50c—50c—50c—50c.

Between Second and Third streets, Near Angels' Flight. 247 S. Hill st. 247.

BEFORE YOU GO INTO ANYTHING OF IMPORTANCE OR UNDERTAKE ANYTHING SERIOUS —IN BUSINESS, OR LOVE, OR MARRIAGE, OR BEFORE YOU MAKE ANY CHANGE — YOU SHOULD CONSULT THE MASTER MIND OF PSYCHICS.
ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.
A foolish weakling only will pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think. DON'T STRUGGLE WITH A BURDEN YOU CAN DIVIDE.
A TROUBLED MIND BEGETS A MORBID CONSCIENCE.
SYMPATHY, CONSOLATION AND TIMELY ADVICE HEAL THE WORST OF WOUNDS. BE ADVISED AND RELIEVED OF ANXIETY.
Realizing that this city has been overrun with pretenders, and that many of its best citizens are anxious to visit a genuine psychic,
Mr. Stanley's many years' residence with his large clientage should be proof enough of his ability.
He has met every advertised promise, and wishes to not be measured by any other standard than his own.
If you contemplate consulting a psychic several things should be taken into consideration—ABILITY, the HONESTY of methods, the FAIRNESS of dealings, the HIGHER degree of work, the ACCURACY of each prediction, the COMMON SENSE used with it, the INTEREST taken in each case, the RESPECT shown to each caller, the fact of SECRECY in consultation, the FEE charged for services.
BYRON L. STANLEY IS A DOUBLE GUARANTEE.
He has the indorsements of hundreds of the most noted men and women of America. He deems them of little value, since he stands alone upon the merits of his work. Any person who can believe their own eyes and ears cannot help but know that he is a man of high ability and indisputable power excelled by no man on earth in this line.
He was born with a strange and remarkable power—power not meant to gratify the idle curious, but to direct, advise and help men and women who are in trouble and suspense concerning the every-day affairs of life.
OFFICE HOURS 10 TO 1:30.
DAILY AND SUNDAY.
REMEMBER NAME AND NUMBER.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
NOTED PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER OF NATIONAL FAME AND REPUTATION.
REMOVED TO THE NEW STUDIO PARLORS, 532½ S. BROADWAY.
A RESIDENT OF LOS ANGELES 22 YEARS.
PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The horoscope shows the powerful influence of the planets in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, love and marriage, financial affairs, talents, environments, about children, relatives, when and where to travel, what to seek or to avoid, when in danger of loss, troubles, etc., also your good periods coming—giving dates of these events for the future.
PROF. ALTHOUSE read R. D. Sothera, Nat Goodwin, Mary Mannering, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Marconi, Melissa, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Jefferson, Capt. Hobson, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, H. E. Huntington, Dr. Wolf Hopper, Maxine Elliott.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S SKILLED WORK with his trained judgment must in no wise be classed with that of other readers. Therefore do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, almists, psychics—those doing dishonest work.
PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST and WITH EACH PALM READING gives also an ASTROLOGICAL READING.
DR. J. A. LARSEN writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences and I consider your key worked as the most THOROUGH and reliable of any reader in the United States."
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of HOROSCOPES and hand reading has brought him a LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. Personal attention. Strict privacy. HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and many years of experience can produce. Therefore HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The Los Angeles Realty Board has a reputation for accomplishing what-ever it undertakes and hence it is with a great deal of satisfaction that the Fact and Comment man learns that the board contemplates making a move out of the proposed restoration of the old California missions. Other organizations have tackled the same problem in a small way and have really done a creditable work in patching up and repairing some of the most neglected of these grand old ruins. Were it not for this work done upon the part of a comparatively few individuals, a number of the historic old structures along the King's Highway would now probably be beyond saving. Too much credit, therefore, cannot be given to the "Landmarks Club," the "Native Sons" "Native Daughters," and to individuals who have had a care in the past for the perpetuation of the missions.

The people of California are not generally aware of the shocking state of neglect into which many of the old missions have fallen. Of all the beautiful buildings erected by Junipero Serra and his successors, only two, old San Gabriel and the lovely church and monastery at San Juan Capistrano, are in a state of real preservation, and it is said by architects who have looked over these buildings that thousands of dollars worth of repair work ought to be done upon them. Most of the missions at this moment are in a pitiful condition and require immediate attention.

The work will cost at least $250,000 and it must be done at once if any of these precious landmarks are to be preserved from swift decay. There is no other cause at this moment so worthy and there is no other organization which could put as much steam into the movement as could the Los Angeles Realty Board, which includes in its membership some of the most influential men in Southern California, and which would most certainly carry the matter to a successful conclusion. Let the cause of the missions be taken up.

Moral Obligation.

The buildings erected at intervals along the King's Highway are as a thing of perpetuation as the old cities of New England and the south, and are as truly relics of historic and educational interest as are the colonial structures of the Atlantic seaboard. The brave and devoted Franciscan friars are national figures even as are those who brought civilization to bleak New England. There is in all American history no more romantic chapter than that which recounts the labors of the Catholic churchmen in behalf of the people of California. It is a privilege and a precious opportunity that belongs to this day have to take up the noble and patriotic, though sadly neglected work of restoring and perpetuating for posterity the evidences of the first civilization on the American Pacific Coast.

It is a fact which no historian student of history can dispute that the Spanish missionaries, bent only upon bringing the light to the savage and the stranger in a strange and benighted land, were indirectly responsible for California from English or other occupation. What would have been the subsequent history of the lands under the rule of the Czar of the English crown, may only be conjectured, but it requires no stretch of the imagination to conclude that the entire West Coast of today be under foreign domination had not California been settled and held by the Spaniard.

We must not forget, either, that the padres gave to the world a style of architecture which is today recognized as typically that of California and the simple charm of which has been the inspiration for some of the greatest buildings in the United States.

The Commercial Aspect.

The people of California need offer no apology to the world if they, in taking up the work of restoring the old missions to a semblance of their former glory, frankly decide to take into consideration the commercial aspect of the undertaking. Those countries of Europe which are richest in historical monuments of the past make no bones about advertising these relics as an inducement to tourist visitors. Everything worth while looking at in Europe has been commercialized and it is to this fact, probably more than to any other, that the perpetuation of most of the interesting old momentos of early European civilization is due. The average European is probably naturally as devoid of reverence for the works of his ancestors as is the American, and the historical buildings of the old world have, in all probability, been restored and preserved for posterity simply because there is money in it.

The missions of California give this State an atmosphere and a touch of romance such as is possessed by no other State in the Union. Countless thousands of people visit this section every year for the purpose of seeing our missions. Unless some such live organization as the Los Angeles Realty Board actively interests itself in these historic ruins, many of them will have crumbled to dust before another generation sees the light of day.

Still Gaining.

Los Angeles is increasing its lead over San Francisco by leaps and bounds in building activity. While the Chief Inspector of Buildings of this city issued during the past month, 1392 permits, representing an aggregate of $3,488,237, the best that San Francisco could do was represented by 514 permits, amounting to $2,054,542.

To date, for the year, 7645 permits have been taken out here, these involving construction work which will cost in the aggregate $14,714,274. From January 1 to July 1, inclusive, the Bay City issued 2792 permits, representing a valuation total of $12,361,253.

The marvel of the local June report was the record-breaking valuation represented by the permits issued for new homes of one, one and a half and two stories, in all parts of the city. In all, 585 permits were taken out during the month for new dwellings, whose total cost will be $1,276,238, a figure which most cities of the size of Los Angeles would be proud to boast as a total for all classes of buildings for a single month.

Probably at no period in the history of any American city of the size of this, has the local home building record for June been equalled. Homes by the thousands are being erected in all parts of Los Angeles and the swift transformation of the outlying district from open fields to compactly-built residence areas, is one of the miracles of the present-day development here.

PROJECT LIGHTING SYSTEM.

A movement is at present on foot to form a lighting district consisting of over 47,000 acres in the San Fernando Valley, with a view of lighting the magnificent new $500,000 boulevard along its entire extent with ornamental electric lights. The boulevard is now a favorite drive for autoists and sightseers. One hundred and ten feet wide, sixteen miles long and flanked on either side with hundreds of thousands of roses, palms and ornamental trees, only the electroliers are required to make of the drive a night paradise for the autoist. The movement is said to be quite popular with the citizens of the valley.

Charming Suburban Place for Sightly and Exclusive Beverly Hills District.

Fine Setting.

CHARMING NEW BEVERLY HOME.

FOLLOWS TYPES OF SOUTHERN EUROPEAN COUNTRIES.

Is of Hollow Tile Construction and Practically Fireproof—Site to Be Beautifully Landscaped—Seaward Suburb Paid High Compliment by Magazine.

An unusually attractive suburban place, designed on Spanish and Italian lines, is being constructed on Crescent drive between Lomitas and Elevado avenues, in Beverly Hills, by William T. Gould of Hollywood. The house, which with its large and sightly grounds promises to become one of the show places of the fashionable Beverly Hills section, was planned by Dennis & Farwell, who are also supervising its construction.

The dwelling is situated three blocks from the new Beverly Hills Hotel and occupies a site 200x175 feet in size. The lot is to be landscaped under the direction of the architects and will be beautifully terraced and planted to rare trees and shrubs, the pergola treatment being a charming feature of the whole.

The house contains fourteen rooms, with three baths and two sleeping-porches, and is built around a brick-paved patio at the rear. The exterior is of cement plaster, the roof being of Spanish clay tile. The walls and partitions are of hollow tile, and the dwelling is of the fireproof type. It occupies a ground area of 60x82 feet.

The first floor is finished entirely in oak, while the upper rooms are in white enamel, the doors being of birch. The baths have tile floors and wainscoting and are equipped with solid porcelain fixtures. There are two handsome tile fireplaces on the first floor. The dining-room is 20x15 feet; the hall, 15x27 feet, and the living-room, 28x16 feet. The hall has solid oak-beamed ceilings. The floors throughout the house are of quarter-sawed oak.

From the wide porches of the place a magnificent view is obtainable of the whole city and of the ocean. A wide paved terrace across the entire front of the house and extending down one side is one of the attractive features. All of the main rooms, together with the breakfast-room, open onto this terrace.

At the corner of Beverly drive and Elevado avenue, in the same exclusive subdivision, a beautiful ten-room home of the Swiss chalet type is near completion for E. B. Deming of Bellingham, Wash. This house, which, like the Gould place, occupies a large and commanding site, was planned by Dennis & Farwell and is being erected under the supervision of that firm.

The careful and beautiful manner in which the Beverly Hills tract is being developed is made the subject of complimentary comment in Scribner's Magazine for July, in connection with an article dealing with the subject of model suburbs and garden cities. "Nowhere in Southern California," says Scribner's, "has there been a more consistent attempt to plan a suburb in the right way from the start." The home pictured on this page is only one of a large number of beautiful places under construction in the Beverly Hills district.

ORGANIZATION COMPLETED.

Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., president of the Bowes Realty Company, has completed the organization of the Los Angeles Realty Holding Company, incorporated in this State with a capital stock of $500,000. This company will invest in central business properties only, and has just acquired the Huntsberger holding on Seventh street, adjoining the corner of Grand avenue, as previously reported in The Times. The directors of the company are: C. B. Eyer, president of the Assets Realization Company, Los Angeles; Simon W. Straus, of the S. W. Straus Company, bankers of Chicago; Francis E. Halligan, capitalist; George H. Woodruff, Los Angeles attorney, and Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., president of the Bowes Realty Company, of Los Angeles and Chicago. The officers are Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., president and treasurer, and George H. Woodruff, secretary.

BIG BLOCK ASSURED.

Eleven-Story Building to Be Erected on South Broadway for Successful Dealers in Sweets.

A lease covering a period of ten years and involving a total rental consideration of $200,000 was concluded during the past week between A. L. Cheney, as lessor, and the Chocolate Shop, as lessee, the latter securing possession of an eleven-story fireproof building to be erected by Cheney at No. 733 South Broadway. The deal, which was made through the agency of Elmer E. Dunn, manager of the rental department of Thomas C. Bundy & Company, involved the purchase from the present tenant of the site, the Goodan-Jenkins Furniture Company, and at a handsome bonus, of an unexpired lease with a life of two years and three months.

The razing of the three-story brick structure now on the lot will be begun November 1, and immediately afterward the splendid store and loft building projected by Cheney will be started. This structure, which is being planned by Parkinson & Bergstrom and a perspective of which has already appeared exclusively in The Times, will occupy a ground area of 36x150 feet. It will be of the steel frame, class "A" type. The building will adjoin the four-story structure now under construction for the Isaacs Bros. Company on South Broadway and will add materially to the metropolitan appearance of the downtown skyline.

The Chocolate Shop is now located at No. 207 West Fifth street, where it has enjoyed a remarkable prosperity. The concern also has a shop on Colorado street in Pasadena. It is planned to make the Broadway shop one of the most attractive places of its kind on the Pacific Coast.

LARGE DEAL RUMORED.

College Rancho of Thirty-two Thousand Acres Reported Sold to Los Angeles Real Estate Firm.

It is rumored that the firm of H. G. Holabird & Co., has purchased the College rancho, situated about forty miles northwest of Santa Barbara, a property consisting of approximately 32,000 acres of land, 20,000 of which will be immediately put into beans and potatoes. The consideration is said to have been between $30 and $35 an acre.

The College rancho was granted by the government to the Roman Catholic Church, on consideration that a college be built on the property. Some of Southern California's best citizens were educated in this college. All that is left of the old college buildings is an adobe hut, which is being reserved by the Landmarks Club. The Catholic fathers established the Santa Ynez mission here in 1804.

Recently a colony of Danes purchased 10,000 acres adjoining this property at the rate of $40 an acre. These Danes have built a village near the old mission and are cultivating the land intensively, planting potatoes to the top of the rolling hills.

Gigantic oak trees abound throughout the rancho. The Santa Ynez River flows through the ranch. H. G. Holabird & Co., it is said, expect to organize a syndicate which will subdivide the property and sell it off in small farms.

ACQUIRES SITE ON GRAND.

Hundred-Foot Frontage May Be Substantially Improved by Investor.

W. I. Hollingsworth & Co. report the sale of two lots on the east side of Grand avenue, between Tenth and Eleventh streets, for J. B. Shepardson to A. T. Wells. The lots have a frontage of 100 feet by a depth of 165 feet. Wells contemplates improving the property in the very near future. The consideration is given at $90,000.

William S. White has purchased a lot on the east side of Broadway, between Eighth and Ninth streets, from Meyer Lissner. The property has a frontage of thirty feet by a depth of 165 feet. The consideration is reported at $3750 per foot. White owns the lot adjoining on the south, and is making arrangements to put up a building covering his entire holding. This sale was also made through W. I. Hollingsworth & Co.

JULY AFTER RECORD.

June Building Total May Be Eclipsed During Present Month. Thirty Permits a Day for Homes.

The month is opening busily in the city building department, 265 permits having been issued from July 1 to July 5, inclusively. The valuation represented by these is $390,670, a figure which was increased to considerably in excess of $400,000 by the close of business yesterday. The totals for the first five days of July, 1911, were 12[illegible] permits and $305,850 valuation.

The permits issued for new dwellings alone to date for the month numbered 117 at the close of business on Friday. Taking out Thursday, July 4, when the office was closed all day, the Chief Inspector of Buildings has issued permits for new dwellings at the rate of thirty a day. The total cost represented by these houses is $292,350. All records for home building activity in a single month will be shattered if this rate is maintained.

An application for a permit to cover the construction of the eleven-story Hollingsworth block at Sixth and Hill streets has been received and it is altogether likely that this permit will be issued during the next few days. It is believed, too, that the permit for the great hotel that is being erected by E. P. Clark on the east side of Hill street, between Fourth and Fifth streets will also be taken out during July. With these two large items as a nucleus it is possible that the record-breaking building totals of June may be eclipsed.

Following is the classified report of permits issued for the month to date:

| | Permits | Val. |
|---|---|---|
| Class C | 7 | $ 34,390 |
| Class D, 1-story frame | 83 | 122,865 |
| Class D, 1½-story frame | 8 | 45,000 |
| Class D, 3-story frame | 2 | 23,500 |
| Sheds, barns (frame) | 52 | 5,787 |
| Brick alterations | 18 | 19,975 |
| Frame alterations | 68 | 14,168 |
| Demolitions | 1 | 500 |
| Total | 265 | 390,670 |

A MAN

WITH AN ESTABLISHED BUSINESS

SHOULD HAVE AN ESTABLISHED HOME.

This is so thoroughly believed by all thinking people that it needs no special emphasis here.

It is the man without the established business who is most likely to overlook the advantages of a permanent home.

He is likely to believe that he cannot afford such an expenditure. He may fear it will hamper his movements and prevent his taking up some alluring proposition which may be presented.

Such a one should remember that it is only the man who remains at his post, who digs at one thing and can be depended on as a reliable citizen, who makes the final real success.

YOUR FIRST AIM.

should be to settle yourself in a home which you can always retain and feel proud of.

AT

HUNTINGTON PARK SQUARE,

This region is within the 5-mile limit and can be reached by two car lines. The surroundings are most attractive and the whole district is building up rapidly.

A SHORT RIDE

will take you there. Huntington Park yellow cars at 7th and Broadway are most convenient. Get off at Saturn avenue.

Yucaipa Valley—

IN THE

This is positively the cream of Yucaipa; lies at an elevation of from 2000 to 2500 feet above sea level; is a rich placentia sandy loam soil, from 20 to 30 feet in depth, perfectly level, about 1 mile south of Yucaipa City, and is positively the last of the high-class apple land in the Yucaipa Valley.
We offer you here any size tract with one share of water stock to the acre, at the price of $300 an acre. This is the most rapidly selling tract we have ever put on the market, and we shall be glad to show you over this land at an early date so as to give you a perfect selection. We predict now that One Thousand Acres of this rich land will be planted to apples, cherries and pears during the coming season. One Redlands orange grower will plant 50 acres to apples alone. This gives you an idea as to the opinion of the Redlands people regarding growing of apples in Yucaipa.
Don't be one of the "too late fellows," but make your selection now. Parties who bought in our earlier subdivisions and who wish to sell are doing so, frequently at a profit of 100 per cent. and over. There is no better, safer, or surer investment on the market.
We offer you in our Subdivision No. 4 a few choice tracts at $275 an acre. All of these tracts sold on easy terms.
Excursions every day. Come in and arrange for a trip to Yucaipa. For further information, call on or write,

PICK AND DRILL—
The north drift of the 800 (below water level), in the permanent ore zone) now comes to the front with a condition that borders on the sensational. Here is a shoot of ore that measures ten feet in width from wall to wall, that samples from $8 to $16 a ton, having increased to these values from $2 to $3 a ton. Do you realize what this means for the future of Pick and Drill. Do you know that the ore reserves of the famous Gold Roads mine averaged but $8.50 per ton? Do you know that big bodies of ore like this, with such values as these, mean permanency, mean long life, mean many years dividends, mean high figures for the stock? But as in the exciting days of the Mohawk, when some of you bought it at $20 a share instead of $1, when it was a proven bonanza, you will buy Pick and Drill far in the dollars instead of at a price which today is a gross insult to the mining industry to record. Buy every share you can carry, for one of these mornings you are going to wake up, just after a big investor has examined the mine, and face the situation of a mining share market with no Pick and Drill stock for sale, except at a price that will pauperize the ordinary investor.

POPE PRECIPITATES A CLERICAL PARTY CRISIS.

BERLIN, June 20.—The off-season in politics has been enlivened by the outbreak of what appears to be a serious crisis in the Centrum, or Clerical party. It was occasioned by a declaration of the Pope giving his approval to the so-called Association of Catholic Labor Unions, the smaller of the two Catholic labor organizations of the country. Most of the Catholic workingmen are organized in the Christian Labor Unions, which contain about 360,000 members, while the association is said to have only about 10,000. The Christian unions are not exclusively Catholic, though by far the larger part of their members belong to that church. Their chief aim is to oppose socialism, and they regard it as necessary to admit Protestants in order to have the best success in that direction. In this point they have the support of the Clerical party. The association, however strongly condemns the interdenominational character of the unions and demands that labor organizations be fully under the control of the Catholic Church; and a wing of the Clerical party called the "Berlin movement" supports this view.

Friction has been growing between the two labor organizations, and still more between the two corresponding wings of the Centrum. Only recently Herr Roeren, one of the prominent representatives of the party in the Reichstag, resigned his seat because he was not in harmony with the policy of minimizing the clerical character of the party. The present crisis was brought on by the association, which recently sent an address of homage to the Pope, containing, it was said, a sharp attack on the unions; and it was in answer to this that the Pope uttered his condemnation of the latter, pronouncing their fundamental principles false. Since this declaration was made the Christian unions have issued a statement in which they use exceedingly sharp language against the association, saying among other things that its address to the Pope was the "climax to a long campaign of slander on the part of the association against the Christian unions," and that the "supreme head of the Catholic Church has never been more disgracefully deceived about the nature and character of the Christian labor unions in Germany." The whole matter has stirred up a vast deal of animated discussion in the press of all parties. There is even considerable talk of a probable split in the Clerical party.

DECREASE IN CRIME.

Court and prison records show that there has been a steady decrease in the percentage of criminality in Prussia in the last ten years. While formerly 753 persons out of each 100,000 were sentenced annually for some sort of crime, the number dropped last year to 585, a decrease of 23 per cent. A most gratifying feature is that the majority of the decrease was in the item of felonies. The number of woman criminals also showed a great falling off.

TALENTED ROYALTY.

Close upon the heels of the announcement of the Crown Prince's plunge into literature as the author of a book of hunting experiences, it is learned that Princess Eitel Friedrich, wife of the Emperor's second son, has designed a calendar which is to be sold for charity this fall. A series of water colors from the Princess' brush, including views of Castles Eutin and Charlottenhof and picturesque Brandenburg landscapes, illustrate poems in part written by Princess Eitel and in part by her poetic cousin, Princess Foodora of Schleswig-Holstein.

WOMAN WINS PRIZE.

Woman's supposed weakness in philosophy and the higher reasoning received a brilliant disproval in the contests held in connection with the anniversary celebration of the University of Goettingen. Of the three submitted, only one was found worthy of a prize, a philosophical work on "The Perceptival-Theoretical Principles of Positivism." This was awarded the highest possible prize, and when the envelope containing the name of the author was opened was found to be by a woman, Miss Hedwig Martius of Rostock.

LAD OF ELEVEN SINGS TO KING.

QUEEN MARY ALSO HEARS WELSH CHILDREN'S CHOIR.

Tiny Boy Is Described as a Modern Mozart and Could Carol When Only Fifteen Months Old—London School of Medicine for Women Wins Royal Approbation

BY LADY MARY MANWARING.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, June 22.—At Cardiff, during the coming week, King George and Queen Mary will listen to the wonderful choir of Welsh children led by a lad of 11 years. Elvet Lewis is described as the modern Mozart. He is possessed of the most remarkable musical talent of any child in the world, today; in fact, with the solitary exception of Wolfgang Mozart the history of music discloses no equal phenomenon. When he was 15 months old he could sing most delightfully and with a true appreciation of harmonic consonance. When he was 3 years of age he had learned two instruments and could perform with credit. At 6 he was an Eisteddfod prize-winner.

QUEEN FAVORS SCHOOL.

Queen Mary is taking a personal interest in the movement to increase the number of women doctors which is being directed by the London School of Medicine for Women. While this fact is not generally known, Queen Mary as a girl wished very much to be either a nurse or a doctor. She took lessons in nursing and collects many books on surgical and hygienic subjects, and continues this special study. She is, perhaps, the best-informed woman on hospital matters, and the upbringing of children.

Now that the license in dentistry of the Royal College of Surgeons of England is open to women it is expected tha the opportunity will be immediately used to give women a liberal number of dental experts of their own sex.

WEDDING PRANK SHOCKING.

So horrified are British maids and matrons at the stories told of "cutups" at a recent wedding in Delaware that I do not think you could possibly induce an English girl to become a bride in that "progressive" atmosphere or an English mother to trust her daughter to the wild young hoodlums of the State where bride and bridegroom were chained together "just for fun." The practical, common-sense Britishers cannot understand that kind of practical joking, and I, for one, agree with them. Such unbridled idiocy should be suppressed by sufficient force. These things are manifestations of fun in the "stone age," where they would doubtless have been classified as clever. In a civilized country and in civilized times they are decidedly out of place.

CHIGNON OR CURL?

The chignon or the curl? For quite a long time two types of head-dressing have been fighting for supremacy in the stalls of the West End theaters. There is the chignon pure and simple, with which the hair is parted flat in the middle and rolled up at the back, and now there are signs from Paris that we are to have a return of the "sausage curl" and the "ringlet," and that hair-dressing is working back to the times of Jane Austen's heroines, when they had ringlets and a little top-knot arrangement that was very fetching. But the most alarming feature about the new head-dressing is the way in which its "flat" effects are being counteracted by a sudden upspringing of feathers, tulle or ornaments so high as entirely to black out the view from the stallite behind. I have lately witnessed a tuft of tulle at the left side of the head as large as a cauliflower, while a novel idea is to tie up the bunch of curls at the back in a swathe of tulle and tie the end at the top of the head in a high butterfly bow. Yet another idea is to perch a pair of large Mercury wings just over the right temple, thus entirely blocking any chance of vision to anyone seated behind the wearer. Until the theatrical managers insist on "no head-dress except in the boxes" the nuisance will continue.

SMITHS ARE PROMINENT.

There was a time when society sniffed at the very name of Smith. And the Smiths, having ascended a peg or two and peeping into the paradises of the more exclusive, were wont to mark their distinction from plebeian Smiths by prefixing a "de," wedging in a "y," adding a final "e," or hanging on to the hyphen. That would be smiled at today, for, lo and behold Debret and Burke fairly scintillate with the Smith family, as was demonstrated this week at a notable gathering of aristocratic representatives of Smith in the peerage. From the Marquis of Lincolnshire down all the grades to simple knighthood were represented by peaks and bunches of Smiths. Many of the Smiths in the peerage have titles of but recent creation, but it is well to know that the family is now properly established at court and is no longer to be sneezed at.

SERVANTS CONCEAL AGES.

Quite an unexpected rumpus has been caused by the "state your age" clause in the cards issued to servants under the new Lloyd George National Insurance Act. Lady's maids, parlor maids, housemaids and kitchen maids—even to cook, in her forties—refuse absolutely to tell the inspectors and the public just how old they were on their last birthdays. Their rebellion against the age stipulation may nullify a large part of the Chancellor's plan.

It is a worrying matter to heads of households who are being appealed to by the infuriated servants to protect their age secrets and their insurance at one and the same time. Hitherto, the British government has always accepted the tradition that a woman's age is her own secret. The census is taken on that basis, papers being made private and confidential. But, in the insurance act, the cards and the ages are alike to be available for impertinent, inquisitive eyes. It is too much, the women say.

BRIDES OF PEERS.

England's American duchesses are not the only women who were "Missed" before they married into the top-notch of the peerage. It is not longer necessary to be "the daughter of a hundred earls" to become "Your Grace." No longer do Britain's dukes choose their brides from near-cousins and daughters of aristocratic but enfeebled blue blood. The Duchess of Somerset was a Miss Mackinnon, daughter of a Scotch commoner; the Duchess of Hamilton was a Miss Poore of Wiltshire; the Duchess of Beaufort was Miss Hartford of Gloucestershire; the Duchess of Newcastle was Miss Kathleen Candy, familiarly known among her schoolgirl friends at "Tatters;" the Duchess of Wellington was Miss Kathleen Williams; the Duchess of Westminster was Miss Constance Cornwallis-Kest; while the Duchess of Bedford was Miss Mary Tribe, the daughter of a clergyman. The American duchesses are their three, their graces of Marlborough, Manchester and Roxburghe.

IN CANNIBAL COUNTRY.

British Official Explores Southern Nigeria and Visits the Lake of the Dead Shunned by the Natives.

[London Chronicle:] P. Amaury Talbot, accompanied by his wife, for nearly two years has been traveling in parts of Nigeria, large portions of which have never before been visited by a government official, and certainly never by a white woman. For the first time a survey—anthropological, botanical, and in parts geographical and zoological—has been completed almost uninterruptedly from the Gulf of Guinea right thorugh to Central Africa. Describing some of his experiences in the southern Nigerian bush—the home of witchcraft—Mr. Talbot said:

"The bush, with its soft green twilight, dark shadows, and quivering lights, is peopled by many terrors, but among these 'ojje,' or witchcraft, reigns supreme. Should the suspicion of witchcraft fall upon any one, only trial by ordeal can free them. The most usual one is that of eating esere, a poisonous bean which almost invariably kills the suspected person. The ordeals of boiling oil, poured upon the palms of

ASKING BIDS FOR SCHOOL.

SAWTELLE, July 6.—Bids for the handsome new grammar school that is to be added to the educational facilities of this place are now being taken by the architects, Paul V. Tuttle and E. L. Hopkins of Los Angeles. The plans have been entirely completed and work will begin upon the structure within a few weeks at the outside.

The school will stand at the corner of Loomis and Fifteenth streets and will contain eight classrooms. It will be of brick construction and will cost about $15,000. Only the rooms of the first story will receive the inside finish this year, it being the intention of the Board of Education to confine the school work to the four rooms of the lower floor for the time being. Other rooms in the building will be a library, principal's room and stockroom, together with a teachers' restroom on the second story.

The exterior of the building will be of blue brick, the trim being of cream brick. The roof will be of the composition type. Two of the classrooms downstairs will be separated by a sliding partition, which, upon occasion, may be thrown back so as to create an auditorium seating close to 200. Lunch and playrooms will be installed in the basement.

The architects of the new school have also been commissioned to prepare plans for a $4000 frame building to house domestic science and sloyd departments and to be erected on the grounds of the present Sawtelle grammar school. The latter structure is to be completely remodeled throughout, the alterations including the substitution of steel stairs for the wooden stairways now in use in the building.

UNIVERSITY ASSEMBLY.

The faculty and students of the summer session of the University of Southern California will hold an assembly on next Friday at noon, when they expect to have educational addresses by one or more visitors from the National Municipal League convention. The first assembly was held on last Friday.

EXETER ORANGE CROP.

EXETER, July 6.—First of the authentic crop figures with reference to the oranges have been secured by officials of the local associations, a detailed investigation of the orange groves, just concluded, leading to the statement by the officers of the organization that there will be from 45 to 60 per cent. of the average crop.

While this is not an especially encouraging outlook it means that the total tonnage for the season will be little short of that last year when the new groves are taken into consideration, those which will come into bearing for the first time this year.

There are numerous theories to account for the heavy drop this year, some attributing the loss of fruit to the late spring, other growers claim it is due to unseasonably late showers and still others lay it to the hot weather early in June. Anyhow, the crop is short, whatever the cause.

PLANS FINE APARTMENTS.

Five-story Brick Structure at First and Fremont Will Be Up-to-date in Every Particular.

One of the most noteworthy of the recent apartment-house projects is that embodied in the plans of R. D. Minnig for the erection of a five-story apartment at the southwest corner of First and Fremont streets. The building, which will be started about the first of the year, will occupy a lot fronting eighty-five feet on First street by 127 feet on Fremont. The site is now improved with a number of small frame dwellings, which will soon be removed.

The structure will contain 168 rooms and will be of Class "B" brick construction. The suites will be of two, three and four rooms each. The first story will contain several store-rooms, together with the lobby and a lounging-room for the guests of the place. Elevator service will be installed. Plans for the building are now being prepared by George Boyer.

I.W.W. INQUIRY TO BE CONTINUED.

GRAND JURY ADJOURNS; NO INDICTMENTS RETURNED.

No Reply Is Received from Department of Justice in Regard to Testimony Submitted, and Typewritten Indictments Are Pigeonholed—Questions Involved.

Further investigation of the activities of the I.W.W. will be taken up by the new Federal grand jury, which is expected to convene in about a month.

When the Federal grand jury adjourned yesterday for the January term, no word had been received from the Department of Justice by Assistant United States District Attorney Robinson, who had the investigation in charge, and consequently the pile of type-written indictments prepared for the consideration of the body was pigeon-holed to await developments.

That the Depart of Justice did not act immediately on the testimony and memoranda transmitted a week ago was no surprise. Novel questions were involved in the cases presented. For the first time in half a century evidence had been adduced tending to show that certain persons are guilty of treason, and treason is a pretty high word to shoot at in the administration of the Federal law. There was testimony on the issues of sedition and conspiracy, but they were secondary in character at least, and the allegation of treasonable utterances struck at the root of the I.W.W. organization. Not only that, but nihilists, anarchists and so-called Socialists, who have set their faces against enforcement of the law, believed to have been enmeshed in the mass of evidence sent to the Department of Justice.

It is said testimony showing the violation of the I.W.W. from its organization in Chicago in 1905 to the present hour was in the hands of the government officials, fortified by the sworn statements of its officers.

The indictments covered about forty individuals, involving few of the rank and file of the I.W.W., but many of the "higherups."

The word that the grand jury might return indictments against certain members of the I.W.W. had evidently been carried to some of the local leaders for they were on hand in numbers in the courtroom when the body filed in.

Capt. De Lacour of San Diego, who had active charge of the investigation so far as securing witnesses is concerned, returned last evening to San Diego, where he will immediately begin operations toward adding to the testimony already in the hands of the government.

REVERE REJOICES.

Local Agent Rejoices Over the Victory of Tetzlaff Driving With Miller Tires.

When Teddy Tetzlaff, the Los Angeles boy, cleaned up by winning the 250-mile heavy car race and the free-for-all at Tacoma, he brought joy to another Los Angeles man, W. D. Newerf. Newerf is local agent for Miller tires, the tire which Tetzlaff has been using on his Fiats, and with a Los Angeles man entering the car, a Los Angeles man driving and a Los Angeles man furnishing the tires, it was truly a Southern California clean-up in the Northwest.

PUBLIC UTILITIES BOARD ON THE YEAR'S WORK.

Report Made Public Yesterday Shows Advantage of More Than Half Million Dollars to Users of Gas and Electricity Under Rates Adopted for Present Year.

The report of the Board of Utilities made public yesterday, states that through the action of this board in reducing rates on electric light and power and a rearrangement of the gas rates for Los Angeles proper and San Pedro, there will be effected a saving to consumers of $659,739 this fiscal year, based on the volume of business in these commodities during the past fiscal year, ended the 30th ult. The 80-cent rate for gas in Los Angeles proper was reduced by the board to a 75-cent rate per 1000 cubic feet, or a reduction of 6 1-4 per cent., which the board estimates will effect a saving of approximately $200,000, to consumers during the ensuing year. The rate of $1.30, fixed by the board for the gas used in the San Pedro district, was further reduced to $1.20 per 1000 cubic feet by action of the City Council, and the board at once sent its rate experts, Prof. Koiner and Engineer Seamans, to Wilmington to make further investigation so as to be prepared to defend this rate should occasion arise.

The rates for electric power and light were materially reduced, the minimum monthly bill being changed from 75 cents to 65 cents, and a reduction being made per kilowatt hour of an average of half cent on electric lights. The reduction on power rates amounts to about 20 per cent. of the rates in force last year. The approximate saving to consumers on electric light and power for the ensuing fiscal year is placed at $459,739. For the use of electric power off the peak load the board has fixed the schedule at 20 per cent., instead of 10 per cent. reduction from regular rates, which was the schedule for the past year.

In discussing the telephone rate situation the report says that it was absolutely impossible to recommend the rates fixed by the Council last year for the Home Telephone Company, as these would not allow the company a reasonable return upon its investment; but a uniform rate for the two telephone companies was established by making some reduction in the residence rates on Pacific Telephone Company phones and slightly increasing the rates for Home company residence phones.

The Board candidly admits: "The figures we arrived at we believe will give both companies a reasonable return on their investment, though not all they are really entitled to, but a rate that we can defend in court."

The board has abolished the ten-party line service on suburban wires and has established in its place the four-party suburban service.

The complications involving the fixing of water rates for the numerous small water systems operating within the city limits are discussed in this report, among them being the contention of some of these companies that charges for meters which the consumers were obliged to pay for themselves, be included as capital invested, and which the board unwillingly included in the appraisements after having received legal advice that it could not eliminate these amounts from the capitalization of the companies. It is the intention of the board, says this report, to ask the City Council to adopt an ordinance regulating meter charges and water service connections. The board found that some of the water companies were selling water at less than cost, in territories where they were organized for the purpose of selling land.

Under the head of the service of public utility corporations the report shows that there have been recorded 275 official complaints during the fiscal year just closed, these covering a wide variety of causes, while every day the board has received numerous verbal complaints that have taken up much time of the office force in investigating. One man is constantly engaged in handling matters pertaining to street car service, while another is kept busy investigating other outside matters. One of the most serious causes of complaint at the present is water service in suburban districts, and this requires a vast amount of time in making investigations.

A useful work accomplished by the office force during the year has been a compilation of a book of records of every franchise granted by the city. This has been found to be of great service not only to this board, but to other city departments and to the public at large.

The board's engineering department has been diligent in compiling data showing the exact property valuations of the various public utility corporations, according to the report.

The gas inspection department has been required to make daily reports and the report states that prior to the inception of the city gas department the average British thermal units was 560, but the ordinance requires 600 units, and the average during the fiscal year was 620 units, the additional average of twenty units of heat effecting a saving to gas consumers of approximately $308.80 per day. During the year there were twenty-six official electric meter tests.

The report goes into detail as to the overlapping of the work of its departments with that of other municipal commissions and suggests that changes should be made so as to eliminate this waste of time and money.

Makes 'Em Be Good.

LONE POLICEMAN WIELDING STICK.

IT'S SUNDAY EVERY DAY OUT IN GLENDORA, THEY SAY.

Enforcement of the New Blue Laws Makes Easy-going Ones Walk Straight and Those Who Think Police Orders Are Jokes Discover Their Mistakes.

Figurative witches, astride broomsticks are riding out of Glendora at at rate of speed that would make aviators dizzy, for they are pursued by an aerial fleet of "blue laws" in the hands of Dan Fay, who constitutes the entire police force of the thriving little foothill city.

Glendora is spreading a reputation for being the quietest, most decent and well-behaved town that has existed since the Pilgrim Fathers landed on a large rock somewhere on the Atlantic coast, and decided that all things unwordly and sinful should be banished from the new continent.

And yet, there is a wail of protest going up from some of the "short-haired" inhabitants, who declare that their personal rights are trampled upon at a rate that is leaving them mere pulps of humanity.

What the stern-faced Puritans did to the witches of Salem, the authorities of Glendora are doing to all breakers of the city ordinances that are a part and parcel of the town's newly-acquired charter. But to do this the police force has found it necessary to arrest several of his friends and neighbors, and when the force walks his beat of nights his evening soliloquies partake of the injustice and other things which cram this mortal coil.

Here is what has happened to Glendora people up to date, or since the inauguration of the regime of the "blue law."

Sunday baseball abolished.

Only poolroom put out of commission.

Four prominent citizens arrested for auto violations.

Police force "flash light" turned full force into faces of leading residents trying to sneak home at night without awakening their better halves.

Loud and unseemly language put under ban.

Beside these are a number of other laws that are enforced and the jovial citizen, who has been in the habit of going out from Los Angeles on the midnight cars has suppressed his tendency to sing tender ditties while wending homeward his weary way.

"The only things spicy in Glendora at the present time are the pepper trees that line Foothill boulevard, and they have trimmed these up so close that they look like sheared lambs in the spring," said a disgruntled citizen yesterday. "There is no doubt that Glendora is a nice, quiet place at the present time. No doubt it makes the town a fine residence district, but it is pretty hard on the fellows who like to have a little sport now and then."

As for the police force, he simply says he was put in office to enforce the laws and see that Glendora citizens behave. He admits that Glendora has always been a nice residence town and says it has always been far ahead of its neighbors in this respect.

"Some of the citizens are a little sore because I got out warrants for them when they failed to have the rear lights on their autos burning," said the force. "When I told them to light up they just laughed and seemed to think it was a joke. However, I had to make an example so I showed them it was no joke to violate the law and arrested them. As for Sunday ball and other things, the City Trustees attended to that. They didn't want Sunday games, so they barred them."

And now Glendora is divided into two parts dominated by the "short-hairs" and the "long-hairs," as the easy-goers and the reformers are known, respectively. Just who will win the final trick is a matter for conjecture. One side asserts that the other is going so far as to stop the sale of ice cream on Sunday, but so far no such "blue law" has been enforced.

LEAVES STRANGE NOTE.

Coroner Will Endeavor to Determine It when Examining Into Probable Suicide of Janitor.

"Anybody who is born crazy is a d—d fool," was the note found yesterday afternoon on a table in J. M. Foss's room, No. 1327 West Eighteenth street.

Foss was found dead on his bed. The indications are that he swallowed poison and turned on the gas. On a shelf in the room was found a glass that had contained a solution of sulphuric acid. A postmortem will be held by orders of the Coroner at the Pierce morgue to ascertain the cause of death.

Foss was between 30 and 35 years of age. He was assistant janitor of the Polytechnic High School, and lived with A. T. Cooper, the janitor. Although Foss had lived with the Cooper family for some time they did not know whether he was married or single. As he never spoke of having a family, they took it for granted he was not married.

Thursday, Foss went to the Wolgast-Rivers prize fight. He complained of not feeling well upon his return home and remained about the house the remainder of the day. Shortly after breakfast Friday, the man went to his room. Later in the day, fearing something might have happened to Foss, Cooper visited his lodger's room and found him dead.

WOMAN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

PORTERVILLE, July 6.—While Mrs. H. D. Babcock, wife of a prominent orange grower, was dusting the veranda of her home in the Strathmore district this morning, she accidentally shot herself with a .32 revolver which her young son had thrown on the porch the evening before. Mrs. Babcock picked up the weapon by the muzzle and it is believed that it was cocked as it exploded almost as soon as she took it in her hand.

The bullet went through her right hand and lodged in the fleshy portion of her thigh, inflicting a painful wound.

Edward F. Halbert, City Clerk of Porterville, administered a severe thrashing to a peddler, who is said to have insulted and frightened Mrs. Halbert while she was alone this morning at her home in Roche avenue. Halbert kicked the peddler into the street and it is said that the intervention of neighbors only prevented Halbert from inflicting serious injury upon the salesman.

The man, whose name was not learned, as he was peddling without a license, is said to have forced his way into the Halbert home and by his insulting and intimidating actions practically forced Mrs. Halbert to purchase a household article he was selling. Mrs. Halbert was so frightened she could not fill out the check to pay for the article, and told the man to return later. When he returned Halbert had also returned from his office, had learned the story and was waiting for him. The thrashing followed.

Fishermen state that at no previous time in the history of the hills has the trout fishing been so good as at the present time. There has been an abundance of water in all the streams which has prevented a great deal of fishing up to this time, and the sport is the better in consequence, as none of the streams are fished out. Water has fallen rapidly and nearly all the pools are filled with fine fish.

There has apparently been little food in the streams as the trout will rise to almost any kind of a fly.

A Costly Newspaper.

John Harland, train agent for the Los Angeles Transfer Company was fined $5 yesterday by Judge Frederickson for having cut open a bundle of papers at the Salt Lake station earlier in the morning and extracting a copy.

Harland admitted he had been in the habit for months of getting a paper that way almost every morning, but declared he always left a nickel for the paper boy. Russel Hufford, for whom the papers were left at the depot, testified that he had lost a number of papers by having them stolen after the bundle strings had been cut, but denied ever having found any money.

Business: Markets, Finance and Trade.

FINANCIAL NEWS SUMMARY.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Virginia Carolina Chemical earned 3.28 per cent. on common stock in year ended May 31, against 2.11 per cent. a year ago.

Trade reviews growing optimistic in business circles with present trade satisfactory.

Commercial agencies report 179 business failures in United States this week again 179 previous week.

Some opposition is raised against the Wabash reorganization plan. Stockholders object to being assessed 10 refunding bond issues.

Press censorship in Mexico removed indicating revolt against Madero government has been suppressed.

Bill introduced in House provides for penalty of 10 per cent. of net earnings of corporations violating Sherman law.

Twenty industrials declined 2.01 per cent.

Twenty active rails declined .49 per cent.

The stock list presented a rather firm appearance throughout today's short session and while activity was not pronounced the disposition to liquidate was not marked. It appears very much as if the pressure which was directed against the market yesterday was very much a reflection of uncertainty predicated on the mixed political outlook.

General trade according to the weekend reviews, continues favorable and the advices regarding conditions in agricultural sections are also satisfactory.

Banking conditions are considered sound and the poor bank statement published today was regarded as merely reflecting the July disbursements and that as soon as funds start to return this center from the interior that recent losses of cash will be rapidly overcome.

The disposition on the part of many to direct their attention to politics rather than to other factors of a more favorable and enduring nature is still quite pronounced, which may have the influence of promoting hesitancy and irregularity in the security market for a time, but brilliant crop prospects if fulfilled, will overshadow most other considerations.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

There was a reduction in the prices of several kinds of eastern cheese on the Produce Exchange yesterday, the drop amounting from ½ a cent to 2 cents, affecting daisies, twins, domestic Swiss block, limburger, cream brick and Roquefort. Northern cheese remained steady and unchanged. Tillamook daisies advanced ½ a cent on the bottom price to 18½ cents, with a top price of 19 cents being established.

Extragded honey advanced to 1 and 2 cents, water white to 9 and 10 cents, white to 8 and 9 cents and light amber to 7 and 8 cents. The crop is now reaching market in fair shape.

Nearly thirty carloads of fruit came in yesterday, among the arrival being ten of canned peaches. The warm weather greatly increased the demand for fruit and there was little stock to be carried over Sunday. In the carload shipments were included plums, peaches, watermelons, bananas and pineapples. A car of cocoanuts also came.

At noon there were between five and six cars of tomatoes on the track unsold. They were chiefly from Imperial Valley, and a large part of them were sunburned and overripe upon arrival. The price on the Produce Exchange was put down to 70 and 90 cents, although the best stock sold as low as 60 cents.

New potatoes were weak, declining to 90 cents and $1.30 a hundred pounds, the lug box rate remaining around 54 cents.

Nearly all the fresh fruits declined, pineapples to 7 and 8 cents, cherries about 2 cents all around, grapes 25 cents a crate and plums from 75 cents to $1.50 a crate. The cherry season is about over and little good stock on hand.

Eastern eggs have advanced in producing sections 1 and 2 cents, the advance being reported in Minnesota, Nebraska and Kansas. Eastern eggs in the local market yesterday were steady at 24 and 25 cents a dozen. It appears good eastern eggs are hard to get, owing to hot weather. The storage trade is limited. Butter was steady.

Receipts of the leading produce staples were: Eggs, 214 cases; butter (25,) 815 packages; cheese, 1,662 pounds; potatoes, 563 sacks; beans, 64 sacks; apples, 480 boxes.

New York Cotton Market.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The cotton market was the scene of nervous short covering from the opening today, which almost amounted to a bear panic, by the close, the sound of the gong only preventing a still further advance. Too much rain in the central and eastern belt supplemented killing reports of excessive rains and rank growth in southwest Texas, together with damage by boll weevils and army worms brought a flood of southern and general commission-house buying. It is not believed the short interest has yet been covered, and consequently a further advance, barring possible slight reactions, is anticipated.

Loman & Bryan say:

"Cotton advanced more than $1 a bale today, which carried prices to new high levels for the season, with all new crop months selling above 12 cents. Shorts covered on the unfavorable weather in all sections east of the Mississippi River, where showers continue and with predictions for more. Since the government report was made up these showers have done actual damage, interfering with needed cultivation and delaying a crop that was already a late one, and conditions now in all that section are undoubtedly lower than the low figures given them by a recent report.

"Reports from southwest Texas are not as brilliant as the trade has been led to believe, and on which much of the recent selling has been based. Boll weevil is said to be damaging the crop, and while the plant is very large, it is poorly fruited, a month late.

"The movement of new cotton will be later than usual, and speculative shorts will get the advantage of the usual hedge selling against the August movement, and scarcity of desirable grades that is now being felt acutely will not be relieved as early as hoped for by new cotton."

Shares and Money.

IMPROVEMENT IN WALL STREET.

DECLINES INDICATED IN ANTHRACITE SHARES.

United States Steel Is Again the Most Active of the Leaders and Holds to Its Partial Recovery. Amalgamated Copper and Allied Stocks Reflect Pressure.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 6.—Some improvement over yesterday's weak close was manifested by today's stock market. The opening was irregular, with declines in the anthracite shares, Canadian Pacific and Brooklyn Transit, but most of these losses were effaced in the first half hour with general strength elsewhere.

United States Steel was again the most active of the leaders and held its partial recovery. Amalgamated Copper and allied stocks, American Smelting excepted, continued to reflect pressure, probably in anticipation of an adverse report by the Producers' Association next week. In the railway group Hill shares held firm with unusual activity in Southern Railway issues, the preferred gaining materially on prospects of increased dividend. Interboro-Metropolitan preferred, General Electric, Tennessee Copper, American Tobacco and American Snuff all closed with material net gains. Another low record for Consols was reported from London, where money was easier and discounts harder. The bank statement met the most unfavorable expectations. An actual cash loss of $24,000,000, a loan increase of more than $11,000,000, and a decrease of $26,000,000 in net deposits reduced aggregate cash reserves from $433,453,000 to practically $429,000,000, wiped out the $12,546,000 of last week's cash reserves and created a deficit of $3,413,000. The bond market was irregular. Total sales, par value, $902,000. Government bonds were unchanged on the week.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL OFFICE, U. S. WEATHER BUREAU, Los Angeles, July 6.—[Reported by Ed A. Carpenter, Local Forecaster.] At 5 o'clock a.m. the barometer registered 29.86; at 5 p.m. 29.85. Thermometer for the corresponding time showed 58 deg. and 73 deg. Relative humidity, 5 a.m., 95 per cent.; 5 p.m., 41 per cent. Wind, 5 a.m., north, velocity 4 miles; 5 p.m., southwest, velocity 8 miles. Highest temperature, 77 deg.; lowest, 56 deg. Rainfall for season, 21.69 inches. Barometer reduced to sea level.

WEATHER CONDITIONS. — There is no change in the stagnant pressure conditions over the United States. The barometer continues slightly below the average in the valley of the Colorado and along the Montana-Canadian line. On the Pacific and Atlantic coast the pressure is higher. Light showers fell in the Southern States and over Montana and North Dakota. The temperatures are higher over the Mississippi Valley, owing to the absence of pressure changes. The most notable temperatures of 90 deg. or above are as follows: Boston, 92 deg.; Chicago, 92 deg.; St. Louis, 94 deg.; Green Bay, 90 deg.; Kansas City, 98 deg.; Memphis, 90 deg.; St. Louis, 94 deg.; St. Paul, 90 deg.; Shreveport, 92 deg., and Toledo, 90 deg. While the weather is not unusually hot in these cities, it is a fact that it is practically the first warm wave of the year and that it is accompanied by high humidity, high night temperatures and absence of wind. The weather in Los Angeles will probably continue fair for the ensuing twenty-four hours, with the usual short periods of night and morning cloudiness.

HIS PARTING SHOT.

Former Governor of Nevada Leaves for North After Telling What He Thinks of Roosevelt et al.

D. S. Dickerson, former Governor of Nevada and candidate on the Democratic ticket for United States Senator, severely arraigned Roosevelt and followers of the red bandana last night before he left for San Francisco. Gov. Dickerson arrived several days ago and went to Venice where he visited friends.

"The progressive movement is something larger than any personality," said Dickerson. "Its success does not depend on the election of any man to office. It may be called the progressive party, but in the popular mind, it will be merely the Roosevelt party—regardless of its name or principles—called into being because in no other way could Roosevelt gratify his ambition to become again President of the country."

The Governor declared the truth is that the movement is nine-tenths Roosevelt and one-tenth progressive.

"A few persons with an immense idea of their own capabilities and superior judgment talk of organizing a new party in the course of the next six weeks and then overwhelming both of the old parties in the dozen weeks that remain for the campaign. The conception suggests hysterics. For the last sixty years the President has been either a Republican or a Democrat and these two historical parties are still in running order. In my opinion the next President will be a Democrat or a Republican. Those who question this fact are victims of superheated imagination."

Dickerson is a mining man and newspaper publisher in Ely, Nev. He was elected Governor in 1907 and served until 1911. He walked from Colorado to Nevada twelve years ago and seven years later was elected to the highest office in the State. He began life as a printer's devil.

The Governor arranged to leave for the North Friday night, but the porter at the Alexandria got his suitcases mixed up with some other grips and he was forced to remain here until they were returned to him from Fresno.

INVESTIGATORS UNDER FIRE.

Councilman Declares He Will Introduce Resolution Calling on Board to Produce Warrants.

The City Council seems bound to know all about the findings of the original Aqueduct Investigation Board, despite the snubs and rebuffs the city fathers twice received when they demanded a report.

Councilman Lusk declared yesterday afternoon that he will introduce a resolution Tuesday demanding that City Auditor Myers produce all warrants and demands of the original board, so that it may be known just what became of the $8000 appropriation.

The Aqueduct Investigation Board appears to be controlled by the Socialist party. Chairman Warner leans toward the Marxian form of government and Hart and Cady are out and out Socialists. E. W. Tuttle, the board's attorney is a partner of Job Harriman and was a candidate for City Attorney in the last municipal campaign. Engineer Schaffer is also a Socialist.

BRAWNY ARMS HALT RUNAWAY.

A TRAFFIC PATROLMAN THROWS HORSE, IS HURT.

Grasps Nose of Bitless Animal, Throws Him and Sustains Sprained Wrist and Body Bruises. Fourth Time He Has Risked Life at Fourth and Main Streets.

By the strength he has in his forearms and shoulders, Traffic Patrolman Johnson grasped a bitless runaway horse as it tore across Fourth and Main streets yesterday afternoon and threw it to the pavement as it was about to trample two women.

Johnson was partially stunned when the horse fell on him. He was taken to the Receiving Hospital. He sustained a sprained left wrist and a number of body bruises.

The horse was attached to a light wagon, and was driven by R. Reidenberg.

Johnson was crossing Fourth and Main streets to telephone when his attention was called to a horse running west on Fourth street. On the seat of the light spring wagon was a man unable to control the animal. The bit had slipped from the animal's mouth.

Instantly Johnson rushed into the middle of the street and prepared to meet the on-rushing animal. As the horse reached him, he grabbed the animal's nose with his right hand, and caught his mane in his left. By sheer strength he pulled the horse's head in one direction and pushed his neck in the other.

The horse didn't take half a dozen steps after that. He fell on his side, unable to resist the efforts of Johnson to throw him. The patrolman was unable to jump when he saw that the horse was going to fall, and fell under the animal as he rolled over.

Scores of men and boys rushed to Johnson's assistance and quickly rescued him. While the patrolman was being taken to the Receiving Hospital many hands reharnessed the horse and Reidenberg drove away.

This is the fourth time Johnson has risked his life at Fourth and Main streets. Twice he has swung himself under moving street cars to rescue boys knocked off bicycles.

"But the patrolman says you are."

"I haven't had a drink in fifteen years."

The court was not able to try the case yesterday, and reset it for tomorrow.

BROADWAY STORE'S PICNIC IS GAY SUCCESS.

Lively Sports, Revels in Surf and Pike Amusements Enjoyed by Merry Throng—Over a Ton of Watermelons and Other Eatables in Proportion.

Nearly 800 members of the happy family of the Broadway Department Store spent a merry afternoon and evening at Long Beach yesterday, this being the occasion of the twelfth annual outing of the employees of the big store. A picnic lunch, provided by the store management and served on the lower deck of the auditorium on the Long Beach waterfront; a programme of athletics, including races and a ball game; free dances in the auditorium; surf and plunge bathing and the numerous amusement features along the Pike made the hours pass swiftly in a continuous round of pleasure.

The lunch included 2000 pounds of watermelons, eighty gallons of lemonade and fruit punch, 150 pounds of cookies, and generous supplies of cake, ripe olives and pickles.

After partaking of this big repast, the picnickers climbed the stairs to the auditorium hall and engaged in a series of lively athletic events. No world records were broken, though in the women's and girls' peanut race and the backward race between the department managers and their assistants, marks were made which should cause champions in these events to sit up and take notice.

The Long Beach Municipal Band and Squire Franklin DuRee, president of the Long Beach Pike Association, came to this city to escort the picnickers to their special cars. President DuRee took the place of Secretary Robert L. Bisby of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Bisby being detained by ill health.

At 1 o'clock the employees of the store, led by the beach band, marched down Broadway and Sixth street to the Pacific Electric building, in the rear of which the special cars were in waiting. The party filled an even dozen of the cars.

The procession was given bright touches by the red parasols carried by the employees, each parasol bearing in large white letters the name of the store. The picnickers also wore white satin badges, appropriately inscribed. At Long Beach the party alighted from the cars at Sixth street and American avenue, from where they marched up Sixth street and down Pine avenue to the auditorium.

The athletic contests, which were adjudged by W. W. Penry, M. S. Carroll, W. Y. Smither and D. D. Griffin, resulted as follows: 50-yard dash for boys up to 18 years, Martin Herchen first, Herbert Lively second; 50-yard dash for girls up to 18 years, Mary Creola first, Rose Omieccynski second; 50-yard backward race, department managers vs. assistants, W. W. Penry first, H. S. Carroll second; peanut race, women and girls over 18, Lenora Gill first, Florence Immerman second; three-legged race, boys under 18, Stanley Gorman and Martin Herchen first, Lauren Donlan and Earl Russell second; potato race, girls under 18, Lenora Gill first, Rose Omieccynski, second; department relay race, two boys and two girls in each team, Marie Reever, Ruby Ramsell, Fred Ashley and Herman Teichrief first, Lenora Gill, Rose Omieccynski, Milton Ferguson and Lauren Donlan second; hoop race, free-for-all, Herman Teichrief first, James Herald second. First prizes were $2 and second prizes $1. A baseball game was played between teams representing the delivery department and the other departments of the store.

Bathing in the surf was one of the most popular pleasures of the day. Special rates for the picnickers were made at almost all the Pike amusement places. The picnickers did not return in a body, tickets being good on any of the Pacific Electric cars throughout the day or night.

The committees were: H. S. Carroll, master of ceremonies; W. B. Kilner, R. R. Musser, finance; J. Levin, W. B. Elms, Louis Sweet, I. K. Carr, lunch; H. S. Carroll, Miss Kinch, W. W. Penry, publicity; J. S. Schmidt, J. Levin, H. S. Carroll, sports; D. D. Griffin, A. M. Ashley, property; A. H. Adams, noise instruments; Milburn, Norton, Henshey, Vient and Lewis, boosters; J. S. Schmidt, starter; J. Levin, clerk of course; W. W. Penry, M. Hamlin, W. Y. Smither, judges; S. F. DuRee, announcer.

PLAYWRIGHT IS HONORED.

Author of the Mission Play Is Presented with Loving Cup by Admirers—Leading Man Remembered.

With the termination of the Mission Play at San Gabriel at hand, the members of the company and some of those interested in the production presented John S. McGroarty with a handsome silver loving cup yesterday.

Former Senator Del Valle, on behalf of the donors, made the presentation address to which McGroarty answered feelingly, expressing his appreciation and esteem for the splendid co-operation given in the great work by every individual of the company.

Benjamin Horning, the leading man, whose interpretation of the character of Father Junipero Serra has brought him much attention, was also remembered with a beautifully-engraved solid gold watch, inscribed with the dates of the play and other interesting data.

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 5.—It was entirely "safe and sane" on the Fourth. There was hardly a noise above a whisper. Nobody went to the country to avoid the cannon firecrackers. There was the usual amount of oratory in several of the parks, but people did not have to listen to it. To offset this necessary evil, there were free concerts and athletic sports galore.

Nevermore shall it be said that a woman cannot keep a secret. The federated ladies in biennial session here elected a president and for a while told mere man nothing of the result. They favored woman suffrage and adjourned in so dignified a manner that we hardly knew that the end had come. They made a hit with us and are welcome to visit us again in 1915 or any other old time.

It cannot be gainsaid that we have a sense of humor. The audience laughs every time an actress says: "I poisoned my husband," in the dramatized version of O. Henry's "Cabbages and Kings." It is soon to be produced in New York and it remains to be seen whether Gothamites have a like appreciation of the ludicrous.

Much praise has been accorded to Oakland's harbor, but it is not amiss to call attention to the fact that the Gen. Slocum stuck on a sandbank when leaving with Gov. Tener of Pennsylvania on board. He was on his way to pick a site for his State at the exposition grounds and was not delayed very long by the incident.

Believing that she would make Sidney Hargreaves, a Los Angeles capitalist, unhappy by marrying him, Miss Dollo Leon Morton, a concert pianist, aged 22, took poison. When revived she said: "My love for Sidney knows no reason and it was this devotion that made me try to kill myself. I am sorry at not succeeding. He can never realize how unhappy we would be if married. The world may not understand my philosophy, but that cannot be helped." The world does understand the girl, and her philosophy is of the progressive kind in affairs of the heart.

Mayor Rolph is patiently awaiting further data before reorganizing several city bureaus. It is known that many public buildings are of faulty construction and there is an approximate deficit of over a million dollars. The Twin Peaks reservoir and the auxiliary fire system are also under fire and definite news is eagerly expected.

Until accepted by the City Engineer, the auxiliary fire system will not get us lower insurance rates. J. C. McCaughern, secretary of the fire underwriters, wrote this to the Chamber of Commerce. Insurers suffer not only from mismanagement of public funds, but also from unnecessarily high insurance rates.

A "city-beautiful campaign" has been inaugurated by federated improvements clubs. They ask for an ordinance providing open spaces bordering sidewalks west of Van Ness avenue and also making it a misdemeanor to destroy plants on sidewalks. If the law is executed, they hope for a civic millennium.

A local newspaper says editorially that George A. Merrill, principal of the Lick School and Mayor of Redwood City, thinks with his feet. His offense consists of a statement that "common honesty is an essential plank in a party platform." For the sake of his pupils and the good of his constituents, it is to be hoped that Mr. Merrill will think higher up.

Fine Improvement for Valuable Close-in Corner.

Up to Date.

FINE HOTEL FOR PICO AND FLOWER

VALUABLE CLOSE-IN SITE TO BE IMPROVED.

Corner Is Seventy by One Hundred and Fifty Feet, With an "L" at Rear—Building Will Be Four Stories in Height and Modern in Appointment.

The valuable site at the southwest corner of West Pico and South Flower streets is to be improved at once with a modern four-story hotel building, plans for which are now nearing completion in the offices of the architect, Arthur Burnett Benton. The improvement will be erected by E. F. R. Vail, who has already leased the structure to the Stilwell Hotel Company for a term of years. Construction will be begun within a few days.

The site has a frontage of seventy feet on Pico street by a frontage of 150 feet on Flower, with an "L" of 40x50 feet at the rear. The hotel will occupy the entire ground area, with the exception of the space reserved for courts.

The design of the building is exceedingly simple. The Pico and Flower-street fronts will be faced with white enameled brick to the second-story level. Above this the exterior will have a white plaster finish. The cornice will be of reinforced concrete moulded in an ornamental design.

The first story will contain six large stores, together with the main lobby, ladies' parlor, billiard rooms and general toilets. The boiler-room, work shop and storage-rooms will be in the basement.

There will be in all 120 guest rooms, each with disappearing bed, running hot and cold water and private telephones. A large number of the rooms will have private bath, as well.

Among the modern appliances to be installed will be an automatic passenger elevator, vacuum-cleaning system and steam heat. The place is designed to be a first-class family hotel.

BUYS ON EAST SEVENTH.

Investor Pays Hundred Thousand Dollars for Close-in Site—Plans to Build Substantial Improvement.

The sale of a lot on the south side of Seventh street, between Main and Los Angeles streets and distant 110 feet east of Main, is reported by Alexander MacKeigan. The consideration is given at approximately $100,000.

The property is 60x105 feet in size. The improvements are nominal, consisting of an old two-story frame dwelling, erected in 1883. The site is to be improved at once with a one-story pressed brick building, the foundations being made strong enough to carry a number of additional stories.

The property was sold by Miss Mai Allen Moran to a local investor, who intends using the proposed building for his own business, and whose identity is not for the time being disclosed.

LONG BEACH SALES.

The Joseph A. Rominger Realty Company of Long Beach reports sales and exchanges as follows: The sale of the Bassett home in the east part of Long Beach, to George Craig, supervising engineer of the Craig ship-building plant, at a consideration of $25,000. The sale of an apartment site on Pacific avenue, for Mrs. Putnam, at $5500. The sale of fifty acres just north of Long Beach to Dr. Mankin for a consideration of $30,000, and sale of the home of M. H. Wells, near Hotel Virginia, to F. W. Eagen of Los Angeles, for a consideration of $7500. Rominger has recently associated with him J. W. McCarroll, formerly of Idaho Falls. The firm name will hereafter be Rominger & McCarroll. Associated with the firm also will be Will Carruthers, formerly of Kansas City, Mo., who will have charge of the departments of insurance, loans and rentals, in addition to acting as general sales agent.

The officers and directors of the new company are R H Mouser, president and general manager; P. J. MacDonald, secretary and treasurer, and George W. Baden, P. J. Welsh and Miner Moore.

SEEKS TO BE MASHED.

New Policewoman Parades Before Bootblack Stands Ready to Arrest Men Who May Offer Insult.

Mrs. Rachael Shatto, the latest woman acquisition to the police force, the only woman to pass the qualifying examination recently held, has been detailed to arrest bootblack "mashers."

A number of complaints have been received recently by the police from women and young girls who declared they had been insulted by men employed on bootblack stands. The women complained that they had been insulted either by the men making slighting remarks to them as they passed, or having the "shiners" step out onto the sidewalk and speak to them.

Mrs. Shatto spent the greater part of the day yesterday passing bootblack stands in the shopping district on the lookout for men and boys who would give her provocation to arrest them.

It is intended to keep Mrs. Shatto on the work until some of the bootblacks have been arrested in the hope that it will have a deterent effect upon the others.

UNVEILING A MONUMENT.

Handsome Memorial Reared in Inglewood Cemetery to Mark Resting Place of Well-Loved Woman.

The ceremony of unveiling a monument reared to the memory of the late Mrs. J. D. Burch, in Inglewood Park Cemetery, will take place this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The "We Boys" class of the First Methodist Sunday-school, relatives and friends will attend, leaving the corner of Sixth and Hill streets on special cars at 2:30 o'clock. It is hoped that Dr. Charles Edward Locke, to whom she was assistant at the time of her death, may be there and the present teacher of the class, Rev. Dr. Elbert S. Todd, an uncle of the deceased, will take part in the ceremonies. Ernest Oliver, the first president of the class society, and Frank Buren, a former president, will speak.

The unveiling comes upon the first anniversary of the death of Mrs. Burch, and on the nineteenth anniversary of her organization oof the class, of which she continued the teacher for eighteen years. The service will be a loving tribute to a noble woman, and all friends are invited to attend. They may go on the special cars, or take the regular Hawthorne cars on South Spring street.

NEW STEAMER SERVICE.

With the sailing of the new 10,000-ton steamship Manuka from San Francisco, the 24th inst., the Union Steamship Company of New Zealand will establish a regular monthly service to Tahiti, New Zealand, and Australian points, and the company announces that if the expected business is developed in Los Angeles it will place a weekly service in operation at this harbor.

FORTY-SECOND BIRTHDAY.

The Los Angeles Furniture Company has just passed its forty-second anniversary. The store was opened at that time by Rinaldi & Company, and was incorporated under the present name in 1870, and has steadily kept abreast with the remarkable growth of the city. The event will be celebrated by the beginning of an anniversary sale on Monday.

Hands Folded.

FEDERAL JURY'S WORK'S ENDED.

INDICTMENTS AGAINST INDIANS AMONG LAST ACTS.

Harriman's Wife Goes on Bond of Seattle Unionite Held for Contempt Until He Produces Papers Before Grand Jury or Until His Appeal Is Settled.

The final report of the United States grand jury was made to Judge Wellborn yesterday, and he discharged that body from duty.

An indictment was returned against Ambrosio Apappas, an Indian at the Cahuilla reservation in Riverside county, for the killing of Indian Superintendent W. H. Stanley, on May 2, last, and another for a murderous assault on Celso Serrano, a member of the Indian police. Francisco Lubo was also indicted for a murderous assault on Celso Serrano, at the time of the attack on Superintendent Stanley.

When the investigation of the murder was undertaken by Asst. U. S. Dist.-Atty. Robinson, it was believed that it would be possible to show that the killing of Stanley was the result of an understanding or conspiracy against the official, for it was known that there had been a great deal of trouble on the reservation, but the evidence was not forthcoming.

T. G., J. W. and D. A. McGarvin, Alfred Ray Ownbey, E. Carpenter, C. Kramer, Wong Wing, Liw Tuck Yen and William E. Balluff were indicted for smuggling Chinese from Mexico, the overt act being involved in the trip of the gasoline launch "America," that afterward landed twenty-three Chinese on the California coast at Pescadero. All of the defendants have pleaded not guilty. At least two of the party have already confessed, it is alleged.

J. N. Littlejohn, the Pullman car porter charged with smuggling opium across the line from Mexico, pleaded not guilty in being arraigned before the court.

N. Bowditch Blunt, indicted for violation of the copyright law, pleaded not guilty, but indicated that he might change his plea when he became acquainted with the indictment.

Mah Qua Leng, a Chinese, charged with uttering a forged certificate of residence, was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and stand committed until it was settled. The prisoner is already under orders of deportation.

George Leonardis, a Greek, will be compelled to return to his native land, Judge Wellborn yesterday dismissing the writ of habeas corpus sworn out in his behalf. Leonardis has been a resident of Los Angeles for about five years, but was never naturalized. He was ordered deported on departmental warrant as being an undesirable allen. At the deportation hearing it was shown that Leonardis's attorney, George Hupp, had issued a subpoena, on his own motion, and for this Judge Wellborn sharply reprimanded him.

The bond of $500 given by H. W. Pohlman, on his appeal from the judgment of Judge Wellborn to the Circuit Court of Appeals, in the contempt case was approved by the court. The sureties are James Gray, a labor official identified with the Carpenters' Union, and Mrs. Job Harriman, wife of the Socialist candidate for Mayor in the last election.

Most Everyone Has the Idea That They Want To Make Money. Well, Do You?

If So, Invest At Hermosa Beach For the Following Reasons---

FIRST—It is absolutely the only beach on the coast where no deleterious matters are permitted to flow into the sea. For this reason the water, being perfectly pure and clean, one can swim and play in it, all they please without any hesitation, as it is as pure as in your own bath tub, and knowing this you are happy and enjoy the pure salt water without fear of contracting any dangerous disease.

SECOND—The company's prices on the lots are 70 per cent. cheaper than at Venice or at Ocean Park, that have had all the advantages of good roads and fine train service that is now coming to Hermosa Beach, as the county good roads are already completed into the city; therefore, with the raise in prices that is sure to follow, your investment is guaranteed.

THIRD—$365,000 has been expended in macadamizing the streets and Hermosa Beach boasts of more macadamized streets than any city of its size in the world. When you buy a lot at Hermosa Beach these improvements are all paid.

FOURTH—The water has been pronounced by Prof. Hilgarde, of the State University, to be as pure as any in the State of California.

FIFTH—Hermosa Beach has voted bonds to install one of the longest, most fashionable and best equipped pleasure piers on the coast, being one thousand feet in length.

SIXTH—With the sanitary conditions, with the purity of water, with the one-half million dollars of improvements already installed under the supervision of the most competent engineers looking into the future for permanent and ever-increasing values, with the great pier to be constructed by the city, don't you think your investment guaranteed? What do you think the future means to Hermosa when the sea front space is limited? Please remember from Santa Monica on the north to Redondo on the south is all the close-in beach property. High bluffs and precipitous cliffs will not make beach resorts, and with the rapid growth of the great city of Los Angeles, close-in beach lots cannot be purchased at any price within reason inside the next three years.

SEVENTH—Remember the prices and terms. One-fourth down and the balance practically on your own terms. Think of it, "while you are asleep," your investment is growing into money every night and day for you while the company is carrying the deferred payments.

—are you undecided where to build that home?

This story of the "man-looking-for-a-place-to-build-his-home" will help you decide.

He'd been around quite a bit—in fact gone over most of the residence districts pretty thoroughly.

And this much he'd decided upon.

That he would not be shut in by other people's back yards nor have his view cut off by the house across the street. That meant, of course, that he'd have to go out a bit—for any of those over-rated districts at the edge of the city—in a short time—will be just a repetition of the Southwest residence districts. And we know how quickly they have been built up—hemmed in.

As I said, he was determined to get far enough away from the mental and physical cramping of the city. He'd looked over certain well-known suburbs. But they weren't BIG enough. He wanted something more than the tameness of the conventional suburb—something more than a fifty-foot lot—built up on either side. He wanted view—a chance at the wonder of a California sunset. He wanted room enough for himself and his family to breathe deeply—to grow.

And he'd come to me to help him find it.

I didn't waste any time talking—I'd a bigger argument.

My car's right outside, I said. It will be a pleasure to "lead you to it."

A short, quick run over splendid roads, on past the show estates of the millionaires of Los Angeles—past the famous H. E. Science of Quakes.

EARTHQUAKES AND VOLCANIC ERUPTIONS.

BY WILLIAM L. ALTDORFER.

HAVE you ever been in the vicinity of an earthquake? If you have, you will never want to go through another experience of the kind. If you have not, it will cause shivers to glide up and down your spine just to read the experience of one who has passed through several of these terrifying earth phenomena.

Many earthquakes occurred while the writer was in the Philippines, especially on the Island of Mindanao. His first experience left him dazed and trembling with the feeling that the world was coming to an end. It was in 1904 when this island was shaken from end to end by one of the greatest earthquakes that ever occurred in that section of the globe. The ground seemed to rise up and strike you in the face. If you tried to stand up you fell down. Native shacks tumbled in all directions, caribous crawling along the road were thrown down, and altogether it seemed as if the world had suddenly gone topsy turvy.

But the peculiar part of the whole experience was the dreadful apprehensive feeling that seemed to smite one upon the first tremor of the earth. You have the same feeling, only probably intensified a thousandfold, as a person in the last stages of nervous prostration. It is a feeling as if something frightful were going to happen and you are absolutely helpless in the face of the supernatural. And this sensation grows even more intense the longer the shock continues. It has often happened that people have dropped dead from heart disease due to the terrific shock upon the nervous system.

EARTHQUAKES EVERYWHERE.

Within the last month reports have been received of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions in widely separated parts of the world. Only last week came the news of the great volcanic eruption and earthquake in Alaska. About the same time reports were received of a great earthquake at Jelisco and Colima, in Mexico, which caused much loss of life and destruction of property. Shortly after this came the news of a volcanic outbreak and earthquake in the Philippine Islands, in that section known as Moroland, around Mindanao and neighboring islands. This was followed within a few days by an earthquake in Japan, and about the same time several long-extinct volcanoes in India became active. After this dispatches reported earthquakes in Chile. All of these quakes were accompanied by violent volcanic eruptions in or near the vicinity of the shocks.

Scientists have been asked to give a reason for the many volcanic eruptions and earthquakes within such a short period of time, but to all questions the answer is the same, "There is no known reason to the scientific world." Several times in the past, it is claimed, phenomena of this kind have occurred simultaneously in various parts of the world, but it is rare.

The question has become a live issue with the scientists, and they are today investigating the problem all over the world. In their zeal to wrest the secret from mother earth, men have descended into the depths of volcanoes and walked about upon the bed of the crater within a few feet of the fiery, boiling mass. Some have even taken moving-picture operators to photograph the phenomena to prove to the unbelieving world that they have actually performed this unheard-of feat. They wanted absolute proof, and thought the best way to get it was to have a picture taken while within the walls of the crater.

Other scientists, within the month, have permitted themselves to be lowered into the mouth of an active volcano by means of a steel cable so that they might take notes of the phenomena at close range. These are only a few of the daring feats performed by scientists recently.

Everyone remembers the terrible San Francisco earthquake of 1906, with its loss of hundreds of human lives and the great destruction of property running into millions of dollars. Men who have made the earthquake a life study say that the recent quake in Alaska was a more terrific shock, or, rather, series of shocks, than those which caused the ruin of San Francisco. They declare that if a quake of such a severe nature were to occur in San Francisco or any other densely-populated section the ruin and loss of human life would be ten times greater than it was in California. The earthquake in Alaska in June 1912, will stand out prominently as one of the most severe ever recorded in North America.

The towns of St. Paul and Wood Island, in Kadiac, Alaska, were buried beneath two feet of lava ashes, sand, and pumice stone, and other villages suffered in like manner. Spouting hot ashes, flames, and rocks, shaking the earth with explosions, terrifying the natives with noises, lightning and smoke-filled skies; a livid glare by night extended many miles into the heavens, and high mountains hundreds of miles apart burst into flames, and created a reign of terror in Southwestern Alaska. Cordova was awakened by a mighty rumbling and cannonading of the mountains Illiama and Redoubt, more than 200 miles away.

An area within a radius of 700 miles of the volcanoes was devastated. Ashes three and four feet deep fell about Katmai, and extended to Sitka, more than 700 miles distant from the volcanoes. Mount St. Augustine was also in active eruption at the same time, and all the splendid farm and grazing lands around Kadiac were buried in an ash deposit two feet deep. The villages whose inhabitanes, mostly natives, are believed to have perished were Cold Bay, Katmai, Kanatuck, Bouglas, avenoosky, and Kemgamute. All the crops on the island were destroyed and millions of fish were killed by the sand and ashes that fell in the water. The water supply was polluted by decaying fish, while the springs were buried under the ashes.

Ralph S. Tarr, and Lawrence Martin are two of Uncle Sam's earthquake specialists in the geological survey at Washington. These scientists for many years made a study of the phenomena of earthquakes and voncanic eruptions with special reference to the last great Alaska earthquake of September, 1899. The result of their investigation has just been published by the survey and it is full of interesting information regarding volcanoes in Alaska. In speaking of the series of severe earthquakes of 1899 near Yakutat Bay it is claimed that the cause of these shocks was the growth of the St. Elias range, one of the youngest and loftiest mountain ranges in the world.

DESCRIPTION BY ALASKA PROSPECTORS.

There were a number of prospectors in the mountains at the time of the last earthquake, and the story as told by them is full of dramatic interest.

"We were sitting in our tent at the time," said one of the men, "and in our efforts to get outside one of the men was piled up in a corner after being thrown headlong over the camp stove, while Capt. Smith and I succeeded in getting hold of the tent pole, and as long as the shake-up lasted we held on to keep from being thrown to the ground. This shock must have lasted fully three minutes, the ground cutting up some of the queerest capers imaginable. In addition to the circular motion of the preceding heavy shock, it was waving up and down like the swells of the sea, only with considerably more energy."

Another prospector, camping a short distance farther in the mountains, said: "The moraine on which we were camped swerved and undulated so that a man could not stand. We ran from our tents, leaving everything behind. The Hubbard glacier and mountain, ten miles across its face, ran out into the bay for two miles. About twenty yards back of the beach and 100 yards above us was a lake about two acres in area and about thirty feet deep. This lake broke from its bed and rushed down on our camp, while we ran along the shore to escape its fury. Everything went down before it. All was buried by the thousands of tons of rocks that came down afterward. This deluge was almost immediately followed by one from the sea. A wall of water twenty feet high came in and carried everything back again into the hills. We heard a terrible roar in the direction of the bay, and on looking that way saw a tidal wave thirty feet high coming toward us, preceded by great geysers shooting into the air more than forty feet.

CRASHING GLACIERS TERRORIZE

"While these great waves were rushing up on the shore, the ground was swaying and breaking in long jagged cracks that seemed to go to the bottom of the earth. Confronted both front and rear by waves and floods, with the ground trembling under our feet and the thunder of crashing glaciers in our ears, it is small wonder that we ran around in a frenzy, not knowing which way to go, fearing every second the ground would open up and swallow us or the vast icebergs would fall down and crush us. Another party of five men camped a short distance from us ran back and forth while the earth was rocking and swaying like a cradle. A stream which separated this party from us was temporarily divided by the earthquake, which permitted them to cross over to our camp, but a little later this same stream was once more a raging torrent.

"Imagine, if you can, one's feelings under such conditions; then add to that the continual reports of the ice breaking off the glacier, the roar of the great landslides down the sides of mountains every little while, the noise of swollen mountain streams tumbling down among loosened icebers, continuous rain, with an occasional earthquake, and the uncertainty of what was to come next, and you can then form some idea of the last great earthquake in Alaska."

A better idea of the terrific character of this earthquake may be conveyed by saying that the 'uplift—the actual lifting up of thousands of square miles of the earth—extended from ten to forty-seven feet. What would happen if any such uplift as this occurred in even a small city? Houses formerly on a level with each other would be forty-seven feet higher than the others, after the quake, while the great majority, of course, would be total wrecks.

Otto Klotz, of the Canadian commission and Fremont Morse of the American commission, who mapped the tidal glaciers in Alaska, said that the Muir glacier had retreated more than eight and a half miles and the Grand Pacific more than eight miles in less than thirteen years. This retreat of the glaciers is ascribed to earthquakes. Morse contrasts the present and past condition of the Muir glacier in this way: "Formerly the Muir presented a perpendicular front at least 200 feet high, from which huge icebergs were loosened at frequent intervals. The sight and sound of these vast masses falling from the cliff or suddenly appearing from the submarine ice foot was something which once witnessed was not soon to be forgotten. It was grand and impressive beyond description."

THE ALASKA QUAKE OF 1899.

Almost nothing was known up to 1905 of the remarkable physical changes effected by the earthquake of September, 1899. The Yakutat natives knew there had been changes in the islands of Disenchantment Bay, where they hunted seal each year, but they knew nothing more. The white prospectors who were in this region during the earthquake never returned to see what changes took place. There was but one newspaper account of the earthquake, and the scientists say they were totally unprepared for the remarkable phenomena found upon their visit there during the summer of 1905.

C. E. Hill, a resident of Yakutat at the time of the last great earthquake, gives a thrilling description of it. "The shake of September 10 did all the damage," said Mr. Hill. "We were in our tent and could not get up and stand on our feet at first. The mission rocked until the church bell rang, and if anything was needed to complete the terror of the natives it was the ringing of the bell. Just as the earthquake ceased, we saw a wonderful thing happen on the bay. There the water began roaring in great tidal waves. There were three of them following each other at intervals of five minutes, and we stood and watched the bay rise fifteen feet from low tide to a foot above the highest tide point. The bay itself was full of small pools whirling trees, lumber and driftwood around and around so fast the eye could hardly follow them. They circled like a wheel. The water was thrown into a mass of foam. The whirlpool caught the chute of a new sawmill below us and carried it away in a twinkling.

DEATHS FROM EARTHQUAKES.

"Just across from Yakutat is the island of Kanak. Before the earthquake an old Indian graveyard, about six feet above high tide, was located on this island. It was out on a point, and suddenly we noticed the point, graveyard, and all disappear, sink out of sight. There was in the graveyard a very high pole, with a cross on top, and we soon discovered this cross way out, with four or five feet of it sticking out of the water and still upright. The next day we took a boat and rowed right over the place where the graveyard had formerly been, and looked down into the water. We could see the tops of trees. In several places we made soundings, but could find no bottom. A little farther along the shore we found marks of a number of gigantic water spouts. They had bored great holes in the ground, and had carried the sand and earth inland and scattered it a foot deep over acres of ground. From every indication the force of water spouts and waves must have been irresistible, and Yakutat must surely have been washed away had the tidal waves swept the bay at high instead of low tide. The earthquake was a magnificent sight, but hardly

HOST OF NEW SKYSCRAPERS.

Record Number of Big Blocks Under Construction.

Downtown Los Angeles Scene of Transformation.

July After Building Laurels Claimed by June.

With all previous records of building activity for a single month eclipsed during June, it does not seem at all improbable that July also may add new laurels to the sheaf of the present busy year. Permits for at least two great downtown structures, the Hollingsworth building at Sixth and Hill, and the Clark Hotel building for Hill just above Fifth, will in all likelihood be taken out during the present month, giving July a splendid start toward a new record. It may be safely assumed that permits for new homes will aggregate in valuation considerably in excess of $1,000,000. Permits for stores, flats and apartments in all sections of the city may be counted on to add many hundreds of thousands of dollars to the total. Therefore, no one need be surprised if the phenomenal June total of $3,488,000 is discounted by that of July.

As the real estate men would express it, there is an unusually large amount of "big stuff" under way in the downtown district at this time. Probably never before in the history of Los Angeles has there been so large a number of buildings of really metropolitan proportions under construction at one time.

At Eighth and Broadway the magnificent new thirteen-story home of the Los Angeles Investment Company is nearing completion, while its neighbor, the twelve-story Belasco Theater building has already reared a great bulk of structural steel above the sidewalk line. Across the street in the same block the large mercantile building of the Isaacs Bros. Co., is being roofed.

Plans are rapidly taking shape for the eleven-story Cheney building in th same block, a lease for the first four stories of this structure having been negotiated during the past week. In the next block work has been begun upon the ten-story addition to Bullock's. At Fifth and Broadway the site for the stately new home of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company has been cleared of the old frame shacks erected on the corner a generation ago.

Construction will be begun upon the mammoth new Broadway Department Store at Fourth and Broadway immediately after Christmas. At First and Broadway the new home of The Times is rapidly nearing completion.

The great concrete columns which are to support the eleven-story Black building at Fourth and Hill are already above the street level. The excavation for the huge eleven-story hotel building projected by E. P. Clark for the east side of Hill street, just opposite the Hill-street depot, is progressing rapidly. At Sixth and Hill, similar progress is being made in the excavation for the eleven-story Hollingsworth building.

At Sixth and Figueroa the exterior work has been practically completed upon the nine-story hotel that is being erected by Carrol W. Gates. Similar advance has been made upon the eight-story apartment hotel that is being constructed by F. O. Engstrum near by on Orange street.

The site for the splendid thirteen-story building projected by the Bible Institute for the east side of Hope street, adjoining the Normal grounds, has been entirely cleared and auto-dump carts are making great inroads in the excavation work.

At Seventh and Grand, both the southeast and the southwest corners are being cleared for the hotel and department store buildings projected by John Brockman. Construction will be begun at once upon the thirteen-story loft building projected by the Standard Fireproof Building Company for a site on the north side of Seventh near Grand.

The work of razing the old Ramona Hotel building at Third and Spring, preparatory to the construction of the thirteen-story Washington-Sullivan building, has been begun. It is only a question of a short time until the wreckers will attack the old buildings on the Howe corner at Sixth and Spring to clear the way for the twelve-story Merchants' National Bank building.

At Seventh and Spring, the first floor of the new Union Oil building is being prepared for the occupation of the German American Trust and Savings Bank. Directly across the street the finishing touches are being put to the exterior work of the magnificent I. N. Van Nuys block, the first story of which will be occupied by the First National Bank.

At Ninth and Spring, excavation has been begun for the twelve-story building projected by Robert Marsh and Frank Strong. A permit was taken out during the past week for the ten-story Stillwell Hotel building on South Grand avenue, excavation for which has been completed. Work will be started at once upon a nine-story hotel for Mrs. Hattie M. Morris on Figueroa, just south of Sixth. The nine-story hotel being erected by F. W. Braun at Second and Clay is well under way.

These are buildings which are actually under way or about to be started in the downtown district. At least a half-dozen splendid modern structures have just been completed and occupied. No account has been taken in the above list of a number of noteworthy structures which are definitely projected to be started in 1913, and notable among which are the twelve-story New Rosslyn Hotel at Fifth and Main, the great block projected by a local syndicate for the northeast corner of Fifth and Spring and an eight-story mercantile building to be erected by the Isaacs Bros. Co. on South Broadway below Seventh. At least a dozen other great projects are in the wind and may "break" at any time

EARTHQUAKES AND ERUPTIONS

It will be seen that the Yakutat Bay earthquakes rank among the great earthquakes of the world. But it is in decided contrast with other earthquakes which occur in places of rather dense population. In Japan 7279 people were killed, 17,393 injured, and more than 200,000 buildings destroyed in the shocks of 1891. In the Charleston earthquake twenty-seven persons lost their lives and fifty-six others perished by cold and exposure. Many houses were destroyed, and many more damaged. During the first of the great earthquakes of India (Assam, 1897) practically all the buildings in 146,000 square miles were laid in ruins. In the second (Kangra, 1905,) 18,815 lives were lost, and the destruction of property was enormous, 112,477 building being destroyed.

In California, in 1906, 200,000 people were made homeless, but only 709 lives were lost directly by the earthquake. There was, however, great destruction of buildings, largely due to fire, their value being more than $300,000,000. In the Riviera earthquake of 1887, 640 people were killed and more than 570 injured. More than 60,000 people were killed in six minutes in the historic Lisbon earthquake of 1755, practically the whole city being thrown down. About 20,000 lives were lost in the great Calabrian earthquake of 1688, 43,000 in 1693, between 32,000 and 60,000 in 1783, 800 in 1905; while the loss of life in 1908 was more than 100,000.

BIRTH OF VOLCANIC ISLANDS.

In contrast with all this, there was no recorded loss of life as a result of the former Yakutat Bay earthquakes; and the only property damage known, aside from the loss of a rowboat and some tents, provisions and clothing by the prospectors in Disenchantment Bay, was the shifting of the roof of an uninhabited log cabin in outer Yakutat Bay and the cracking of a few chimneys and slight damage to a wharf in Skagway.

Some of the great earthquakes of South America and New Zealand, likewise in thinly populated districts, have doubtless been much like the Alaskan shocks in inflicting but slight damage to the human race.

In Alaska, and especially on the Aleutian Islands, there are many native and recently extinct volcanoes. In fact, there are so many along the coast that a detailed record would lead to confusion. All the active volcanoes of Alaska are on its southern border, and with few exceptions are situated close to the sea on the Alaskan peninsula and the Aleutian Islands.

Volcanic islands that rise overnight and disappear the next night are numbered among the unusual and most puzzling freaks of nature. But among Alaskan islands this is quite a common occurrence. A small spot in Bering Sea about thirty miles north of the Island of Unmak and forty miles west of the northern corner of Unalaska has been the scene in recent years of more violent volcanic activity and has undergone greater changes than any other part of northern Alaska. In this spot early in May, 1796, accompanied by thunder, earthquake, and steam, a volcanic island was suddenly thrown up from the depths of the sea. No longer ago than the summer of 1883 the waters were once more convulsed and shrouded in steam and fog, and a second volcano was born. These are among the islands known as the Aleutian group. The natives of that section claim one island may be thrown up overnight, while another disappears, and say this has continued for many years.

A resident of Unmak has given a vivid description of how these islands are born. He says: "One night, a few miles away, I saw a column of smoke, beneath which something black appeared to be rising. During the night fire appeared in its place, and at times became so bright that every object could be clearly distinguished for miles around. Then an earthquake shook our island with terrific roaring from the mountains at the south. The rising island tossed stones a distance of thirty miles. At sunrise the earthquake ceased, the flames diminished, and the newly risen island was seen, shaped like a black pointed cap. A month later it had risen considerably higher. Meanwhile fire was thrown up continuously. While the flames gradually died out, the smoke and steam continued for four years, and eight years later seal hunters found the water warm and the ground so hot that no one could walk upon it. That is how the island was born."

WHERE PEOPLE LIVE LONG.

More Centenarians in Bulgaria Than in Any Other Country in the World Compared With Population.

[Battle Creek Idea:] The more civilized we are, the faster we die and the shorter time we live. Take, for instance, the average length of life in various countries. In Bulgaria people still live to a good old age. I recently saw an account in a paper of the celebration there of the one hundredth anniversary of a wedding day. The couple, 120 and 118 years of age, had been married one hundred years; after living and working and struggling together a century, they were still alive and in good health. The Emperor gave them a pension, so that they will be able to spend the rest of their lives in comfort.

In Bulgaria there are thousands of centenarians—more than in any other country in the world in proportion to the population— out of three million people in Bulgaria, in fact, there are three thousand centenarians. In the United States we have only one centenarian in twenty-five thousand, so that there are twenty-five times as many centenarians in Bulgaria, in proportion to the population, as we have in the United States. Bulgaria is a little country with a population only equal to that of Michigan, yet it has three thousand centenarians, almost as many as we have in the whole United States with ninety millions of people. Spain has one centenarian in every forty-four thousand. France, a little more civilized than Spain, with still a large, healthy peasantry, has one centenarian in every 160,000 of the population. In England there is one centenarian in every 200,000 of the population; and in Germany, the most civilized country in the world, there is only one centenarian in 700,000, there being less than eight centenarians in the entire empire of Germany.

Boston's Strike Breakers.

[Boston Transcript:] It is said that the street-railway strike breakers came from New York; if that is so, a pair who had charge of a Charlestown car must have got their training on an East Side horse car. The car was bound for Charlestown from the city proper, and going down Washington street there were frequent signals from passengers who wanted to alight. Sometimes the conductor remembered what the bell rope was for and pulled it; more often, however, he shouted "Whoa!" to the motorman. The man at the front end of the car understood the lingo and obediently "whoaed" the car when he heard the conductor's command. When they got to Haymarket Square they were at a loss which way the car should go, down Canal street or along Washington street north. Finally the conductor settled the question by telling the motorman to "follow the green express wagon."

Cabinet Revision.

[Washington Star:] The ladies who want Andrew Carnegie for Secretary of War and Hetty Green for Secretary of the Treasury seem to have got mixed as to the qualifications of the eminent personages they so assiduously strive to compliment. The Secretary of the Treasury has certain responsibilities in the way of disbursement which would appeal to one who, like Mr. Carnegie, loves to pay out large sums. On the other hand, Mrs. Green's strategic operations when attacked by assessors indicate the resourcefulness and courage which should distinguish a great war official. The votes-for-women politicians should revise their Cabinet slate.

"A Roof Like a Burnished Shield"

Pioneer ROOFING

The low, white roofs gleaming in the sunlight, as they are seen on rows of bungalows in Los Angeles, are a most pleasing sight. They are made of Pioneer Silveroid Roofing. This is the material that makes possible the low-pitched roof and gives the true bungalow effect.

One-half the money spent on a shingle roof is wasted, for Pioneer Roofing will outwear two shingle roofs. Send for samples and booklet.

Santa Monica Educational Center.

Present Seven Grade Schools and High School Place Her Foremost in the United States.

Her New $300,000 Polytechnic High School, an Additional Educational Factor Vying With Any at Home or Abroad.

Under the legend of the origin of the name of Santa Monica be true of a being taken from the ly woman who shed so rs over her wayward son, ing streams of Santa Monicating the two soldiers who of the tears of the womother this story be true or it is, that there is not a place on earth, to command perpetuate the name ot revered legendary or othing than is this mountain d kissed, "Garden of Peace," Basin.

ions do the natural conditions ta Monica contribute to her the earned and ever applied term but this epithet is equally of her man-established . From the building of Sanica's first house in 1828 by Marques, every man-made ment has been of the highest to be in harmony with the ape setting that Nature installed.

Monica's first school building ected in 1850, Senator John D. being one of the donors of the H. O. McKusick being the tor. From the establishment school, Santa Monica has most been recognized as an educational center. This is not only true because of the high character of each of the school buildings, from the first to the last; but it is more especially true of the thorough curriculum of training for which these schools have always been noted.

The first school was erected on Sixth street; other schools have followed in quick succession, arranging themselves at correct intervals from each other until there are at present seven splendid grammar schools in Santa Monica, one of the most recent of which, is the Roosevelt School, directly adjoining the noted new subdivision of the Palisades. There is also a high school of the highest type here.

NEW $300,000 POLYTECHNIC HIGH SCHOOL A MASTERPIECE.

The new Polytechnic High School now being erected in Santa Monica and which will be completed in time for the Fall term of school, is one of the finest of such schools in the entire United States.

It is to consist of three buildings, the Academic building in the center, the "Manual Arts and Commerce" building on the Michigan avenue side, and the "Science, Household and Fine Arts" building on the Fremont avenue side. These three buildings combined, represent a total investment of $300,000. In addition to the main school buildings will be later, a girls' gymnasium on the Michigan avenue side, and a boys' gymnasium on the Fremont avenue side.

The Academic building, having a frontage of two hundred and sixty feet, contains an auditorium that will seat 1040, with a gallery; a stage as well equipped as that of the average theater of the same seating capacity; also a checkroom, dressing-rooms and a ticket booth. The seats of this auditorium will be well upholstered. Santa Monica Polytechnic students can well be proud of the reception they can give the various "Glee Choruses" and other college and school clubs that will undoubtedly give performances in these ample quarters from time to time, as well as the local societies, for it is to be a community auditorium. Also those planning theatrical careers should not feel at a loss on the usual theater stage, after having performed in the various school plays of this school, commencement exercises included.

There is also a music hall on the second floor of this building with a seating capacity of one hundred and ten, this also has a stage and dressing-room; very amply providing for the usual daily choral exercises of the various classes. Sixteen classrooms are in this building and a large library. The Principal's, Vice-Principal's and teacher's offices are on the first floor; but on the second floor are the offices for the Board of Education, City Superintendent and Secretary. These latter offices are especially imposing and handsome; looking as though they might belong to some parliamentary assembly or one of the highest judicial boards of our own country, rather than to a school board.

STUDIES TO BE TAUGHT.

The studies to which the Academic building will be given over, are: Ancient and modern languages, English, mathematics, history, music, debating and oral expression. These will be taught under the discipline of some of the most able scholastic minds in the country, following out to the minutest details the perfected systems of school training for which the schools of California, and particularly those of Santa Monica are noted.

The "Manual Arts and Commerce" building, as its name implies, will be devoted to Manual Arts and Commerce. This building occupies a space of 182 feet by 67 feet. Its first floor will have a foundry, forge, machine shops, rooms and appliances for cabinet making and practical physics, provisions for milling, stockroom, dry kiln, finishing-room, fuming-room, instructor's room and two lavatories. In the basement of this building will be the wood turning and the pattern making shop. The second floor of the "Manual Arts and Commerce" building will be devoted to the commercial department, mechanical drawing, applied arts and exhibit room.

Among other things which will be taught in the practical physics department, will be the repairing of automobiles, plumbing and electric wiring. These are features that are not provided by any such school anywhere else.

The "Science, Household and Fine Arts" building, is irregular in shape, like the Manual Arts and Commerce building, and occupies a space of one hundred and ninety-six feet by sixty-two feet. This building has on its first floor two lecture rooms and laboratories for chemistry, physics, biology, botany, physical geography, together with apparatus and dark rooms and instructors' rooms. The second floor will be occupied by the department of household and fine arts, including cooking, general sewing, dressmaking, millinery, housekeeping, laundry, free hand drawing, designs and water coloring.

HEALTH AND COMFORT OF STUDENTS AMONG PRINCIPAL PROVISIONS.

One of the main factors for which Mr. Rebok, the one to whom Santa Monica is largely responsible for the plans of this school, has looked out for, above all other considerations, is the humanity side, the health and comfort of the students.

Along this line, one of the unusual features of this school, is its two immense open-air study halls, open on three sides, but protected from the winds by the proper grouping of the buildings. These are on the easterly side of the main building covered by a roof the same as the buildings. Four rooms also on the second floor, have no wall on the easterly side. All windows throughout are to be so arranged that when opened the entire aperture of the window will be free.

The Academic building will be heated by warm air carried to the rooms by a fan system, the other two buildings will be heated by water; all of which will be installed in the same concrete, fireproof heating room. The school will be cleaned by vacuum cleaners.

Another important and distinctive feature which will materially aid the health of the girls, is a rest room, on the main floor of the Academic building. This will be provided with every conceivable comfort and convenience that the most pampered girl could receive in her own home, to insure health and comfort. Also in the Academic building will be a cafeteria with seating capacity of three hundred. This also will be of a nature that will afford the correct foods for the students.

The new school will be of tapestry brick and concrete, finished with a red tile roof. It is located between Fourth and Seventh street and Fremont and Michigan. It is one hundred and twenty feet above sea level, thus commanding a superb view of the sea, mountains, city, canyons and valleys. The athletic field is 502 feet by 354 feet, and has a quarter of a mile track.

THE RAILWAY WORLD.

Texas and the Railroads.

[Collier's:] Texas was one of the first States to create a railroad commission and to impress upon that commission the idea that railroads are built to serve the people rather than to make fortunes for their builders and operators. The first session of the commission was held June 10, 1891. In the twenty-one years since there has been no question of the commission's loyalty to the people. A logical result, which is beginning to disturb the business builders of Texas, is that railroad construction has gone forward at an abnormally slow rate. The State had 8684 miles of railroad on June 10, 1891, and since then less than 5500 miles of new road have been built. In the last twenty-one years railroad construction for each 100 square miles of territory has been 2.17 miles; over the whole of the United States in that same period the figure is 2.57; in Oklahoma, which borders Texas on the north, the figure is 6.48; in Louisiana, on the east, the figure is 8.64; in Arkansas, also part of the eastern border of Texas, the figure is 5.93; in Wisconsin, where railroad control by the State has been strict, 3.51 miles of road have been built for each 100 square miles of area. These are figures collected by the new Texas Welfare Commission, a body chosen from the commercial associations of thirty-two cities. Its members are seeking an explanation; they are counting the cost of twenty-one years of "dissension" between State government and the railroad companies." They say that the people want to know. "In East Texas, where the products of tree and vine rot for lack of facilities to transport them to market; in West Texas, where progress and prosperity are withheld for lack of railroad mileage; in the cities, where manufacturers and merchants are losing business on account of poor service," inquiry is persistent. Apparently the quarrel is to be made up. Railroad men have appeared before the Welfare Commission to give their side, and the orators who have been boasting that Texas leads the world in railroad development, as in everything else, have been invited to consider the commission's figures.

Electrification of Railroads.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is contemplating the electrification of the terminals in Philadelphia, the same as has been done in New York. The electrical engineers are confident that should the electrification of the Pennsylvania terminals and approaches in Philadelphia be made then, in a very short time, the main line of the Pennsylvania between Manhattan and Philadelphia will be electrified, and passenger trains, at least, operated by electric energy.

Already the electrification of the Pennsylvania's approaches to its terminal at Manhattan is completed to a point a little east of the city of Newark—about nine miles in all. Should, therefore, Philadelphia be electrified for Pennsylvania railroad purposes there would remain only about seventy-five miles of the main railroad line to be electrified. That is almost the exact distance between the Grand Central terminal at New York and the New Haven terminal of the New York and New Haven Railroad. These seventy-five miles of the New Haven system are to be completely electrified within the next two years, thirty-four miles having already been electrified. The trains in this section of thirty-four miles, excepting freight, are exclusively operated by electric energy.

European Railways.

[Railway Age Gazette:] Locomotive and car building in Austria seem to be in a bad way. Three locomotive works report their output in 1910 as 45¼ per cent. less than in 1909, and the number of their employees was reduced from 4796 to 3056. The association of car builders reports that it had orders for 10,500 cars in 1908, 6400 in 1909 and 4700 in 1910, while the prospect is for only 1700 this year. These works are able to build 16,000 cars yearly.

Nearly one-fourth, by weight, of the locomotive fuel used in Russia in 1908 was petroleum or petroleum residuum. A ton of petroleum costs as much as 2.55 tons of coal, and in Asia it serves for a little less than twice as many miles, but in Europe for only 64 per cent. more—perhaps due to a greater use of residuum in Europe. A table giving the relative heating value of different fuels gives 69 units of petroleum as equivalent to 110 of English coal, and to 272 of a coal produced in Eastern Siberia. The cost of locomotive fuel in 1908 was 14.78 per cent. of the total working expenses of the Russian railways. It has to be hauled long distances for some of the lines.

Year's Railroad Fatalities.

[Chicago Tribune:] The Interstate Commerce Commission's report of accidents during the twelve months ended on June 30, 1911, shows that 10,396 persons were killed and 150,159 injured. More than half the number reported killed were trespassing or stealing rides. The number of passengers and employees killed and injured during the year was as follows: Killed, 3655; injured, 25,115, as compared with 3520 killed and 21,856 injured in 1910.

UNIQUE NUMBERING.

In Wilshire Court, the latest subdivision to be opened in the Wilshire district, Walter G. McCarthy has decided to make the numbering of the houses conform to the tract lot numbers. Private streets, to be used by the residents of Wilshire Court, exclusively, are another feature. The grading work in the tract is completed, and the cement work will start the first of the week. Wide parkings and plants and shrubbery will go far towards carrying out the general scheme of beauty. The tract is located at the junction of Wilshire and Crenshaw boulevards.

UNPRECEDENTED ACTIVITY. NO SUMMER LULL EVIDENT.

SOUTH PASADENA, July 6.—One of the principal features of the real estate market at present is the unprecedented summer activity. The real estate men assert they were prepared for a good season this summer, but none expected it to be as active, as it is proving to be, or that it would continue for so long a period. The season can easily be classed first among the summers in point of interest in the daily records substantiating the claims of the dealers in this respect.

July opened with the prospects bright for a continuance of the building activity, which has been manifest during the first half of the year. While it is regarded as too early in the month to make predictions, it is believed that the total valuation of the July improvements will be unusually large.

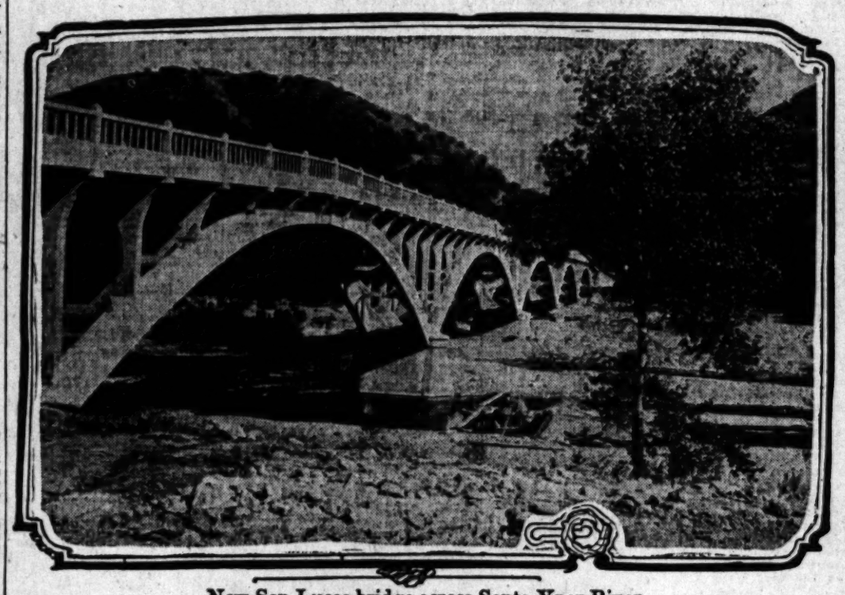
W. L. Keathler of Los Angeles, to A. F. Corbin of Pasadena, 50x177 feet on Elm avenue, between Oxley and Monterey road, unimproved, reported consideration, $1250.

David Blankenhorn of Pasadena, to Gertrude Osman of the same city, 50x150 feet on Stratford avenue, between Mission and Hope streets, consideration, $1250. This lot is to be improved immediately with a $5000 residence.

Within a short time a new business building will be put up on Mission street, a half block east of Fair Oaks avenue, by A. C. Ong. It will be one story in height, will contain room for two stores, and will be built of white enamel brick.

Eugene Halsey has sold his beautiful residence corner, at Laurel and Marengo avenues, one of the show places of the city, and removed to Los Angeles, where he has purchased a home on Oxford street.

An Improvement That Is Welcomed by Autoists.



New San Lucas bridge across Santa Ynez River.

OLD FORD SPANNED.

Autoists Rejoice at Completion of New San Lucas Bridge Over Santa Ynez River Bed.

SANTA BARBARA, July 6.—Every autoist, who has ever attempted to ford the Santa Ynez River at the point where it is crossed by the San Marcos road between Santa Barbara and Los Olivos when that stream is swollen by the winter rains will rejoice at the completion of the new San Lucas bridge. The improvement is welcomed by all the people of the Santa Ynez Valley. This rejoicing was evident on July 4, when the bridge was formally opened with speechmaking, music, dancing and an old-time Spanish festival and feast attended by over 2000 persons.

The bridge is of reinforced concrete construction and of the type known as the "three-hinge arch," in which the contraction and expansion are taken care of by a peculiar joining of the spans. The structure is 700 feet in length and consists of five spans of 126 feet each. The floor of the bridge is thirty feet above the river bed. The roadway has a width of eighteen feet and is protected at either side by four-foot concrete railings.

The improvement cost the county about $40,000, a sum which, it is considered, has been well expended. The bridge will prove a great convenience for the automobile travelers between Los Angeles and San Francisco. It is on the direct route followed by the overland stages before the days of the railroad.

PAPUAN LIFE AND TRADITIONS.

Policmen Get a Day's Pay for a Year's Service and Officials Live a Strenuous Existence.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] There are many regions in King George's empire where it is no fun to be a white administrator, but Papua—the British division of the island of New Guinea—is about the limit, according to an official report just issued, which is more interesting than most of the novels published nowadays. It rather recalls one of these, by the way, namely Beatrice Grimshaw's story, "When the Red Gods Call," which was all about this little-known region.

In Papua about 700 English officials are responsible for the welfare and good behavior of something like half a million natives, who, when the British first came, were perpetually at war and among whom cannibalism and piracy were rampant. Since then the whole territory has been divided up into districts, each under a resident magistrate, whose job is about as far from being a cinch as any that one could imagine. Their periodical tours of inspection become exciting and perilous expeditions—one of the magistrates tells calmly how he swam a stream full of crocodiles in order to reprove the dwellers of a village on the other side who were not burying their dead deep enough—and they must, according to the native mind, "be capable of righting all wrongs, braving all dangers, overriding all difficulties, and expounding all wisdom."

They depend quite a lot on the police force of Papua, which is formed entirely of natives, at the munificent salary of $2.50 a year. "The force," says the report, "is looked upon as a very honorable calling, and there is the keenest competition for the coveted uniform and handcuffs." The native constable is head man of the village, and he sees, or is supposed to see, that the community does its duty in keeping the villages and the approaching roads clean, and likewise keeps the white magistrate in touch with local affairs.

Many of the resident magistrates live in houses built of native material, and through the roofs of these dwellings not only rain, but snakes, lizards and other creeping things fall upon the inmates, "at inopportune moments," as one of the administrators writes. They have to brave death in cockleshell craft in order to inspect some island communities, while, to visit others they are forced to wade waist-deep through swamps for miles on end. They have to chase rebels over mountains 10,000 feet high, and to follow native murderers, who are ready to spear their pursuers on sight, through almost impenetrable jungles.

Marriages in Papua are not romantic. The wife is always bought and paid for (frequently being exchanged for a peg,) and "often literally crawls through mud to the feet of an affianced lord and master, whom, till her marriage day, she has never seen." Funerals are highly esteemed as amusements and are enjoyed only less than pig hunting and the national practice of dressing the hair with the honey of wild bees.

The firm belief of the natives in sorcery is one of the hardest things with which the English administrators have to deal. "Their lives are ruled by the necessity of avoiding the machinations of evil spirits," writes one of the officials. "The Papuan sees a friend die—it may be of pneumonia—but the fact is proof positive to him that some one has murdered him by magical means. If he wants rain to come, he has only to apply to the nearest rainmaker, who puts the appropriate articles in a stream of water and perhaps recites the appropriate spells, and in this wet part of the territory rain is pretty sure to come before very long. If a plentiful supply of garden produce is required there is probably someone who knows the right article to bury in the garden.

Bibulous English Author.

[London Chronicle:] The tale of Mr. Gladstone and the bibulous bishop recalls the fact that there was once a liquor called bishop. Boswell tells how Dr. Johnson was awakened at 3 o'clock in the morning by Beauclerk and Langton (straight from the tavern) and asked to join them in a ramble. Good-humoredly, Johnson said: "I'll have a frisk with you," dressed and sallied forth with them to Covent Garden. They had a bowl of the liquor called bishop, walked down to the Thames, took a boat and rowed to Billingsgate. Langton was engaged to breakfast with what Johnson called "a set of wreeched undidea'd girls." Beauclerk and Johnson kept up their dissipation all day. Garrick, being told of the ramble, said: "I heard of your frolic t'other night. You'll be in 'The Chronicle.'" You see, Garrick was a true prophet. For here it is.

Broken-Hearted Horse.

[London Chronicle:] The horse down remains the most arrestive sight of London. You must stop to look at him. We all stopped. There was the policeman taking notes and the usual man sitting on the horse's head, and the holding-up of the traffic. We were all vociferous and helpful. Until the growler-cabman came up with advice. He had got off his cab and noted the difficulty. The horse had been drawing a new motor car on a lorry to the station. With a genial plunge through the crowd the cabman cried, "Let it die—it's 'art's broken."

A Modern State.

NEW CHINA NOT FOR CONQUEST.

POLICY WILL BE ONE OF INTERNAL DEVELOPMENT.

May Abolish the Treaty Ports and Will Stop the Aggressions of Russia—The Country's Market Will Be Open to the Business Agents of All Other Nations.

[New York Times:] An article by Prof. Paul S. Reinsch, Roosevelt Professor in Berlin, on "The New China Among the Nations," has attracted some attention abroad. He discusses the question as to whether the appearance of China, organized on modern methods, will render more keen the already existing antipathies between nations, or whether it will tend toward the further strengthening of the unity of the world.

Present-time events in China, he thinks, certainly will lead to a sharpening of antipathies between the government and individual States, as, for example, Russia and Japan, for China will be more resolute in opposing their encroachments. With countries like the United States and Germany, that favor the development of a strong China, he believes a more friendly feeling will exist. A weak China contains in itself a fixed threat to the world's peace, he holds, while a China effectively organized will command esteem, and so make for peace. China's awakening, he thinks will be a progressive step, for it will bring to her that feeling of responsibility which is the surest guarantee of international justice.

"One result of the present national movement is unavoidable," says Prof. Reinsch. "Organized as a modern State, China will immediately insist on exercising full sovereignty over every portion of its territory. If this reform is carried out successfully, then other nations cannot refuse, with justice, to the new China full membership in the community controlled by international law. As some time ago in Japan, soon now in China there will be an end of treaty ports.

"If we now turn our attention somewhat toward the probable character of the political method of action of this powerful new State, we find pronounced on many sides the greatest apprehensions. From the formation of this new world power many expect only danger and evil for the old Europe. They picture the new China as forthwith filled by an untamed impulse of conquest, and they fear far-reaching changes or displacements among the powers.

FEARS BASED ON FALSE ANALOGIES.

"But still it appears quite clear that the larger part of these fears arise out of false analogies and out of logic which does not rest on the actual character of the Chinese popular nature. We remember still the invasion of the Mongolians into Europe, and we fear its repetition, only we do not think of this point, that those were not the peaceful sedentary Chinese, but an entirely different race who had not yet outgrown the nomadic mode of existence, and who under the conditions of modern life are no longer fit for conquest, as the fiasco of the Russian Cossacks has demonstrated.

"These same hordes which descended upon Europe carried their activity also into China, and the Chinese had to suffer similarly from them. It can perhaps be justly maintained that the period of migrations is over in settled national divisions. The great nations from which especially an effective waging of war might be expected have on the one hand become so sedentary that it can no more occur to them to rise up en masse; on the other hand, also they are so strong that they can protect their home country very effectively against expeditions of conquest.

"But now among all the nations the Chinese are the most sedentary, the most bound to their sod through feeling and tradition. And theirs is the great title to glory of having made it possible, through diligence and self-mastery, for the greatest number of men to live in a given territory; and they have made this possible precisely in this wise, namely in that they not only developed the arts of peace but also expressed the thought of peace in their life. Lao-Tze is still the philosopher who rules the thought of the Chinese millions, and the profound peacefulness of this sphere of thought is found again also in the philosophy of Confucius.

"It certainly may not be overlooked, that of late years, simultaneously with the growth of a strong national feeling, there has developed the feeling for military power. Everywhere, in clubs, in social groups, and in schools the Chinese seek to favor and further military developments. But this is the natural impulse of the awakening national sense to be potently active in every direction and particularly also to be able to secure sufficiently the fundamental qualifications of the national life by the necessary force. It is an instrument for maintaining and defending the Chinese national life and spirit; but the chief inclinations of the spirit which is to be defended by this instrument have not deviated by a hair from the old Chinese popular system; they are still the same as ever; prepared for peace and civilized in the true meaning of the word.

Every Indian Had an Umbrella.

[Great Bend Tribune:] One of the incidents of the early days in Great Bend that caused a great deal of merriment among the white residents was the time the Indians bought all the parasols and umbrellas that were for sale in the town.

This happened along in the '70s and was on a rainy day. The Injuns were on their way south and came through the town of Great Bend. They saw a number of men and women on the streets with umbrellas, and being plentifully supplied with money and a desire to own one of the handy contrivances, they got busy. The funny part of it was that they made no distinction between toy parasols, silk ones and the serviceable linen ones. It was not long until the entire visible supply of all the stores had been purchased. Then the fun began.

Some of the toy parasols were made of cloth that was highly colored, and as soon as the water hit them the coloring matter began to mix with the water and drip down upon the Indians' clothes. They minded this not in the least and were seen going southward, whooping and seemingly in the very best of spirits.

SUMMER LULL NOW A MYTH.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PORTERVILLE, July 6.—Despite the fact that this is supposed to be quite the dullest month of the year in the real estate business, the trading for the week just closed has been unusually brisk. As is universally the case, the largest trades were those in orange land property, the prices of bearing groves ruling higher than at any previous time in the history of this district.

A year ago the prevalent price for a grove just coming into full bearing was about $1000 per acre. Young stuff, two to three years of age, ruled at $500 per acre. This season, the exceptionally strong demand has jacked $250 on the price of the younger groves, while the bearing orchards are $400 to $500 in advance of the prices usual for similar groves last season.

Trading in the alfalfa district is practically at a standstill. There has been no activity on the part of the much-talked-of Big Four Railroad as yet, and the Porterville-Western has gone no further than to secure the rights of way, although there has been an announcement that the latter enterprise will be under way in another month. Until there is some visible sign of the roads or either of them, buyers are not going to pay the advanced price which is being asked for the dairy and alfalfa lands of the district to the west of this city.

One of the interesting deals of the week was the transfer of forty acres of bare land in the Lindsay district to M. H. Bardwell of Long Beach, who paid $12,000 for forty acres. As far as there is any record this is the largest price yet paid in this district for bare land. In the past year the prevailing price has been around $150, this transfer being at twice that figure.

J. H. Norcross of Los Angeles, has added to his holdings of orange grove property in the Exeter district by the purchase this week of an additional ten acres of early navels in full bearing. The tract purchased adjoins the property he had acquired earlier this season, making forty acres, all told. The ten acres last purchased cost him $15,000, and was formerly the property of J. T. Moore.

C. H. Clements of Sunnyvale, Cal., has acquired a twenty-acre tract of orange land in the Grand View Heights, a fine colony situated on the west slope of the foothills at the eastern limits of the Deer Creek Valley. Clement is here at the present time to supervise the preliminary work of developing his holding. He has contracted for a well and will install a concrete pipe system.

R. H. Beas, who has been interested in the Ducor townsite, has purchased a twenty-acre tract just west of Ducor, and will start work at once on the development of the property. He expects to plant to early navels next spring. Work will be started on a well at once.

BECOMES LARGEST OWNER.

By his purchase this week of a large tract of the Kincaid lands in the Porterville foothills, Will Gill, one of the firm of Gill Bros., the leading cattlemen of this district, is now probably the largest land owner of this county. Gill purchased from Melvin Kincaid the south half of section 26, 19-27, a forty in section 1 and an eighty in section 2, 20-27, making 420 acres in all. A portion of the land, which is adapted for citrus culture, is to be disposed of. The remainder of the land, which is adapted for grazing, will be added to his already extensive holdings. The addition of this purchase will give Gill about twenty sections of foothill grazing land.

Gilbert Moore, a cattle and dairyman of this district, has purchased from W. H. Crowley of Los Angeles eighty acres of alfalfa lands in the Tipton district. Moore will level and crack the land at once and will put it out to alfalfa in the early spring. After developing water sufficient for the tract.

G. C. Ketron, an irrigation engineer of this city, has disposed of twenty acres of his orange lands in the Terra Bella district to Frank Brundage, taking in exchange an eighty-acre tract of alfalfa land in the Tipton district. Ketron will put in an irrigating system and set the tract out to alfalfa.

WILL PLANT SMALL FRUITS.

H. H. Davis, the chief of the Porterville fire department, has purchased from G. L. Robinson a five-acre tract of fruit land just north of the city limits near Sunnyside. Davis will put the land in part out to small fruits, which is an industry that has thus far received little attention in this district. There are not nearly enough small fruits produced locally to supply the demand and there would seem to be a promising future to the industry if it is followed consistently.

Frank Brundage has purchased from W. F. Gibson the west half of section 21, 22-25, in the Woodville district, the tract being in the heart of the Woodville-Tipton alfalfa district. Brundage is evidently taking a chance on the railroad situation, as he has no plans for the development of the property, which he frankly admits was purchased for speculation. The price is not given, but it is said to have been above $150 per acre.

Mrs. Edith M. Buck has sold to the Strathmore Land Company a ten-acre tract in the Strathmore district. The purchase was made to fill out a square, two of which the company previously owned.

Will Hershberger, an orchardist of the Zante district, has sold to John J. Sammon, formerly of Los Angeles, a forty-five-acre tract of orange lands in the Strathmore district. Sammon has purchased from Hershberger three residence lots in El Bonito. He will take possession of his orchard property at once and start the development of the tract without delay. He also intends building on his El Bonito property and when his residence is completed will move here with his family.

Easily Determined.

WILL BREED WILD HOGS.

Novel Experiment to Be Tried on the Wild Lands in the Hills of Pennsylvania.

[New York Tribune:] The Pennsylvania hills are about to contribute another factor in the food supply of the country. Chestnut orcharding and apple raising have proven a success, now the business of raising hogs on a larger scale, using the wild lands as a range, is to begin, says a correspondent of the Philadelphia Record at Jamison City, Pa. Henry W. Miller, who for many years has engaged in the herding of cattle on the wild land ranges belonging to Col. Bruce Ricketts, will this summer, in connection with his cattle business, have charge of a drove of fifty hogs. This is but a starter, for it is expected that within three years the number of hogs on the range will number several hundred.

Miller has made a study of the conditions, the food to be obtained and the likelihood of the hogs being able to pick up practically their entire living, up to the time when the real fattening for killing would have to be attended to.

The entire drove of hogs to start with are to be Berkshires. It is calculated that while these are not so large an animal as some of the other species, yet they are harder and more likely to thrive on the mountain "picking."

The hogs will be given the entire run of the ranges. It is not expected that they will always travel together; indeed, the one great trouble which Mr. Miller sees in the business is the likelihood of the hogs wandering away in groups and becoming wild.

In this event, when the rounding up time comes, the animals will have to be hunted and shot like bear, as in a single season some hogs when in environs removed from civilization become wild and ferocious.

The range on which the hogs are to be herded is a noted black bear country, and as bears have a natural appetite for young pork, it is not unlikely that some of the pigs will become food for bruin, unless the parent hogs are sufficiently pugnacious to drive off the marauders.

It is calculated that the natural increase from the fifty hogs turned upon the ranges this spring will yield several hundred shotes by fall, from which a choice will be made for the stocking next summer. The hogs will have to be "rounded up" and kept in shelter during the vigorous part of the winter. All of the animals will be branded before they are turned on to the range, and it will be the business of Mr. Miller or one of his helpers to take a census of the droves at least once a month.

The grazing of cattle has been such a success with Mr. Miller that he has no doubt as to profit from the grazing of hogs. It may not be necessary to even "grain" the hogs, for the amount of feed obtainable, while not of the kind that will produce fat, will promote the growth of the animals and place them in condition for an early market "on the hoof" to those who will fatten them.

SUPERSTITIONS OF BUSINESS.

Many a Man Carries a "Charm" That Helps Bring Good Luck in Risky Transactions.

[Harper's Weekly:] It is not often that the man who has a pet superstition that has become a part of himself can be induced to talk about it as the man just quoted did. As a general thing, there is nothing that the important figure in active business life regards more as a part of his inner soul than this. Probably there are thousands of strange, quaint and really marvelous business superstitions held by eminent financiers, kings of commerce and masters of affairs that never have been and never will be revealed. If suspected, in many cases their existence would be steadfastly denied. Men are not ashamed of them, but often they are apt to fear that those whose high regard they earnestly wish to have might think such opinions a weakness.

Thus one of the richest men in the world would probably turn aside the question, if it were put to him, as to how much of his great success, how many of his millions, were due to his eagle stone. Yet for a quarter of a century, perhaps even more, that eagle stone has reposed in a pocket of his trousers each business day. When pondering over propositions that have needed immediate decision this magnate has been seen to take out this stone and pass it from one hand to the other. It is a genuine "charm" that will keep away disaster, it is said, and gets its name from the fact that it was found in an eagle's nest.

Then there are the business men who cannot be persuaded from believing that certain days of the month are especially fortunate for them. A noted American lawyer carries with him a tiny bust of a distinguished American statesman. Often in the midst of an argument where extreme skill and concentration are needed, his fingers can be seen stealing automatically over to his waistcoat, merely to touch the accustomed object. One morning he sat calmly at his desk dictating his mail. He was soon to go into court. The next moment his face changed. A few words to his stenographer, a snatch at a bundle of papers and he was off, to speed to his house as quickly as the subway and a taxicab would take him. The little bust had been left behind while he was dressing. He feared he would lose his case without it.

Ancient Weapons Found.

[Philadelphia Record:] A scientific expedition sent out by the Imperial Museum of Vienna into the Karst Mountains, has obtained some remarkable trophies, according to advices received here. The exploration of a cavern known as the St. Kanzious cave has yielded more than a thousand bronze implements of a type not heretofore known, and including swords, axes, lance heads and vessels supposed to date from 1000 B.C. The articles were all found at the bottom of a pit 150 feet deep, where they had apparently been thrown as a sacrifice to a subterranean deity.

Mining in the Great Southwest.

IRON CAP MINE SOON TO START.

Financial Difficulties No Longer Exist.

Reorganization Has Money in Treasury.

Management Claims Property Will Make Producer.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) July 5.—Development work is to be resumed on the Iron Cap mine, at Copper Hill. Vice-President F. A. Woodward of the Iron Cap Copper Company came from Boston and made a detailed examination. This mine adjoins the Arizona Commercial and has been developed to a considerable extent. Work was dropped in 1910 because of financial difficulties in which the company became involved.

The present Iron Cap Copper Company is virtually a reorganization of the old. It is claimed that there is sufficient money in the treasury to make the mine a producer.

A second shift has been put on at the Copper Reef mine, twelve miles south of San Carlos, and twenty-two men are now employed. The California tunnel is in 1095 feet and has cut what may be the Daylight vein. It has passed out of the limestone into a vein of porphyry and clay gouge, carrying considerable calcite, red hematite and manganese. The drift from the California vein is in 175 feet, in well mineralized vein matter. A fault was encountered at 165 feet and the drift is still in the faulted zone. The extent of the displacement has not been determined.

SINKS THREE SHAFTS.

Three development shafts are being sunk by the Inspiration Consolidated Company. The property is being extensively opened up by drifts and raises.

As soon as the sinking of shafts No. 1 and No. 2 is finished the development of the Live Oak ore body will begin. The working shaft is being temporarily timbered. After it reaches the desired depth it will be concreted from top to bottom. There will be three compartments, each five feet and eleven inches by five feet and a half, and the concrete walls will be ten inches thick. It is being sunk on contract, by three shifts of six men. Altogether 480 men are employed.

ENLARGES CRUSHING PLANT.

Additional rolls are being installed in the crushing plant at the Miami concentrator, so that all ore will be reduced to half size before going to the bins. New rolls for the mill are expected to arrive soon. They will be spring rolls, fifteen by forty-two inches, of unusually heavy construction. The Chilean mills will be displaced by Hardinge conical pebble mills. While the cost of steel and pebbles consumed by the Hardinge mills is about the same as that of steel for the Chilean machines, the repair cost is much less.

A large shoot of high-grade copper ore has been opened on the 650-foot and 800-foot levels of the Magma mine at Superior, Pinal county. On the 650-foot level it is 150 feet long and five feet wide. On the 800-foot level it is from five to twenty feet wide and has been opened up for nearly 300 feet, with neither end in sight. The ore taken out during the course of development is being shipped to El Paso. It averages 20 to 26 per cent. copper, with some silver. Two carloads averaged 50 per cent. copper. The copper occurs as chalcocite and bornite.

Tombstone Is Active.

BISBEE (Ariz.) July 5.—There is more mine activity in the vicinity of Tombstone than for many years. Shipments from the mines of that district are being made regularly to the smelters at Douglas and some of the ore is even sent to El Paso.

It is now believed the bankruptcy proceedings of the Tombstone Consolidated Mining Company, which is a subsidiary of the Development Company of America, will be taken up for final adjudication in the fall. The Development Company has other properties on which they will start work before taking hold of the Tombstone proposition.

Reports are that work will be resumed within the next few days at the Hartford-Arizona mines, in the Huachuca Mountains. These mines closed down about the middle of June without paying off the men, but now all the May accounts have been closed and as soon as President Hamburg can get back from the East there will be money to meet obligations.

Active work will soon begin on many properties in the Whetstone Mountains.

Eugene Dean, who is promoting the Royal Guard properties, writes from the East that he has about succeeded in making arrangements for the erection of a ten-stamp mill.

Paul B. Warnekros has put a force of men to work on his Gleeson claims and will soon be shipping ore.

WILL INSTALL TEN-STAMPS.

At Gleeson the Commonwealth Company is preparing to install a new stamp mill to take the place of the one that was burned two years ago. The mill has been delayed on account of negotiations which have been pending for the shipment of Commonwealth ores to Douglas. These negotiations have been concluded and the company has decided definitely to put up a mill, which is to have a daily capacity of 200 tons.

Men from the Three "R" mine, near Patagonia, say there are many tons of ore on the dump that run above 75 per cent. copper. The development work that is being done is cutting a large body of high-grade copper ore. An immense amount of 15 per cent. ore has been cut and there are mountains of it that run from 5 to 10 per cent.

Superintendent Arthur Houle of the Shattuck says he is now gradually increasing the force employed at that mine. No stoping is being done and no ore is being taken out except that which comes from development work in unexplored parts of the property. Mr. Houle says he does not know when work on the Shattuck smelter will begin. Title to the site, which is just south of the C. & A. plant at Douglas, was taken over by the Shattuck Company a short time ago.

A vast amount of steel and other construction material for the new C. & A. smelter is on the ground and the work of putting up structural steel is being pushed with all possible haste. Unless there are unforeseen delays, the smelter will be completed by the middle of 1913.

Work has been resumed at the North Tigre mine, in El Tigre district. Operations were suspended because of the insurrection. A force of men is at work in a drift on one of the veins, which is being run from the crosscut tunnel. Good ore has been cut in several places.

CANANEA CUTS TIME.

Some time ago the Cananea Consolidated Copper Company promised its employees that as soon as copper went to 18 cents there should be a general readjustment of wages. While the red metal is not selling quite that high yet, numerous concessions in working time and other details have been made. All those employees, with certain exceptions, such as watchmen, who have been working nine hours and a half a day had their time cut down to nine hours. This affects all the day shift at the mines, all shopmen throughout the camp, the concentrator men and some of the smelter employees.

The premium system has been suspended. All employees who have been on that basis will hereafter receive the equivalent of the premium rate in flat wages. Those who now receive three pesos a day and a premium of 50 centavos in case they work twenty-six days during the month, will hereafter receive $3.50 (Mexican) a day without premium.

Certain other changes in wage rates have been made, especially in the mechanical departments, and although the advance is not quite general it is in the nature of a general readjustment and the total increase will be substantial.

EL PILAR AGAIN ACTIVE.

Development is again under way at El Pilar mine, located in the Santa Cruz district, thirty miles west of Cananea, in the Magdalena mining district. A small force of men has been put to work cleaning up the mine and as soon as they finish the force will be greatly increased. It is expected that shipments of copper ore will begin in a short time.

The Calumet and Sonora Copper Company, owing a property on the Alamo ranch, ten miles east of Llano, is preparing to resume operations. This property is regarded as an excellent copper proposition and quite a little development work has been done, with results.

The West Coast Smelting and Refining Company, formerly the Teccolote Copper Company, will soon blow in its new smelter, which has never been used, because of unsettled conditions in Mexico. During the last week fifty men were taken out to the property.

Much activity is noted in the placer fields of the Altar district. West of La Cienega John Harris is working seven men and extracting 15,000 pesos worth of gold weekly, with the aid of a dry washer.

El Tigre is reported to be mining and milling more ore at the present time than ever before in the history of that famous property.

Potash Absent.

LOS ANGELES, June 14.—Q.: Herewith some clay from a locality near the Colorado River below Parker, Arizona. Does it carry nitre? G. W. H.

MINERS FLOCK TO HIGH GRADE.

Camp May Prove Sensation of the Decade.

Yellow Jacket Quartz Goes Over Thousand Dollars.

FT. BIDWELL (Cal.) July 5.—A series of rich strikes in the High Grade district has caused wild excitement in the field, and miners are pouring in from every point. Now that the snow has nearly vanished and active work is permitted the camp gives every promise of developing into one of the most sensational discovered in the past decade. Greatest interest centers on the Sunshine, where phenomenal values have been uncovered by the Lucky Dutchman lease on the Yellow Jacket claim of the company, and where other leases are opening rich quarts. The new vein encountered on the Yellow Jacket is declared to be eight feet wide, with about two feet running into splendid values. The richer quartz is declared to assay around $1450 a ton, with the vein showing splendid strength as work progresses.

It is probable that reports are exaggerated, but reputable mining men of conservative tendencies pronounce the strike of remarkable richness and great promise.

On an adjoining block of ground Nungent and Tracy have intersected twenty inches of ore running into the thousands a ton.

The Sunshine group is owned by the Sunshine-High Grade Mining Company composed of Charles Fulton, B. K. Dawson and other Los Angeles people. Four leases have been thus far granted on the rich estate, and more applications are being considered. It is said the company will operate the main territory, on its own account, despite the fact that other interests have made attractive proposals to work the ground on a royalty basis. The outside territory only will be leased, according to present plans. E. W. Hayes, formerly superintendent of the Little Johnnie mine at Leadville, has been placed in charge of company work, insuring capable management. A considerable tonnage of ore averaging about $200 a ton is ready for shipment, and about thirty tons will be sent out shortly.

WILL SOON START WORK.

General Manager A. J. Cummings of the Ft. Bidwell Consolidated Mines Company announces the company will soon begin comprehensive operations on the Mountain View and Sugar Pine claims. Excellent ore has been demonstrated on both properties, with strong veins of free-milling quartz opened in Railroad Protest.

AN INVITATION TO DO VIOLENCE.

Railway Presidents on the Anti-injunction Bill.

They Memorialize the Senate to Defeat Measure.

Doubt that Paceful Folks Want It Passed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thirteen railroad presidents, twelve of whom have headquarters in Chicago, have sent a memorial to the United States Senate of protest against the passage of the so-called anti-injunction bill, which is intended to curtail the power of judges to issue injunctions.

The proposed legislation is characterized by the railway executives as vicious and a means of encouraging disorder, especially during strikes and lockouts.

"It is an invitation to riot; it is promised immunity for crime," says the memorial.

RAILWAYS AFFECTED.

If the bill becomes a law, it is asserted, it will be impossible in the event of a strike to so operate railroads as to perform a full measure of duty toward the public.

"Such a law as this," continues the memorial, "is notice to all turbulent elements of society that acts of depredation, or violence, may be committed with impunity and without fear of interference.

"If there be taken away from the carriers the protecting arm of the courts, the only means by which any effort can be made to operate a railroad during a strike is destroyed. Without that protection the carriers are helpless.

INVITATION TO RIOT.

"The violence and disorder which the passage of this bill invites would place the railways of this country at the mercy of the mob. We are unable to understand how any man who does not want to commit violence could be interested in its passage.

"Have we not a right to look to the Senate to stand between the great American shipping public and such an era of industrial disorder and commercial paralysis as the passage of this bill would foster in every dispute between the carriers and their employees?

"The proposed bill does not ostensibly forbid injunctions, but its practical effect is the same—the prescribed methods of procedure are purposely contrived to prevent injunctions in time to be of any use, besides practically providing for immunity for disobeying them when issued."

REPORTS ON WAGES AND CONDITIONS.

Timely Bulletins from All Parts of the World.

|---|---|
| United States | $2.30 |
| Great Britain | 1.05 |
| Austria | .39 |
| Prussia-Hesse | .35 |

The lowest-paid American railway worker, the ordinary trackman, gets better wages than many French railway workers of higher grades and with responsible duties. American railway workers get from two to three times as much wages, all round, as do those of Italy.

| | Engineers, per week. | Firemen, per week. |
|---|---|---|
| United States | $25.50 | $16.34 |
| Great Britain | 11.77 | 6.47 |
| American excess | $14.69 | $ 9.87 |

Recent returns (Bureau of Railway Economics) make it clear that this year (1912) engineman and firemen whose wages are based on specific runs, got three and four times as much as do their British brothers for similar services.

Two leading American railway companies report that they are paying average annual wages as follows:

|---|---|
| Passenger enginemen | $3,300 |
| Switching enginemen, from | 1,700 |
| Passenger firemen | 1,700 |
| Switching firemen | 700 |

Compare these wages with (maximum:)

|---|---|
| Germany— | |
| Enginemen | $ 600 |
| Firemen | 400 |
| Austria— | |
| Enginemen | 370 |
| Firemen | 242 |
| Belgium— | |
| Enginemen | 300 to 360 |
| Firemen | 204 to 288 |
| Switchmen | 240 to 312 |
| Firemen | 192 to 252 |
| Switchmen | 321 to 413 |
| Firemen | 230 to 476 |
| Enginemen, average, not maximum | 1,320 |
| Firemen, average, not maximum | 792 |

For comparison:

|---|---|
| Belgium—in 1907. | |
| Enginemen, month | $33.33 to $53.33 |
| Firemen, month | 17.77 to 23.13 |
| Conductors and station employees, day | .67 to .92 |
| United States—in 1907. | |
| Enginemen, month | $107.50 |
| Firemen, month | 63.30 |
| Conductors, day | 3.63 |
| Station employees, day | $ 1.72 to $ 2.66 |

American railways wages have advanced substantially since 1907, while those of Belgium have remained stationary.

Cost of Living Compared.

The Evening Journal of Albany, N. Y., says: The rental of a three or four-room house or flat is almost as high in Berlin, Paris, or London, as throughout the United States, but in England and on the continent it generally runs from $30 to $90 a year less. The quantity of food and fuel estimated by the Board of Trade of England as the standard consumption of a typical workingman's family costs in the United States 17.6 per cent. more than in France or in Germany; and 33 per cent. more than in Belgium, and 51 per cent. more than in the United Kingdom.

It is well within the truth to estimate in a broad and general way that while the cost of living of a railway employee in the United States is less than 10 per cent. higher than that of a corresponding employee in the United Kingdom or on the continent, his compensation averages more than twice as great.

Advance in Cost of Living in England.

An abstract of the labor statistics of the United Kingdom just issued, shows that 109.3 pence was needed in 1911 to buy the same quantity of necessaries of life that were buyable for 100 pence in 1900 or 83.2 pence in 1896. Thus, in fifteen years, the cost of living has advanced twenty-five per cent., equivalent to a deduction by some invisible process of two and a half pence from every shilling of wages paid. The increase in the price of food stuffs is extraordinary, as 113.4 pence were needed in 1911 to buy the same quantity of corn that was bought in 1894 for 86.3 pence. Potatoes, rice, beef and mutton are not seriously higher, but bacon and eggs have soared. Bacon was lowest in 1896, when 53.7 pence would buy what cost 142.3 pence in 1911. The latest official figures are for 1911, but statisticians agree that the increase is continuing and that the worker is worse off today than he was last year.

Owing to her out-of-date economic policies, wages in England have not advanced anywhere near to this advanced cost of living, hence the acute and somewhat justified labor unrest there. It is far different in the United States. Here, wages have advanced substantially in recent years.

DECEITFUL SAM.

[Battle Creek Enquirer:] Gompers has fooled more people in this country than anyone in it.

THE DIFFERENCE.

[Editorial.]

If two or more fruit cannery corporations combine, and agree not to sell canned peaches for less than five dollars a dozen cans, that is—according to Democratic doctrine, as announced in the platform adopted by the Baltimore convention—a contract in restraint of trade, and a court of equity should issue an injunction to restrain them from carrying out their unrighteous purpose. If they disregard the injunction and insist upon demanding and obtaining their price for the peaches, that is a violation of the injunction and to jail they go at the order of the court, without being afforded an opportunity to have a jury pass upon the question of their guilt or innocence.

If the men working in the canneries combine and demand an increase of wages from $3.00 to $4.00 per day, and further insist that their employers discharge any workman who is not a member of the Peach Canners Union whether he receives $3.00 or $4.00 a day, and enforce their demand by boycotting all canned-peach consumers who pay $5.00 per dozen for the fruit, and further establish a line of pickets around the canneries and yell "scab" and beat into a pulp the non-union workmen who have been employed in the cannery in the places they have vacated, their agreement an dtheir action is not—according to the same national Democratic authority—an agreement in restraint of trade. It is an "industrial dispute." They ought not to be enjoined from such actions.

It makes a difference whether it is your bull that gores my ox, or your ox that is gored by my bull.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

STRIKE terrorism is now the order of the day in the London dock districts to such an extent that the dock companies as well as hundreds of foremen and leading dock workers are petitioning the British Home Secretary for government protection. These workers say that many of them have been seriously hurt and that the families of all are being constantly threatened with bodily violence. These petitioners need to work and want to work to support their wives and children but the strikers forcibly prevent their doing so. Striking labor is so often brutal towards non-striking labor The strike committee is urgently and repeatedly telegraphing to the United States, Germany and Australia for money as its funds are gone and thousands upon thousand of the strikers—the foolish strikers—are literally starving. At the same time a fine and haughty truculence is shown in the flats which the strike leaders are issuing. The imperious Mr. Gosling and Ben Tillett are dictating what kind of food they are willing to permit to enter London for the feeding of its 7,000,000 people.

The Home Secretary has at last had the courage to announce that all the resources of the government will be employed to maintain the city's food supply. Still that food supply—the food supply of nearly seven millions of innocent people, is being seriously interfered with and its prices have largely advanced by reason of this (as the strikers say) "starving into submission" strike. And through it all the strike leaders strut like lords (as they do here when strikes are on) enjoying their fat salaries and fatter expense accounts. Every dollar of which comes out of union labor's wages. Of all the many bunco games in practice strike agitation and strike leadership take the cake for soft snaps for these union labor parasites. Knowledge of this fact is practically the reason why the recent attempt to inaugurate a general strike of the building trades workers in Los Angeles was such a frost and such a fizzle. The leaders of this British transport worker's strike openly boast that they will bring Parliament and the public to their knees in abject submission to all they demand (and to whatever else they may choose to demand,) but particularly to that form of industrial slavery known as "recognition of the union." But as Sir Edward Clark reminded them "no strike and no succession of strikes can ever compel a man-worker or master—who does not belong to a union, to obey the decisions of the union." That is as true of the United States as it is of Great Britain. While this transport workers strike has not become a national one, yet about 50,000 men are out, at Bristol and some other ports outside of the port of London, where over 100,000 are out. The total number of transport workers in the United Kingdom is about 300,000. Privation among the poor strikers (the great majority of them are poor) is intense. In the East End church and mission workers are busy night and day on relief work. Is it not strange that these poor strikers do not realize before they strike that striking means poverty—dire poverty—voluntary, poverty and charitable relief, carrying with it loss of manhood and self respect. The least a man who is able to work can do is to feed his own wife and babies. Even animals do that. As it is the strikers are paradng the streets carrying collection boxes and whining for pennies, while dollars are waiting for them as their right (not as degrading charity,) if they will go to the work that is also waiting for them. Is it possible that these men would rather beg and not work than work and get wages money as theirs by right? Voluntary idleness and begging for charity is voluntary loss of manhood, voluntary loss of self respect, and voluntary self-degradation. That rule is universal in all strikes. Just as much in Los Angeles as anywhere else if striking here should become general, though, thank God, it never will, in this city of industrial freedom, where 90 per cent. (the decent part) of union labor preserves its independence and self-respect by refusing (as just now) to be coerced into a general strike. Bread in London has gone up in price. Lady Warwick is feeding 1000 children, who otherwise would die of starvation. At the schools, striker's children, thousands of them, are being fed first and taught afterwards. As far as the strikers are concerned that is charity of the (to them, the strikers) most degrading kind. In the East End of London fully 250,000 people have been added to the always full starvation line, by the strike.

The waiters' strike in New York has been called off, without result, but the strikers cannot get back their jobs. Their places have been filled. The hotel men are firm and systematic in refusing to take back men, all of whom deserted them at a crisis without any real grievance. As fast as they apply the answer is "Nothing doing." This was a fool strike, and the strikers can only blame themselves and the strike agitators. As usual, in all strikes, their wives and children will be the worst sufferers.

In five years (1907-1911) Argentina has had 887 strikes, involving 232,138 strikers. During 1911, the strikes were 102, of which only seven succeeded.

Seven thousand furriers (including 1500 women) are on strike in New York. This practically ties up the fur-manufacturing trade of that city. The strikers want recognition of the union, a nine-hour day, Saturday half-holiday, 15 to 20 per cent. more wages, time and a half for overtime, and the abolition of employment through contractors or middlemen. Girls are being attacked by the strikers.

There is a drop already of 40 to 50 per cent. in shipments from London to the United States (about $20,000,000) by reason of the London transport workers' strike.

The French Shipping Federation has informed the government that it will not accept arbitration by the government, but will fight to the bitter end.

The Boston tramway strike is nearing its end, but those strikers who rioted will not be taken back, nor will any of the demands of the strikers, which are arbitrary, be granted.

"Had," says the London Times, "the coal miners accepted the offers made by the employers before the strike began, their rates of wages would not only have been more uniform than now, but on the average higher. The strikers forced the minimum wage settlement and are losing by it. The law of supply and demand is inflexible and is a safe governor of wages."

Tom Mann of England, the incendiary English labor leader, has been voluntarily released from prison after serving six weeks of his six months' sentence for inciting mutiny among the soldiers. When English Gompers loses his next appeal, he will have to serve out his twelve months' jail sentence for contempt of court, which is an equally mutinous act on this side of the Atlantic.

More than 95 per cent. of the 25,000 men employed on the Pennsylvania railways east of Pittsburgh have voted to strike, unless the remaining six of their thirty-nine grievances are adjusted. Arbitration is likely.

Gompers offered at Baltimore to deliver "the union-labor vote" to the Democrats if a strong labor plank be put in the party platform. As was statistically shown in The Times in the 1906 and 1908 campaigns, and never refuted, that "union-labor vote" amounts to barely 4 per cent. of the union-labor membership. This bluff of Gompers is as rank as was his $200,000 bluff of last year—"The McNamaras, they are innocent." The only difference is that in the one case he got the money and in the other case he has not got and cannot get the votes, few as they are, after the non-voting women, girls, boys and foreigners not naturalized are eliminated from his talk of "two million Federation of Labor members."

Anthracite coal traffic on the Pennsylvania Railroad in May was 109,841 tons, a falling off from May, 1911, of 852,053 tons, by reason of the strike. Who really lost the most by that; the shippers, the railroad, or the strikers?

Five out of the six justices of the court concurred in the sentencing of Gompers to twelve months' imprisonment for contempt of court. That's a significant fact.

It would cost the fifty-one eastern railroads $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 a year to give the firemen on those roads the increased wages they are asking.

A strike of shop employees is threatened on all the railroads west of Chicago. The threat involves machinists, boilermakers, car workers, steam fitters, sheet-metal workers, painters and general laborers; about 100,000 men in all.

The strike of 1400 at the Lancaster mills, Clinton, Mass., has collapsed utterly. The I.W.W. called it off, but not until the strikers and their families had suffered much privation.

More strike violence near Perth Amboy, N. J. Girls led the mob against a factory and attacked workers and policemen. Strikers fire at factory guards at Roosevelt, N. J.

The coastwise (Atlantic) shipping strike is on. Officials agree as to conditions and wages, but utterly refuse that hoary-headed old humbug—"recognition of the union."

One Law for All.

DECISION AGAINST SAMUEL GOMPERS.

A QUESTION OF SUBMISSION OF ALL TO THE COURTS.

Judge Wright Could Not Decide Otherwise, as It Would Concede to the Defendants the Right to Refuse to Obey Its Orders Against Conspiracy.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] After the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia had upheld the former judgment that the chief officers of the American Federation of Labor had been guilty of contempt of court in disobeying the injunction against the boycott of the Bucks Stove and Range Company and had repeated the sentence originally imposed, Samuel Gompers exhibited a continued spirit of contempt and defiance, by attacking the decision and declaring that Justice Wright, who delivered the opinion, in which four other judges concurred, while living in our time exhibited "a concept of more than two centuries ago, when the workman was either a slave or a serf." What he meant by this is rather obscure, but the real "concept" of the decision appears to be that a workman must give the same heed to a judicial decree or order that is required of a capitalist or a magnate.

The original case was simple enough. When there was trouble between a manufactpring concern in the West and its employees, which resulted in the employment of non-union men the Federation undertook to bring the concern to terms by injuring its business, and declared a boycott not only against its products but against all who continued to purchase them. This was a clear case of conspiracy. The official publication of the Federation was the chief means of giving it effect and an injunction was obtained in Washington forbidding the continued printing of the name of the concern in its boycott list. That injunction was disobeyed and the authority of the court was defied in the same publication.

This was adjudged to be a contempt of court, as a similar disobedience of an injunction order would doubtless have been in any other case. It was the company against which the boycott was declared that first moved to have the contempt punished, and the case was carried on a final appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. In the meantime there had been a change of management of the company and the labor trouble had been settled. The court, therefore, did not sustain the sentence that had been imposed, as the complainant was no longer interested. It was for the court whose authority had been defied to take action if the offense was to be punished. So the proceeding was renewed and has resulted in the new decision and sentence.

The Supreme Court did hold that the injunction was not in violation of any constitutional rights and should have been obeyed. Justice Wright in passing sentence just now, said that then there was an opportunity for the defendants to purge themselves of contempt by acknowledging their error and expressing a willingness to obey such orders of the court in the future. This, he declared, they have steadily refused to do. "What then," he asked, "remains for the court to do? Can it omit to pass sentence without acknowledging that any defendants may with impunity refuse to obey its orders?" The answer to that would seem to be obvious. It is not a question of "concepts" about workman or slave or serf but of the submission of all subjects of law to the authority of the courts.

WATER MAINS INSTALLED.

Considerable progress is being made in the improving of Chesterfield Square, on Western avenue between Vernon and Slauson avenues. The city is busy with a large force of men installing the water mains and water is now running in a large portion of the tract. The street work, when completed, will include cement sidewalks and curbs, city sewers, gas, electricity and both telephone systems.

Want Publicity.

INDEPENDENT INSURGENTS.

A BREAK IN RANKS OF ORGANIZED LABOR.

Is Based Upon the Graft in the Collection and Disposition of the McNamara Defense Fund of a Million and Seven Hundred Thousand Dollars.

[San Francisco Commercial News:] Another insurgency has occurred.

This time it is in the ranks of organized labor.

The "independent insurgents" is the redundant title these insurgers have adopted.

They animadvert against the graft in the dispersion and the collection of the so-called defense fund for the McNamaras.

They claim that a million and seven hundred odd thousands of dollars have been collected.

The "independent insurgents" are supposed to hale from Sacramento, San Jose, Stockton and San Diego; an alliterative combination, surely.

They have a publicity bureau.

They circularize the press.

They send out unsigned, unexpurgated messages to the dear people.

This is deemed offensive to some ultra-sensitive newspapers and the editors thereof.

In Stockton the seceding fourteen unions who have quit the State Federation are supposed to be the backbone of the movement. In San Jose a number of the men who did not obey the orders of the labor trust bosses in the lumber strike of last week are identified, it is said, with the new move. In Sacramento the backers are in the painters' union, it is reported.

So, the bureau sends out literature trying to bring about an accounting of the funds in the hands of Morrison, the national secretary of the Federation of Labor, at Washington.

It seems like a very small gnat on a very large bull.

An interior paper takes the matter up and calls the publicity-makers cowards because they do not sign their publicity with their names and acknowledge their parentage of the charges.

In an equally unsigned circular the public is made cognisant of the charges by the said interior newspaper and the aforesaid insurgents ingenuously admit the charge is true, but dare the said purveyor of news to investigate the charges. It is further admitted that the publicity-makers are afraid of violence at the hands of henchmen of the titulary lords of the labor trust.

How much was really collected?

What was done with it?

Why is it undesirable that all the details be published?

Were any crimes fostered, and paid for, with this money?

Isn't this public money and isn't an accounting due the public, regardless of union labor's claims in the matter?

Supposing that the Bankers' Association had collected a large defense fund and that it was alleged that this fund was used for other than the purpose the donors had intended, wouldn't that be rightfully subject to public investigation by government officials?

What divinity hedges the bosses of the labor trust that they are allowed from the same investigation any get-rich-quick Wallingford is entitled to in such matters?

Isn't it about time we stopped being stupid in these labor troubles?

Labor, when organized, has no more right than any other organization and when public funds are squandered by labor it is supposed that common sense would dictate the same accounting as would be asked of the treasurers or secretaries of any other voluntary association, collecting and disbursing immense sums without proper accounting, especially if it be suspected that the moneys thus disbursed be for an illegal purpose, a criminal purpose.

LADY BRICKLAYERS NEXT.

Ground Broken in New York for the First Women's Trade School in the Country.

[New York Tribune:] Women bricklayers, plumbers and plasterers are to be graduated in due course of time from the Johnson Female Trade School, ground for which has been broken near Winfield Station in the Borough of Queens.

Originated by Thomas J. Buckley, president of the Master Builders' Association, the school, which is to be the first of its kind in the country, will be built by the association at a cost of $50,000. It is named in honor of Fire Commissioner Johnson.

Women will be taught all the details of the builders' craft, including the gentle pursuit of steam heating and steel work. It is said that already sixty women have been enrolled, and more recruits are expected when the school opens on October 16, next. A similar school in Berlin has more than three hundred students.

Edward L. Middleton, a civil engineer, and six assistants are to have charge of the Johnson school. Frank X. Grady, vice-president of the builders' association, said yesterday that women were entering the field and should have technical instruction. He mentioned Miss Alice Durkin of the firm of Durkin & Lass, which has erected several large buildings, and recently received a contract for a $340,000 Bronx public school.

EUROPEAN LABOR TROUBLES.

A Less Number of Strikes Were Successful Last Year Than in the Year Previous.

[New Orleans Picayune:] The principal notions of the intimacy of their business relations and the dependence of different nations each upon the others for what such nation fails to produce and must buy from another, that the business conditions in every country are of interest to all the others, and among the important factors are the labor relations. United States Consul Thackara, at Berlin, reports that strikes were more numerous in 1911 than in the previous year, but they were isolated in great part and comparatively unimportant. Of the total number of strikes last year, 461 against 419 for 1910 were successful, 1312 compared with 908 were partially successful and 879 compared with 786 were unsuccessful. The number of plants affected by the strikes last year was 10,594, employing 593,779 workers. Of the lockouts last wear sixty-nine were successful, 149 partially successful and eleven unsuccessful. A strike ocurred in May among the Berlin printing pressmen, and an unsuccessful attempt was made to disregard the wage and arbitration agreement which was in force. Agreements between employers and employees were put to another test in the course of the more widespread lithographers' strike, and, as in the first case, were found adequate to control the situation. The other more important labor disturbances of the year occurred in the metal, textile and tobacco industries. The strike among the makers of women's ready-made clothing in Berlin and a six-day lockout in the Berlin machinery factories involved 50,000 work people. Although these conflicts were in part severe and the participants in some instances suffered, business was in no case prejudiced more than temporarily.

A New One.

MATERNITY WAGE SCALE SCHEME.

WORKERS WANT PAY ACCORDING TO SIZE OF FAMILY.

New Syndicate Movement that Puts a Premium on Reproduction Rather Than Upon Skill of Workman, Thus Blaming the State for a Purely Human Function.

[San Francisco Commercial News:] New organizations are coming to light. Organized labor is to be reorganized by these would-be reformers along the lines of education, intelligence, the good of all, the abolishment of monopoly, the return to first principles and the running of the unions with a strict accounting to the units of labor, the least possible assessments, the reward to the efficient, a graduated scale according to ability and time of service and some of the more enthusiasts aver that these unions will grade the wage according to the size of the family.

There is where the reformer slops over.

What has the size of a man's family to do with his return to his employer?

The man who is in a purely professional line limits his ambition to providing for the overplumage of children by rising in the estimaton of his employer until he can meet the demands of a growing family by his increased powers of earning. He is unorganized, individual, ambitious; he has initiative and is honest in his dealings.

The trouble with the new movement which demands that a man be paid according to his powers of reproduction is that it blames the State for the result of a purely human function and it would in addition make the State pay the penalty for individual indulgences.

It is a wonder that anyone with a grain of sense should for a moment entertain any such theory as being along practical lines.

And yet one of the San Francisco daily papers feeds it as editorial pap to its readers. That kind of wisdom costs a cent and the buyer is cheated. It is a sop to the nincompoops whose brains are mainly occupied in devising means for the reproduction of a

MAKES RECORD FOR TONNAGE.

Consolidated Mines in June Does Big Business.

Mohawk Encounters Eighty-Dollar Ore.

Strike Is Made Above Third Level of Mine.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GOLDFIELD, July 5.—The production of the Consolidated Mines Company in June, according to the preliminary estimates prepared by Superintendent J. F. Thorn and given out for publication today, was 31,260 tons, the largest tonnage for any single month in the history of the company. This includes ore that has been extracted from the deepest workings of the Clermont and Grizzly Bear mines, at depths of 1000 and 1200 feet, and that has been shipped to the reduction plant of the International Smelting and Refining Company at Tooele, Utah.

Gross recovery of gold from the June production is placed at $542,000, operating expenses at $200,000 and net realization is estimated at $343,000. This shows a gross value of the product to be slightly less than in May, but the net profit is larger than in the previous month. The tonnage produced during the month is more than 3000 tons in excess of the largest output made in any month in the past. It is probable that the final report for the month will show that the high-grade ore shipped to the smelter has increased the average of profit during June.

One of the most favorable reports of the Consolidated Mines Company that has appeared for some time past is that just issued by General Superintendent J. F. Thorn, covering the company's operations and earnings in May. The report was delayed owing to the time required to obtain final returns from the results of treating the base ore from the deepest levels, which is now being shipped to the plant of the International Smelting and Refining Company at Tooele, but the report shows that these shipments have been yielding excellent returns.

CHEAPER TO SHIP ORE.

It has been found advisable to ship this product to the smelter rather than attempt to treat it in the company's mill, by reason of its base character. It carries silver and copper in larger proportion than any other product mined in the district and in order to obtain the best results in treatment certain changes in the processes employed by the company in its mill would be rendered necessary. The company has sufficient ore blocked out of the character to which the plant is best suited to keep the mill running at full capacity and thus important economies are effected by sending the product to the smelter and the metallic recovery is so much better that it more than offsets the cost of transportation.

That the Mohawk is by no means worked out on upper levels but is still a rich mine is indicated by the statement in the report that at one point above the third level a raise has passed through ten feet of ore averaging $80 a ton. This find is apparently an important one from the fact that it locates a large and rich ore body that was cut off by a fault. The combination mine is producing ore of excellent grade and from points widely separated. The northern stope mentioned is north of the famous Hampton stope and not far from the boundary of the Silver Pick, while the workings on the Reilly vein, which are yielding high-grade ore in large quantity, are far to the southeast of the shaft and near the boundary of the Florence property, on which the vein was first developed by the Reilly lease, but in this ground was worked only above a depth of 300 feet.

DEVELOPS RICH ORE.

The work now in progress in the Clermont and Grizzly Bear mines is of the greatest importance from the fact that it is developing large bodies of good ore at the greatest depth to which operations have been carried in the Goldfield district. The report confirms the earlier statement, made by The Times, that the Grizzly Bear shaft would at once be sunk to a depth of over 1400 feet. It is now regarded as certain that upon the completion of a station on the 1400-foot level a cross-cut will be started immediately to the south for the purpose of exploring the property of the Atlanta Mines Company, the latter having entered into a contract with the Consolidated for the use of this shaft in carrying out its development plans. The report gives an encouraging idea of the character and value of the ore found on the 1300-foot level of the Grizzly Bear, the deepest workings in the entire district.

Operating costs have been greatly reduced during the past few months and for the character of ore handled will compare favorably, in point of economical production and treatment, with those of any company in the West. A large tonnage of low-grade material is handled together with that of better grade and the available ore reserves are said to be of large volume. All of the new work mentioned in the reports has a strong potential bearing upon the value of adjoining properties and will aid materially in seeking ore at other points.

PRODUCTION IS LARGE.

The total production for May was 30,218 tons, containing $550,656.69, or an average of $18.22 a ton. The net recovery was $309,622, or $10.17 a ton. The estimate for June just made shows better results even than this.

The past week's shipments from the Tonopah mines were as follows: Tonopah Mining, 3500 tons; Belmont, 1900 tons; Montana-Tonopah, 1100 tons; Tonopah Extension, 1076 tons; West End, 805 tons, and MacNamara, 471 tons; total, 8861 tons of an estimated value of $321,225. The other day a big strike was made in the Tonopah Merger property. It is considered the most important since the Tonopah Belmont strike, a thirty-foot ledge of ore having been uncovered.

Recent developments in the Montezuma district and several new discoveries of good ore have caused a revival of interest in that territory. Montezuma is about ten miles west of Goldfield.

the former. The second battery of five stamps will be reconstructed and the entire milling capacity of ten stamps utilized. A cyanide plant will probably be installed to assist recovery of values from the more refractory Sugar Pine ore. The other claims will be operated by lessors. It is said John R. E. Bell, formerly of the Strattens Independence mine of Cripple Creek, will have charge of company work. Considerable Los Angeles capital is interested.

The Modoc Mines Company, Sunset, Shasta View, Big Four and other properties are showing well under development and owners and lessors are planning for work along broader lines. Recent developments throughout the district have been particularly satisfactory, and indications favor the development of High Grade into a bonanza producer of proved merit before winter sets in. Conservative engineers are basing confidence in the future of the region on the large deposits of fair-grade ore, rather than on the narrow shoots of bonanza quartz.

LIGHTNER REPORTS STRIKE.

One of the most important recent discoveries in the Angels district is reported from the Lightner mine. On the 900-foot level a strong body of auriferous ore has been intersected and is reported showing strength under vigorous development. Work has not progressed sufficiently to determine the extent of the vein, but indications are distinctly favorable. The strike proves the vein system in this part of the district prevails to depth, and the discovery is expected to have an important influence on the entire district. The Lightner Mining Company is sinking a new three-compartment shaft and has expended over $100,000 in explorative and development work. Considerable ore is exposed in the old workings and the equipment includes an excellent large milling plant and modern surface and underground machinery.

PITTSBURGH IN EVIDENCE.

The Pittsburgh mine, one of Nevada City's old gold producers, is again coming into prominence. On the 1500-foot level good ore has been opened and a winze is being sent down 250 feet from this point. Fair progress has been made and commercial ore is in evidence all the way. In the upper workings fair reserves have been blocked out and the mine is in a position to maintain a good production for an extensive period. The Pittsburgh is splendidly equipped with a modern hoisting and milling plant, together with excellent mine machinery. Large sums have been expended in rehabilitating the property, which is controlled largely by Pennsylvania people. Mark B. Kerr, formerly of Tonopah, is manager.

SKIDOO GATHERING PROFITS.

The report of the Skidoo Mines Company for May records a net profit of $16,184.74. Twelve hundred tons of ore were treated, with a gross value of $17,730 recovered. One thousand five hundred and four dollars and eighteen cents was expended on developments, while total operating costs aggregated $7302.08. The mill operated about twenty days. Ore conditions at the property are reported encouraging with a considerable reserve blocked out. The advent of summer probably means a lower profit, but not to the extent prevailing in former years, as arrangements have been made to combat the influence of heat.

RIO ANTIGUA EXPANDS.

Air compressors are being installed at the South Fork mine and arrangements have been made for the receipt of electric power. Under the new plans the quartz veins intersected while driving for the gravel deposits will be actively developed with prospects of the property becoming a good producer within a few months. With this work fairly under way renewed attention will be devoted to the gravel channel. The property is owned by the Rio Antigua Mining Company of Los Angeles, now being reorganized. F. W. Kuhfeld is superintendent.

LOCAL FIELDS HOLD UP WELL.

Production for May Falls Off, However.

District Probably Will Be Proved to Sawtelle.

Recent developments in the Salt Lake field, west of Los Angeles, indicate that the field is not a "has been" yet by any means, although the output of the field is at present lower than at any time in the last six years. The total production at the field for May was 232,176 barrels, or 7487 barrels a day. Six years ago the output exceeded 400,000 barrels a month, or over 13,000 barrels a day. Since that time there has been a steady decline, and while it is not probable that it will ever reach these figures again, the present output may be increased.

To strengthen this view, the case of one of the Amalgamated Oil Company's old wells may be cited. This well is in the center of the old original field on the Hancock ranch. The well has been a moderate producer for several years, but recently was drilled about 200 feet deeper, and started flowing at 3000 barrels daily and is still doing 800 barrels, making it one of the best wells in the entire field. It is believed that a deeper sand has been discovered and that eventually all the wells in this section of the field may be drilled into it with similar results.

All the territory here is controlled by one company—the Associated—so the deepening process may be slower than it otherwise would be, but it means added life to the field, and probably a larger production.

It was thought long ago that the limits of the field so far as area was concerned, had been reached. The operations of the American Petroleum and the McDor companies near Sherman Junction continued the territory toward the north at this point, and the Associated also drilled two failures near there, and it was thought that the productive sands pinched out and extension to the west was settled, but drilling on the Wolfskill ranch, about two miles further west, opened up a productive sand and this district is now quite active.

BROUGHT IN BIG WELL.

The Associated brought in a sensational well there about a year ago, and drilling has been continued since with creditable results.

The well that now causes operators to sit up and take notice is the one recently brought in by the Kansas Crude Oil Company, headed by F. H. Sawyer, on a tract of land directly north of the Associated Wolfskill wells and west of the Los Angeles Country Club's golf grounds. This well was drilled to 3000 feet and entered an oil sand that gives promise of being as rich as any in the old field. There is an immense volume of gas and the few flows that the well has made indicate it will be a good producer. Estimates have been made as high as 600 barrels a day. It is certain the well is a good one and will extend the drilling area to a considerable extent.

This company is now at work on its well No. 2, located 1000 feet west of No. 1. The drill is down about 3300 feet, 200 feet deeper than No. 1, which shows a sharp dip in the formation. The report is the drill is just entering the sand.

MAY REACH SAWTELLE.

It is thought now that the belt extends to Sawtelle, about two miles west. The Belle Vernon Oil Company drilled a test well near Sawtelle to a depth of 3200 feet, but found no oil. In view of the record of the Kansas Crude, it appears this hole was not drilled deep enough to demonstrate anything.

If the belt is extended, it will be by the operators "feeling their way" out.

Coming back to the eastern end of the field, the Rancho La Brea Oil Company is running three strings of tools on its property, just south of Hollywood, about two miles, and is getting good wells. The territory is shallow in this end of the field—from 1400 to 2200 feet, and the wells are good for from fifty to seventy-five barrels a day.

A. F. Gilmore has just brought in a new well on his 250-acre tract, which is doing 200 barrels a day. The hole is 2150 feet deep and the oil is about 21 gravity.

DOHENY CAME NEXT.

The American Petroleum Company made its start in the Salt Lake field when E. L. Doheny paid $50,000 bonus for a lease on the Niles tract, near Sherman Junction. Mr. Doheny put a half-dozen strings of tools at work on the lease and in less than a year had a production of 9500 barrels a day. Events proved that only about twenty acres of the eighty acres were good, but the property has produced a large amount of oil. It is now, however, doing only about 200 barrels a day, and has become a very small factor in the affairs of the American Petroleum Company.

The Union Oil Company also got into the Salt Lake field early in its history, by leasing the Stevens ranch, directly east of the American Petroleum. It looked so good to the Union that the company built an eight-inch pipe line from the property to the city, a distance of about ten miles. This property did not prove up very well, however, and never produced enough oil to keep the pipe line busy, and now it is not used more than a few days each month.

The McDor Oil Company probably expended $100,000 on its property directly west of the American Petroleum in its efforts to get an oil well, but was obliged to give it up without a barrel of production.

A Bright Boarding-House Keeper.

[New York Tribune:] A woman who for twelve years has conducted a boarding-house in Chicago, and who takes pride in telling that "boarders usually stay until they get married and then send some one to fill the place made vacant by matrimony," anticipated possible complaints because of smaller portions of meat by placing a neatly written notice in the dining-room which stated that the price of beef, mutton and veal had advanced to figures which had not prevailed since the Civil War, and that "everything is high in proportion. There has never been any complaint among my boarders and I hope there will be none. I am doing the best I can and complaint will do no good. So please be patient. There's a good time coming and I want you here when it comes." The boarders are taking the reduced rations and are "waiting," one of them says, "with shortened belts, for the 'good time.'"

STANDARD GETS INTO NEW SAND.

PROVES GROUND ON WEST SIDE OF LA HABRA VALLEY.

Several Big Companies Make Rapid Progress in Development in Southern Fields, Among Them Being Union and Columbia—Delaware Abandons Rotary.

FULLERTON, July 3.—Several prominent companies in the development of the Fullerton oil field are rounding out their work, the Standard on the Leffingwell, the Union on the east side, and the Columbia in the Olinda section.

Most important news of the week is the striking by the Standard of oil sand at a depth of between 3800 and 3900 feet. Considerable gas pressure has been encountered. This well will prove the extreme west side of the Standard's holdings in La Habra Valley.

The Standard is also crowding its operations on the Emory lease, and now has its two wells down better than 2000 feet. These wells are south of the Murphy lease, and in line for light oil. The company has a splendid equipment.

The Union on the east side is down 2550 feet in No. 2 and in hard formation, necessitating the use of standard tools. No. 3 is being cemented at 3002 feet. No. 4 is about 2600 feet down and No. 5 is on a fishing job at 2800. The company is completing a 55,000-barrel tank to receive oil. The preparations indicate confidence in the success of these wells.

The Columbia has No. 22 where it may be brought in. There are plenty of oil indications at 2800 feet. The hole will be put down farther to test for light oil sand. No. 21 is being deepened and is better than 3100 feet. The company has spudded in No. 23. The Columbia has twenty producing wells. It is said the policy of the companies in the older field will be to deepen their wells.

The West Coast has No. 31 on the pump. It is producing at 2850, having been drilled from 2540, where it produced only 50 barrels a day.

The Olinda Oil Company has No. 5 down 2500 feet and No. 8 at 2000 is in oil sand. The company has spudded in two more wells and is constructing a rig for a third.

The Petroleum's No. 1 is temporarily off the producing list, having sanded up. Gas pressure caused part of the trouble, and the well will be cleaned out. It is believed it will be brought back into the producing column. This well is farthest south in the eastern side of the field.

The rotary drill has failed to make any amount of progress in the estimate of the Delaware Union management and the tryout is at an end in the Brea Canyon section, as far as this company is concerned. Hard ground was encountered and considerable loss of pipe and other troubles culminated in the decision of the company to do no more experimenting. Among oil employes there is a great division of opinion all over the field with regard to the efficiency of the rotary, and the standard rig men are pointing to the Brea Canyon failure as proving their contentions.

Holding Back a Desert.

[Springfield Republican:] Extensive tracts of land in Siberia are threatened by the encroachment of the great Gobi desert, and a plan has now been drawn up for a series of forest ramparts to hold back the salt sand drift. The only effective defense, according to the report of agronomists sent to survey the region, is in tree belts at least two miles broad. It is proposed to plant one of these from Samara to the Caspian Sea, while others are recommended extending in intervals of about forty miles right up to the Chinese frontier.

25 CENTS MIDNIGHT MONDAY

Tomorrow is the last day you can buy our shares at 22½ cents.

After midnight, Monday, July 8th, these shares will be 25 cents.

You save 12½ cents on every dollar of stock you buy between now and then.

It means $12.50 to you on every $100 to get your subscription in, or mailed, before midnight tomorrow.

$125 on each $1000 subscription placed before Tuesday morning.

You need not pay cash to make this 12½ per cent.

Nor do we mean that you must subscribe $1000.

100 shares ($22.50) is enough.

This pays for 100 shares in eighteen months. $12.50 pays for 1000 shares.

Before the eighteen months are by, we plan that these shares shall be selling at 37½, 50 and even 100 per cent advance.

There is nothing hurried about these plans. We are carrying out in an accurate, orderly and careful manner the business policy prepared months ago.

Each one of the houses we have built has been specially designed by our own architect to set a new standard for home-building.

Each one of them has been an immediate success.

Now we are putting forty-nine under way on our 83d Street tract.

Each tract we have bought has been selected to fill a specific demand.

After waiting for what we wanted, we have just secured one of the best ground floor office locations in the city of San Diego.

We bought a new tract there this week, adjoining the Exposition site. Building will commence upon it immediately.

In a few days we will place on the market one of the finest one hundred and fifty acre subdivisions in the Los Angeles district.

All this has been done since February 17th, this year.

On that date this company was started, after months of preparation, by twenty-two Los Angeles business and professional men, who among themselves subscribed $30,000.

At the time this is being written (close of business Wednesday) we are nearing the twenty-three hundred mark in shareholders and $300,000 subscribed.

By midnight tomorrow we will number twenty-five hundred of genuinely active, energetic shareholders and be well on the road to $400,000 in subscriptions.

An average of five hundred new shareholders and $60,000 in subscriptions every month for five months (it will not be five months until July 17th) speaks for itself.

It shows the kind of interest and the class of workers that make up our shareholders and management.

It shows that money is not of the first importance in the building up of a great company in this line of business.

We are as frank about this as we have been in our every statement since the beginning.

The more of you that get in at 22½ cents, the better we will all like it.

It would have been no trouble to have advanced the price of our shares several times in the past few months, and to be selling them readily at 30 to 40 cents by now.

That was not our plan. That is why we have held back the advance as long as we could.

The more there are of us, the greater our strength, the greater our capital in the end, and the greater the profits for each individual shareholder.

Not one of us has bought these shares expecting less than 20 to 30 per cent a year.

We are a mutual company. There was not one share of promotion stock. Not one of us can profit at the expense of the others.

These are the reasons why more than five hundred shareholders a month have joined us since we started.

These are the reasons why we are looking forward to not only three thousand, but five thousand and more shareholders in an equally short time.

This is your opening. After Monday you will have to pay a 25 per cent premium for our shares.

Buy more if you wish. Pay cash if more convenient.

These offices will be open in the evening, but kindly do not delay until the last moment.

Come in early in the day, if at all possible.

If more convenient, use the coupon and mail in your subscription.

Be sure that it is mailed before midnight, Monday.

Old-Time Punishment.

[Chicago News:] Old-time punishment for offences at sea was most severe. The code of the time of Richard I of England, drawn up for the government of his fleet on the crusades, provided "that whoso killed any person on shipboard should be tied with him that was slain and thrown into the sea. And if he killed him on the land he should in like manner be tied with the partie slaine and be buried with him in the earth." In Elizabeth's time a thief was to be ducked three times, towed ashore at the stern of a boat and marooned with a loaf of bread and a can of beer. Mutiny was punishable by the culprit's being hanged by his heels "until his brains were beaten oute against the shyppe's side." The penalties imposed for sleeping on watch were progressive. For the first offence the man was to be "headed" with a bucket of water; on the next occasion he was to be strung up by his wrists and to have two buckets of water poured into his sleeves; the third time he would be loaded with weights and bound to the mast and "for the fourthe time he was to be hanged to the boltsprite, with a can of beere and a biscotte of breade, and a sharp knife, and so to hang and choose whether he would cutte himself down and fall into the sea or hange still and starve."

Needed a Soaking.

[Life:] An elder while baptising converts at a revival meeting advanced with a wiry, sharp-eyed old chap into the water. He asked the usual question, whether there was any reason why the ordinance of baptism should not be administered.

After a pause a tall, powerful-looking man who was looking quietly on remarked: "Elder, I don't want to interfere in yer business, but I want to say that this is an old sinner you have got hold of, and that one dip won't do him any good; you'll have to anchor him out in deep water over night."

Wine Makes Hens Lay.

[Chicago Tribune:] A French chicken farmer claims that a small quantity of wine increases the egg producing capacity of hens to a considerable degree. He divided a flock of twelve hens, 14 months old, into two groups of six.

Each group was fed exactly with the same amount of grain, bread etc., but the bread given one group was soaked with wine. In the four months of the test the wine-fed hens laid 148 eggs more than the other six. In another test twelve hens of the same breed, but only 9 months old, were fed in the same way and the wine-fed hens won by eighty-seven eggs.

PAN-AMERICA.

The French West Indies.

A French commission is to investigate the needs of the French West Indies in connection with the opening of the Panama Canal. Recent activity in the British West Indies, notably Port Castries, Santa Lucia and Kingston, Jamaica, also of the Dutch in Curacao and the Danes in St. Thomas, appears to have greatly stimulated French interest in their West Indian possessions and the technical mission is to take in also Pointe a Pitre, Guadalupe and possibly the little island of Marie Galante.

Fort de France has long possessed an arsenal, quays, coal depots, a pier, a ship carpenters' school and important depots of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique. The roadstead has a depth of about 214 meters. It is, however, Point a Pitre on the island of Guadalupe which is credited with being the best French harbor in the West Indies, Admiral Ribell having called it the safest in the entire Caribbean Sea. It is possible, therefore, that the commission will decide on very important works to be carried out there, though Fort de France is expected to remain the most important base.

According to reports from France, it is purposed to give special attention to the possibilities of intercolonial traffic between the French West Indies and the French possessions in the Southern Pacific, principally Tahiti and the Marquesas group, via Panama. Great hopes are entertained in France, advices from the principal ports say, for the future of the South Pacific islands, including New Caledonia, owing to their favorable position between Panama and the British Antipodes, as well as between the far east and South America, and it is believed that a very considerable traffic with these islands will be developed via the French West Indies and Panama.

A Brazilian Revolutionary Question.

A peculiar problem has been put up to Brasil because of a revolutionary outbreak in the State of Matte Grosso. The only practical way of reaching this State is by steamer up the Paraguay River, thus making a trip across the republic of Paraguay, a condition that is causing much disquiet in Paraguay, lest the revolution may be a blind to enable Brasil to take advantage of its poor neighbor. As Paraguay is just recovering from a three-cornered revolution, which has depleted the means of national defense, the country is practically at the mercy of Brasil, and only a very faint defense could be made should an armed expedition be dispatched by Brasil to its revolutionary state.

Peruvian Sugar Crop.

The sugar crop of Peru for the year 1911 is estimated at 187,000 tons, of which 30,000 tons are consumed at home and 157,000 tons are exported This is about 3000 tons less than for 1910, while on the other hand it is thought that the 1912 crop will be in excess of the figures given for 1910, the shortage of the Cuban crop and of beet sugar in Europe causing a rise in prices which has led to the planting of an increased acreage in Peru. The recent installation of improved machinery on four of the leading estates will also help production.

Petroleum in Peru.

Petroleum is found in the south, as well as in the center and the north of Peru; but it is only in the north that extensive development has taken place, especially along the coast of the provinces of Tumbes, Paita and Piura. The southern deposits, so far but little developed, are encountered in the provinces of Canas, Lampa, Azangaro and Huancane; above all in the latter province.

According to published statistics, the production of petroleum has increased from 37,039 metric tons in 1903 valued at £383,428, to 200,000 metric tons in 1911, valued at £600,000. A very satisfactory yearly increase in production has been shown, with the sole exception of the year 1910, proving the sound state of the industry in recent years. It is reasonable to assume that if to this progress be added the considerations of the vast extent and acknowledged richness of the deposits and the advantages of one sort and another which they enjoy; as, for instance, their geographical location on the shores of the sea—in the case of the northern fields—the shallow depth at which the productive oil-sands are encountered, the ease and economy of development and production; the Peruvian oilfields will, at no distant day, be converted into a center of production of the first rank.

Opportunities in Peru.

There are opportunities in Peru for American manufacturers in almost every line of industry, says E. T. Greenbach in the Baltimore American. "Furthermore, it may be authoritatively stated that there is no country in the world in which the foreigner is more amply protected in his rights than in Peru. The laws of the land specifically stated that foreigners shall have the same rights as natives. That the contracts of the Peruvian government are as good as those of the United States or of any country of Europe, all those familiar with affairs know full well. As a matter of fact there is no country in the world whose international credit ought to rank higher than that of Peru. And as for the punctiliousness on observance of contracts, no government in the world has a better record than Peru.

"Let me tell you this: there has not been a revolution so called in Peru for a generation. And such as it was that last time it was simply an illegal unathorized succession, perhaps little more of a genuine revolution than some of the sorts of elections we have seen and are seeing in our own country. And when that last revolution so called was declared in Peru, the first act of the new government was to bind itself to the payment of all debts of the previous administration."

NEW FOOTHILL TRACT.

The Guarantee Building and Investment Company has completed negotiations for the purchase of a twenty-four-acre tract of land in the Hollywood foothill district, between Hacienda Park and Crescent Heights and fronting on Santa Monica boulevard. This tract will be immediately improved and laid out in large-sized lots, with such restrictions as will insure a high class of residences. Among the homes now being erected by the company in this section are a two-story home on Francis avenue for F. J. Holmes; a two-story residence for James T. McDonald on Kingsley drive, Hollywood; three houses in Venice for Mrs. Agnes B. Scott; four houses in Santa Monica for Mrs. A. L. Waterhouse; a home for Mrs. J. Barnor in Santa Monica; a beach home for Mrs. Buehler, and another for Mrs. Torrence, at Hermosa Beach; four bungalows and a house at Tropico for C. O. Warner; an eight-room bungalow on West Sixteenth street for George Carter, and a six-room bungalow for Mrs. A. Rogers, on El Molino street.

MATERNITY WAGE SCALE.

undesirable section of the human species.

The leaders of the faction which desires to cut away from the violence-loving, criminal section of organized labor would do well to ponder long and deeply before choosing as planks in a new platform any of the fustian and cheap sophistries of the leaders of the syndicalist movement. This numerous paternity or maternity wage scale is one of the pet schemes of Haywood, Ettorani and Debs. The next step would be to have the State care for the progeny of the unrestrained degenerates. The producing syndicate of labor leaders would be held irresponsible and their children cared for at public expense.

What a folly!

The movement to secede from the Federation of Labor in California, it is hoped by the Commercial News, is a serious one and may be successful. Any man, or set of men, that will rescue organized labor from the monopolistic feudal system now prevailing will deserve well of labor and the world in general, but it is hoped that a scheme for the general syndicating of children will not damn the project at its inception.

UNIONS AND SYNDICALISM.

European Labor Organizations Have Been Won Over to the Movement Against the Capitalist.

[Portland Oregonian:] The Asquith Cabinet is paying dearly for its alliance with the Labor party. Its concessions to the demands of the unions are the price it has paid for their support. Those concessions have convinced the unions of their omnipotence and have encouraged them to follow the railroad and transport workers' strike with the seamen's strike, the coal miners' strike, and now with the London transport workers' strike. Britain had barely recovered from its fright at the threatened paralysis of traffic than it was in danger of freezing and suffered from an industrial paralysis due to the miners' strike. The metropolis is now threatened with famine unless the employers concede the demands of the transport strikers.

The present strike was ordered to enforce a closed-shop agreement. Because one man refused to join the union, all employees of the firm for which he worked struck, and the Disputes Committee of the union ordered a general strike. The union was accused of breaking its agreement by upholding the refusal of unionists to work with a non-unionist, but Sir Edward Clarke, an eminent lawyer, who was called upon to examine into the rights of the case, found that the employer broke his agreement by hiring the non-unionist. But the union is accused of having broken the agreement of last summer by striking, for the agreement provided that all disputes should be referred to the Board of Trade. The dispute has extended from the one man first concerned to 250,000 now on strike and has caused great suffering and inconvenience to London's millions.

As usual in such cases, the government comes in for blame from all sides. The police are protecting those men who have broken away from the strike and those who have supplanted strikers, thereby earning the curses of the strikers, but they do not prevent peaceful picketing, thereby incurring the fierce denunciations of the employers and of the suffering public. The government is accused of allowing the union to coerce and intimidate non-unionists under the guise of peaceful picketing. The Tory press does not miss the opportunity of making political capital by accusing the government of having "facilitated the setting up of a grinding tyranny." The Socialist organs deny that the unions desire to starve the people, but admit that "it is difficult, if not impossible, in a strike to avoid inflicting some hardships upon perfectly innocent people." One of them says "those affected have recognised this and have borne the sacrifice uncomplainingly."

But the strike is more than a mere struggle for the closed shop—it is one of a series of battles in a social war begun by the syndicalists for the avowed purpose of extinguishing the capitalist. They turn with contempt from legislative remedies for the real or supposed wrongs of labor, and adopt cruder, but as they think, more effective weapons. Their attitude and purpose were thus bluntly stated in a speech by Tom Mann, ex-president of the International Transport Workers' Federation:

You have had a generation of representatives in Parliament, and what have they done? No, we will fight our own battles. Labor runs the machine until its demands are met. And so we go on until we possess the machine itself, until labor has appropriated all surplus and the capitalist is extinct. A fig for Parliament.

In Europe the unions have been largely won over to syndicalism. In the United States the syndicalists have organized the I.W.W. to fight the unions unless they fall in line with the syndicalist policy and to carry on the social war for extinction of the capitalist.

DEMAND FOR WORKMEN.

Pennsylvania Concerns Hunt Even the Prisons for Workers so Acute Is the Necessity.

[New York Times:] So acute has become the labor famine in the Pittsburgh district that prisons are being raided by the big industrial concerns.

The Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company raided all the precinct stations last week seeking to get men to man the coal fleets. Sentence was suspended in minor cases and the men were guaranteed good wages and transportation back to Pittsburgh. In this manner the coal company rounded up scores of men.

Agents of the Carnegie Steel Company visited the County Workhouse today. Those committed for minor offenses in default of payment of fines were called in and offered work. Those who accepted had their fines paid by the steel corporation and were taken away under guard lest they should escape.

Warden Lewis of the County Jail accepted fines imposed upon prisoners unable to pay. These fines were paid by the steel corporation employment agents and by agents of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company.

Gibraltar Preferred Stock Will Advance On July 20 10%

REMARKABLE GROWTH RECORDED BY NEW CORPORATION

Make Your Dollars Earn Full Profits-- Big Money Makers Buy First

10% On account of the greatly increased valuation of the property owned by the Gibraltar Investment and Home Building Company, and in justice to our shareholders, who have purchased the preferred stock in the two months since incorporation, the price of the stock must be advanced on July 20 to 11 cents a share. Though this means a profit of 10 per cent. for many shareholders in a few weeks' time in addition to a dividend, which will soon be declared, the remarkable growth of the company, and the actual worth of the assets absolutely demand such action.

10% The growing orange and olive trees, which include the largest olive nurseries in the world, are easily worth 30 per cent. more today than the conservative valuation of $500,000 at which the Gibraltar directors bought them. The last sale of small olive trees in pots was for 60 cents each. The market prices for olive and orange trees will return 40 per cent. profits on all outstanding stock of the Gibraltar Company from the sale of the hundreds of thousands of trees ready for planting this fall.

10% The steady rise in the market value of our trees, and the flourishing condition of the olive industry promises the selling of the 8 per cent. preferred stock at 15 cents a share, or a profit of 50 per cent. by the first of the year. This advance is backed by the growing value of the assets and surplus, and does not include dividends to be declared from the actual sale of trees, orange groves, orange crops, or land.

10% The great future profits from the developing of land and planting to trees from the company's immense nurseries have nothing to do with the present advance in stock based on increased value of present assets. These future profits will reach in to hundreds of per cent. The man who will make the greatest returns from his money is the one who secures all dividends and stock advancements by buying now at the original first price.

10% The remarkable success of the Gibraltar Company in the two months' time shows the faith not only of this country, but of the world at large in the growth of California and the immense profits to be made from developing land, the planting of orchard homes, and creating of little farms. From the announcement of its operations made solely in Los Angeles papers, this company has sold stock in Germany, Mexico, Canada, New Mexico, Arizona, and as far East as Pennsylvania, besides up and down the entire Pacific Coast.

Until July 20 we will receive subscriptions to the preferred stock at par of 10 cents per share. You can buy for CASH or on the following Table of 20 Monthly Payments:

READY TO START BRIDGE.

Engineer in Charge of Great Colorado-Street Project Arrives From North.

PASADENA, July 6.—The city of Pasadena is just now putting the finishing touches to a large amount of street improvement work that will make a difference in the appearance of several parts of the city. The improvement of North El Moleno avenue, between Bellevue drive and the north city limits, a distance of about a mile, is more than half completed. This street is being graded, curbed, guttered and oiled. The total cost of the work will be $16,790.

Another important piece of work is that on Garfield avenue, between Dakota street and the north city limits. Here, also, the street is being graded, oiled, curbed and guttered. The work will be completed in less than a month and will cost $9300. East Mountain street is being improved between Lake avenue and Hill street, at a cost of $6300.

Brush is being cleared away and actual work is about to be begun on the proposed new Colorado-street bridge across the Arroyo Seco, which is to be built by the city of Pasadena and the county of Los Angeles jointly, at a cost of $200,000. C. K. Allen, resident engineer on the Pacific Coast for the Kansas City firm of Waddell & Harrington, which has the contract to build the bridge, arrived from the North last week to take personal charge of the work.

BUILDING PERMITS.

Of building permits issued last week those for improvements to cost $1000 or more were:

City Builders' Investment Company, six-room frame bungalow, No. 1278 Stevenson avenue, $2000; William Banning, frame and corrugated-iron warehouse, No. 333 North Euclid avenue, $1400; W. A. Sinclair, seven-room frame dwelling and garage, No. 862 Oakland avenue, $3500; M. J. Smith, six-room frame bungalow, No. 849 Elizabeth street, $1000; Elizabeth Grinnell, five-room frame dwelling, No. 890 East Orange Grove avenue, $4679; Maud, Alice and Elston Glenn, seven-room frame bungalow, No. 55 North Meredith avenue, $2200; city of Pasadena, reinforced concrete garbage incinerator, No. 1006 South Raymond avenue, $46,000; Mrs. Amelia Serbert, fifteen-room frame and plaster residence and garage, No. 1199 South El Moleno avenue, $45,000.

If some of our Presidents were not too busy chasing an office that don't want 'em, they might put the Sherman law on the trail of the ball trust.

ITALIANS TIRED OF THEIR WAR.

Discontented Because It Is Lasting So Long.

Factories Closing and Hard Times Draw Nigh.

Work Started to Drain Pagan Temple of Water.

BY CLEMENT J. BARRETT.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

ROME, July 6.—As month after month goes by bringing with it no prospect of a cessation of the war with Turkey there becomes increasingly evident with each succeeding week, signs of a discontent and unrest among the poorer class of people, the end of which it is hard to foresee. For, upon the poor man than all others, this war, bringing with it the burden of heavy taxation, depression in trade, loss of wages and lack, in many cases, of the ordinary necessaries of life, presses with peculiar severity.

All over the country factories, workshops and stores are closing. Most of the smaller towns and cities show a whole population lacking work and the means to live.

SOCIALISTS BUSY.

The voice of the Socialist with his visionary and unsubstantial propaganda, of the Revolutionary and the Anarchist with their insidious temptations to violence, grows bolder and more potent with each day. Everywhere the signs of feverish unrest, finding probable vent in a revolution, are more and more evident. The gravity of the situation is well expressed in this sentence by a well-known English diplomat thoroughly familiar with the trend of European affairs:

"If Victor Emmanuel wishes to keep his throne he should lose no time in bringing to an end a war which should never have been begun."

For all observers outside Italy realize that a revolution once begun will have no end until the monarchy has crumbled to dust.

TO DRAIN A CHURCH.

An important undertaking has just been begun aiming at the draining of the substructure of the Church of San Clemente, the great ancient basilica subterranean mitharseum of which was discovered through the researches of Father Mullooly, prior of the Irish Dominicans, to the care of which order it is still entrusted. San Clemente is one of the most characteristic monuments of Rome, comprising marvelous series of construction, superimposed one upon the other, and embracing a period of about fourteen centuries.

The lowest part, comprising a building of the second or third century before Christ, where in the first century of the Empire St. Clements assembled the faithful of Rome, and a Pagan temple, containing all that was necessary for the celebration of Mitharic mysteries, has remained for twenty-five years under about ten feet of water, supposed to have come from some accidentally perforated ancient Rome aqueduct.

The expert engineers having at length decided that the only remedy to save the unique monument from serious damage was to build a subterranean drain to carry off the water from San Clemente to the main sewer of the city at Colosseum, the work has been placed under the direct surveillance of C. A. Mills, an English engineer, who has studied the problem for the last eight years, and an Italian expert in church building.

BEAUTIFUL ITALIAN ART WORK.

J. P. Morgan Offers Three Hundred and Sixty Thousand Dollars for Three of Donatello's Masterpieces.

[Washington Star:] Unusual precautions have been taken to prevent the press and public from learning of J. Pierpont Morgan's latest attempt to bereave Italy of its most treasured works of art, but I am enabled to present the details of the essay, at once the most remarkable and romantic.

It means that, if successful, Italy will lose and Mr Morgan acquire three of the greatest examples of Donatello, the immortal Florentine sculptor, who, from 1410 to 1424, was the leader of the Italian renaissance, the precursor and in many ways of the inspiration of Michel Angelo.

Some idea of the value of these names may be gathered from the fact that their owner asked 3,000,000 francs ($6,000,000,) and that Mr. Morgan has offered 1,800,000 francs ($360,000,) for them.

That offer, I understand, has been accepted, and, when a certain peculiar bargain with the department of fine arts of Italy is carried through, New York will surpass London, Vienna and Berlin and equal Paris in the wealth of its Donatellos.

The very curious story of high finance applied to art dates back to 1910, when Mr Morgan paid his annual spring visit to Florence. Among the few invitations he accepted was one from the Martelli family, and one day he called ostensibly to take tea with them, but really to visit their private gallery, which, with other interesting works of art, contains four marbles by Donatello—a "John the Baptist," the bust of a boy, said by some to be one of the Martelli family, but catalogued and known all over the world as the bust of the boy, "John," a statue of David and a coat-of-arms of the Martelli family.

The Martellis are one of the oldest of the historical families of Florence. Their genealogical tree extends its roots as far back as the twelfth century, and their palace in the Della Forca, not far from the Duomo, was built in the thirteenth century. Long ago the Martelli family made a large fortune in the silk business, of which, according to what is said, very little is now left. Their palace, called the Silk Trade Palace, was for many years the home of Donatello's artistic activity, and this is enough to assure any art expert that the four sculptures in their possession are genuine. Aside from the fact that their authenticity has never been questioned, the art historians of the fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, as well as the Italian National Art Catalogue, all speak of the works as the property of the Martellis.

The three Donatellos, it is said, will go to the Metropolitan Museum of Arts, and congratulations besides the Martelli family other Donatello that being in Let me add the bust of regarded as

ITALIAN ART WORK.

J. P. Morgan Offers Three Hundred and Sixty Thousand Dollars for Three of Donatello's Masterpieces.

[Washington Star:] Unusual precautions have been taken to prevent the press and public from learning that J. Pierpont Morgan's latest attempt to bereave Italy of its most treasured works of art, but I am enabled to present the details of the case, as it once the most remarkable and romantic.

It means that, if successful, Italy will lose and Mr Morgan acquire one of the greatest examples of Donatello, the immortal Florentine sculptor, who, from 1410 to 1424, was the leader of the Italian renaissance, the precursor and in many ways of the inspiration of Michel Angelo.

Some idea of the value of these works may be gathered from the fact that their owner asked 3,000,000 francs ($18,000,000,) and that Mr. Morgan has offered 1,800,000 francs ($9,000,000,) for them.

The offer, I understand, has been refused, and, when a certain peculiar bargain with the department of the arts of Italy is carried out, New York will surpass London, Paris and Berlin and equal even the wealth of its Donatelli.

The very curious story of high finance applied to art dates back to 1907, when Mr Morgan paid his annual spring visit to Florence. Among the few invitations he accepted was one from the Martelli family, and one day he called ostensibly to take tea with them, but really to visit their private gallery, which, with other interesting works of art, contains four marbles by Donatello, a "John the Baptist," a bust of a boy, said by some to be one of the Martelli family, but recognized and known all over the world as the bust of the boy, "John." Also of David and a coat-of-arms of the Martelli family.

The Martellis are one of the oldest of the historical families of Florence. Their genealogical tree extends its roots as far back as the 12th century, and their palace in the Via Forca, not far from the Duomo, was built in the thirteenth century. Long ago the Martelli family made a large fortune in the wool trade, of which, according to report, very little is now left. The palace, called the Silk Trade Palace, was for many years the center of Donatello's artistic activity. There is enough to assure any art critic that the four sculptures in the collection are genuine. Aside from the fact that their authenticity has never been questioned, the art critics of the fourteenth, fifteenth and seventeenth centuries, as well as the Italian National Art Catalogue, all speak of them as the property of the Martellis.

Of the Donatellos, it is said, one is in the Metropolitan Museum of Arts, and Mr. Morgan has been congratulated over the purchase, as, besides the four in possession of the Martelli family, there is but one other Donatello in private hands—that being in Vienna.

Let me add, as a final word, that the bust of the "Boy St. John" is regarded as one of the finest works of Donatello, and one of the most exquisitely executed examples of the renaissance in Italy, if not in the world.

Drinking in Algeria.

[San Francisco Argonaut:] An Algerian regiment will empty as many as a thousand pitchers of wine without losing half a thimbleful of liquor. It is a system which permits a general use of one vessel for drinking purposes in an absolutely cleanly way. It dispenses with cups or glasses, a great convenience when troops are on active service. A large pitcher with a spout to it, filled with wine, was passed from hand to hand. Each soldier lifted the pitcher high over his head and tilted it until the wine poured in a steady stream into his open mouth below. When the wine splashed inside the drinker's stomach for about a minute the soldier next him took possession of the pitcher and repeated the performance. Not a drop is wasted.

The man who is not familiar with the development work that is going on down at the new Standard Oil City of El Segundo, has a surprise in store.

He will rub his eyes, and wonder if some modern Aladdin has not been at work with his magical lamp—in this magical city.

El Segundo is no dream city, however, but one of realities. And the wise man, who is not of that great army of "Hind-sighters," who lament lost opportunities, will at once drive, not one stake, but several, as many as he can carry, at El Segundo.

Only a few short years ago, Gary, the Hill City, was projected amid the sand dunes of Indiana, and at the lower end of Lake Michigan—what happened?

In a year or so, a city was built representing investments of millions of dollars, a magnificent harbor, great docks, business blocks, hotels, homes, churches, schools, were built, and the "hind-sighters" of Chicago began the usual comment,—"Too late"—"I could have bought this or that corner lot for a song."

Don't you let history repeat herself at El Segundo—in your case. Take your check book with you and go down there and you'll buy a few corner lots, if you are a member of the "Foresight" Club—Don't let this opportunity slip by, for it doesn't deserve to. A million and more dollars' worth of property has been purchased already by "Foresighters"—why not get into line?

Raising a Roof for a Rainy Day

"Into each life some rain must fall." Longfellow

Thousands of men with families dependent upon them, and children to educate, realize this when too late.

The total salary earned by any man during his productive period represents a large sum. Take yourself for instance. Figure how much you have earned from the time you first began working and you will be surprised what this amounts to.

Then figure how many dollars you could have saved by denying yourself pleasures and luxuries that did not benefit you compared with the regular income you could have created for yourself by investing all your money in a safe, profitable business—in a security paying regular quarterly dividends.

Crowded to the Rear

Every man can save something—even a dollar a week planted in fertile soil will represent a neat sum by the time you are no longer as young as you used to be, and are crowded to the rear by the younger men.

If you have nothing saved up—take as much as you can spare out of your next salary—put it into Commonwealth Home Builders shares and join our great co-operative family of over 3500 representative business and professional men. Shares are selling for 35c.

$3.50 will start you. Then you can pay $1.75 per month. This pays for one hundred shares. Add to this all you can spare each week and your capital will grow rapidly. Shares are increasing in value right along and you will receive quarterly dividends.

Cooperative Home Building

Call today and we will explain to you the many advantages of co-operative investment. We have published a very interesting 64-page booklet on co-operation, free to you. Also "Commonwealth" monthly.

WHAT BOOKMEN ARE TALKING.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, July 19.—John Bunyan probably has turned over in his grave several times if he knows what is going on around it nowadays. The author of "Pilgrim's Progress" lies in the historic burying ground of Bunhill Fields, in the Finsbury district of old London, and apparently this ancient cemetery has been allowed to go to the dogs. The city corporation, in fact, has just asked the First Commissioner of Works to approve a new by-law forbidding carpet beating and fighting in this miniature valhalla of English nonconformity! The grass, such as it is, in the historic "fields," is long and untended, the inscriptions almost unintelligible, and the iron-work of the tombs is gradually being eaten away by rust. Bunyan's tomb needs cleaning badly, although it was rebuilt not more than a decade ago through the efforts of the late Earl of Shaftesbury.

Not far from Bunyan's grave in the "fields," lies the mother of John Wesley, who died just opposite, in the house of her son, which adjoins the famous City Road Chapel—the Cathedral of Methodism—where he preached. In Bunhill Fields, too, are buried Isaac Watts, the hymn-writer, Henry, William and Richard Cromwell, descendants of the protector, and the renowned Dame Page, whose headstone announces that she died from dropsy, and records the number of times she was "tapped." There is, too, an obelisk in memory of Daniel Defoe, which was subscribed for by youthful admirers of "Robinson Crusoe."

Probably no time will be lost in putting the city corporation's by-law into effect, and the fighters and carpet beaters are likely to have been ousted from the famous fields before the main body of this year's American "invaders" arrives and begins to explore every nook and corner of the metropolis in which history lurks.

Probably most of our countrymen, if asked to name the British author with the biggest public, would mention either Hall Caine or Marie Corelli, but this answer would not be correct. The writer, who, undisputed, claims this distinction is Nat Gould, of whom you may never have heard, but whose tales of the turf commend themselves so highly to the British public that up to date over eight million of them have been sold, perhaps the best known one being, "The Chance of a Lifetime." One is reminded of Mr. Gould's pre-eminence by the fact that he has just embarked on the stormy sea of theatrical management. A few days ago the old Canterbury Music Hall, in Westminster Bridge road, which dates back to Elizabethan times, was closed, supposedly for good and all, but now it is announced that Nat Gould has taken the place over and will reopen it shortly, presenting as his opening attraction a dramatization of his best-known novel, in which it seems, "six thoroughbred racehorses are to take part."

This is the story of a struggle between an unsuccessful novel that insisted on being republished, and its author, who wanted to forget it. The struggle ended in the triumph of the book, which is called "Spring Days," and the complete discomfiture of the author, who is none other than George Moore, the creator of "Esther Waters." Moore tells the story in a preface he has written for "Spring Days," which he is republishing twenty-five years after its original publication, and after many ineffectual attempts to destroy the last evidence that there ever was such a book.

On its first appearance it was a flat failure. "A few contemptuous paragraphs," says Moore, "was all the welcome it got from the press." Of one of the reviews, a friend of Moore's remarked that if a book of his had been spoken of in that way, he should never write another. Moore didn't go quite so far as that, but he omitted to mention "Spring Days" in future lists of his works, and his impulse was, he says, to destroy every copy that came his way.

Mexico's National Drink.

[Dundee Advertiser:] Pulque, the national drink of Mexico, is made from the juice of the maguey plant, large tracts of which are cultivated outside of Mexico City. As a rule, there are 800 plants to the acre. The juice is extracted by peons. It is shipped into town in long trains, much like milk trains here, and the consumption is so great that it is equivalent to two quarts a day for each person. The white liquid tastes like yeast, and in small places it is a common sight to see pigskins filled with the liquor strapped to a burro's back, the pulque making a gurgling sound with every motion of the animal.

HALF-YEAR GAIN IS PHENOMENAL.

RECORD ACTIVITY REPORTED IN VALLEY TOWN.

Lumber Company Projects Second Fine Business Block in a Year. City Trustees Ambitious to Secure Model Fire Protection and Needed Park Space.

GLENDALE, July 6.—This city has made a wonderful growth during the past six months. The report for the first six months of 1912 is as follows: January, 45 permits, $45,020; February, 32 permits, $37,736; March, 37 permits, $65,750; April, 51 permits, $43,280; May, 45 permits, $40,121, and June, 25 permits, $36,910. This makes a total of 235 permits with a valuation of $268,817. The building in this city for the first six months of last year amounted to $141,835, 142 permits having been taken out.

The following permits have been issued so far this month by J. M. Banker, building inspector: Mrs. Belle P. Parker, No. 234 South Isabelle street, seven-room residence, $3000; S. M. Bond, No. 1653 Vine street, five-room bungalow, $1500; J. W. Lawson, finish of Central building on Broadway, $2000; J. G. Wilder, five-room house on Campbell, near Dryden, $1500; Emma Norton, No. 113 North Kenwood street, five-room bungalow, $3000; T. J. Diving, Third street and Verdugo road, five-room bungalow, $2000; S. C. Packard, Nos. 226 and 230, two five-room bungalows, $2000 each; J. F. McIntyre, Broadway just east of Glendale avenue, four-room brick business block, $6500.

The Valley Lumber Company will start at once the erection of a business block on Broadway, immediately east of the block it has just completed. The building will contain six storerooms facing on Broadway, and will cost about $10,000. It will be similar in design and construction to the block just completed. The ground floor will be 90x100 feet in size. The structure will be entirely of brick.

A. M. Mortenson of Los Angeles has started the foundation of a $4000 Swiss chalet bungalow on Mira Loma street, which he expects to have completed in two months. It will contain seven rooms.

L. M. Appleby has disposed of his property at the corner of Riverdale drive and Columbus street to a Los Angeles buyer for a reported price of $16,000. The place consists of three acres of ground and a modern home.

F. R. Sinclairs has been awarded the contract for the improvement of Laurel street, at $2.33⅓ per front foot. This improvement includes grading, oiling, tamping, sidewalking and curbing.

The City Trustees are making an unusual effort to secure an adequate fire system in this city. Marshal Miller has been instructed to secure estimates on up-to-date fire-fighting apparatus, while at the same time fire plugs are being installed throughout the city. The machine to be purchased will be an auto fire fighter.

The Trustees are also considering the recommendation of the Park Commission, made this week, that the city purchase two pieces of ground, one on the east and the other on the west side of the city, to be used as public parks. The board is unanimously in favor of this plan, and an election to vote bonds for those needed improvements will be called soon. The proposed west side park is bounded by Fourth and Fifth streets, Central avenue and Brand boulevard, and will cost the city $40,000; while the east side block, bounded by Belmont, Cedar, Third and Fourth streets, will cost about $28,250. The proposed purchase of Verdugo Park for $80,000 has been turned down by the commission.

Steps are being taken to widen Broadway from Glendale avenue to Everett street. A deed to thirteen feet on the north side of this street has been handed to the Trustees by J. F. McIntyre, and it is believed that the widening process will be begun at once.

The Nichols property at the corner of Pacific avenue and Riverdale drive has been purchased by Mrs. J. A. Johnson of Los Angeles, the price being reported at $4500. The holding consists of a dwelling and three lots.

N. C. Kelley has sold a house and lot at No. 1124 Melrose avenue, corner of Stocker street, to F. E. Bassett of Oshkosh, Wis., the price being reported at $5000. Bassett has just arrived in the West to establish the Pacific Coast headquarters of the Paine Manufacturing Company of Oshkosh in Los Angeles.

Mrs. R. G. McKeague has sold a double corner at Randolph and Louise streets to T. Barnett of Los Angeles, the price given at $4000. Barnett has also purchased a residence on Louise street, which he will occupy as a home site.

Wyland Brown, a newcomer from Topeka, Kan., has purchased a home at No. 247 Gardena avenue, for $3000. Brown and his family have taken possession of the place.

Work on the widening of Brand boulevard, which has been contemplated for the past two years, will be started at once, the Trustees stated this week.

Beautiful Angeles Mesa—
The Building Site Supernal

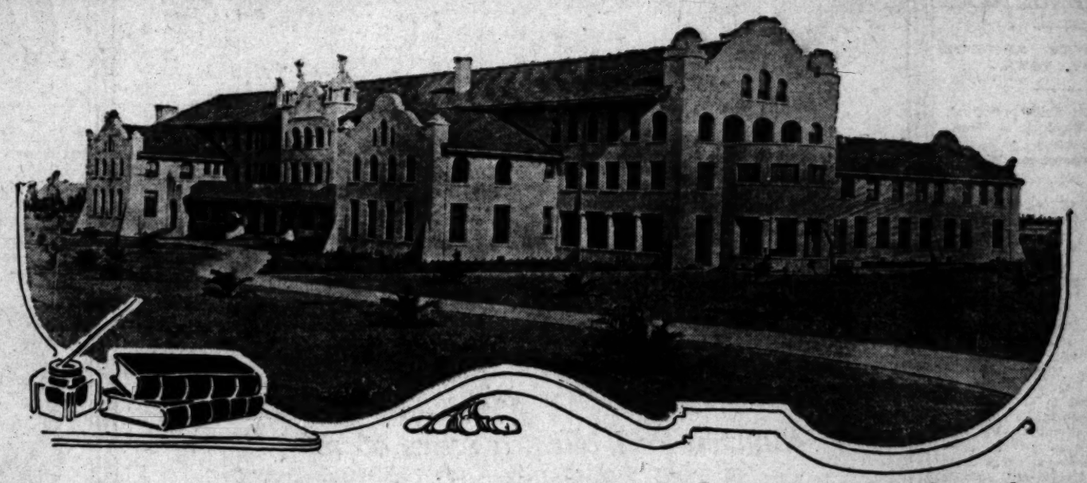
We who are so fortunate as to live and have our being in California [and that means Los Angeles] have a right to demand something more than beautiful climate.

Our homes should be, where possible, where the view is ever-changing and ever-beautiful—we should take full advantage of the high ground, and live above the fog, dust and noise of the future great city if we can.

We don't need to go away up into an inaccessible mountain district, but choose a site that combines high elevation, view, good neighbors, good transportation, schools, stores, churches, and all the other things that go to make up the comforts of life—as well as the luxuries, of which scenic beauties easily heads the long list.

A million dollars has been invested in Angeles Mesa. It lies in the trend of the city's best growth. Angeles Mesa property should show a handsome gain in a few years. It can only go in one direction—up.



The splendid building for St. Mary's Academy occupies a commanding situation at Angeles Mesa, the great terminal building for the street railway company nearing completion, a $800,000 structure. New Manual Arts High School, Exposition Park, and others in prospect, suggest educational advantages of a high order.

Buy a lot out here at the exceptionally low prices. They are now being offered—$650, for inside lots on easy terms (a raw acreage price.)

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

INQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Mineral Paints.

ST. HELENA (Cal.) June 11.—Q.: I am becoming interested in pigments and "mineral paints," and desiring information on the subject without consulting authorities in libraries, etc., I would be glad to have some practical, published facts on the following questions: (1) Is the whitish sample pure enough for use as baryte paint? (2) Can yellow ochre and red ochre be made from this sample? (3) Please describe lithophane as I am unable to obtain a satisfactory explanation from dictionaries, etc. (4) What is orange mineral? (5) In what proportions should sample (2) be used, mixed with oil, yellow or red or otherwise? J. C. M.

A.: (1) There is but a very small per cent. of baryte—as mined—that can be used in the paint industry without extracting the deleterious admixtures of oxides, together with bleaching and floating. "The Paint Manufacturers' Association of the United States" is seeking to enforce a "pure paint law" in our good old country, and legislation, on a favorable scale, to this end, has been enacted in several States. "For the painting of general exterior woodwork mixtures of the white leads and zinc oxides with crystalline pigments, such as barytes, asbestine, silica, and calcium carbonate, wherein the inert pigments do not exceed 15 per cent. by weight of the total mixture" is permissible; for the reason that "this committee considers that these materials have no especial value as pigments when used alone, but that their intelligent use within certain limits is necessary for the proinduction of a satisfactory mixed paint.

Some of the "canned" paint sold in the open markets of California consists of approximate traces of coloring matter, lime carbonate, barytes and silica, and some 35 per cent. content of the can is made up of this pigment (?) and the oil is an inferior synthetic product with synthetic turpentine added as a "thinner." The white sample represents baryte of commercial quality if purified as stated. Question No. 2 is answered in the affirmative. (3) Lithophane "is an intimate mixture by chemical precipitation of zinc sulphide and barium sulphate" (baryte and barium sulphate being synonymous terms, Ed. note.) "It is now generally manufactured from spelter or zinc oxide, but may also be made from scrap zinc, zinc skimmings, etc." (4) Just what you mean by "orange mineral" is not clear, but the subject before us being paints, we believe that you refer to the commercial lead pigment of that name. The mineral Carnotite (the canary-colored double vanadate of uranium and potassium) is often referred to as "orange mineral," and again we have by adding to a lead salt (in solution) chromate of potash whereby a yellow precipitate of chromate of lead is formed, insoluble in weak acids or in ammonium chloride solution. This precipitate is the pigment "chrome yellow." "Boiled with lime and water, a portion of the chromic radical is removed as soluble chromate of calcium, and an oxychromate of lead, of a bright or orange color (orange chrome) is produced." From the pigment (cadmium sulphide) cadmium yellow one other "orange mineral" is obtainable for use as a pigment. Replying to question (5:) that depends on the fact of treatment, calcining, etc.; if the red color is desired, such as is used on freight cars, "seven pounds of paint mixed with one gallon of boiled linseed will make a mixture sufficient for one coat over an area of 500 square feet." Naturally the mixture of paint with oil, dryers, turpentine, etc., is governed by the surface to be painted, whether "inside or outside," as a thick or thin coating, as stain, and so forth.

Calciferous.

LOS ANGELES, June 11.—Q.: We would like to know if the samples herewith submitted contain potash or any salts valuable for agricultural or other purposes. Any information will be greatly appreciated. Samples are marked Nos. 1 and 2, and were handed to me by a prospector in Death Valley. L. C. M.

A.: No. 1, yellowishgray granular matter, is made up of carbonate of lime, aluminum silicate, iron oxides, trace of boron, traces of soda, and potash sparingly present. No. 2 is a graywhite calcite (impure limestone or cement rock) with manganese, iron oxides, soda present. Tested for potash with negative results. The sample stands for a fertilizer, but of mighty lean grade.

Carbonates.

RIVERSIDE, June 11.—Q.: I am mailing you under separate cover a sample of rock or ore from a deposit in Riverside county. The deposit is reported to be large and not far from transportation. Is the ore of any commercial value, and if so, what is the approximate value? E. E. S.

A.: The sample is a white magnesium-lime carbonate, and possesses a very low value as a base for carbonic acid, etc.

Niter Present.

KEELER, June 11.—Q.: In this red tobacco sack, I send you for confirmatory test, some samples of mineral. What do you make out of them? L. B. R.

A.: The samples are from a very narrow seam and are high-grade niter, (native saltpetre.) If you run into a body of this material you will do well, but you will hardly strike it so rich. The sample of acircular crystals carries potash 46.64, with nitric acid 53.36, percentages respectively, and it "is readily soluble in water, producing great cold."

Ilmenite.

TEMPE (Ariz.) June 11.—Q.: This is a sample of rock from a locality seven miles from Tempe, and I think it must be wolframite. If it is wolframite about what per cent. tungsten does it carry? D. M. D.

A.: The sample does not carry a trace of tungstic acid. Ilmenite is a variety of titanic iron ore, and often occurs massive; the sample, however, is in opaque crystals of an iron-black color. Luster submetallic, and slightly magnetic. Of black streak; conchoidal fracture; hardness 6, and in sp. gr., 4.89. Composition iron titanate.

Impure Fuller's Earth.

SANTA BARBARA, June 11.—Q.: Samples enclosed are surface rock, and I would like to know if potash is present? D. W. H.

A.: The samples are impure diatomaceous earth, and in part Fuller's earth. Potash is present in traces only. A doubtful substance to expect big percentage of potash from.

Ferric and Ferrous Iron.

NATIONAL (Nev.) June 12.—Q.: Just a local thumb specimen from an iron oxide lead. Can you inform me what the peculiar yellow coloring matter is? Vanadium? M. E.

A.: There is not a trace of vanadium present in the sample.

Poor Iron Ore.

LOS ANGELES, June 12.—Q.: Please find herein a sample of iron ore. Will you please give me your opinion as to its value? Does it contain other metals? J. K. B.

A.: The sample is in part granitic rock, with iron and manganese present. In the mass we find microscopical magnetite crystals, here and there, together with some microscopical antimony sulphide crystals (stibnite.) You are a prospector, and we hope that you will strike better stuff than the sample you submit.

Calcite.

LOS ANGELES, June 14.—Q.: I have been asked to hand you this rock and see if it is cement rock or lime rock, and if of any value for same? The rock comes from the mountains north of San Bernardino. T. L. S.

A.: properly blended you can make cement from almost any rock. The specimen is a mixed calcite with magnesium present, and is approximately eighty per cent. lime carbonate. For A-No. 1 grade lime or cement the sample will not pass muster.

Chiefly Iron Oxides.

SAN DIEGO, June 14.—Q.: I am sending you seven samples of rock and mineral, all samples from the Palm Springs district, with, 5, 6, and 7, from a point thirty-five miles west from Palm Springs. The three last named ores were sent to me by a prospector with whom I am interested, and I am assured that No. 5 is from a ledge over three feet thick. Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4 come from two claims right in the Palm Springs district. T. J.

A.: Sample No. 1 is a variety of high-grade hematite, and specifically known as "micaceous iron-ore." No. 2 is a mixture of pyrite (iron disulphide:) chalcopyrite (iron and copper sulphide,) and known to the boys in the hills as "yellow copper ore." Sample No. 3 is a good grade of potash-feldspar (orthoclase.) No. 4 is "smoky quartz." No. 5 is very high-grade copper ore, Melactonite of mineralogy, known also as "black copper ore" and it is well to describe this ore as it is frequently confused with ores of manganese. Melaconite is, in fact, an earthy, black copper oxide, and probably a sort of pseudomorph after erubescite (red copper ore) and chalcopyrite. "It often occurs in pseudomorphous cubic forms," also pulverent and earthy. Your sample is massive, and of a dark steel-gray color. Luster submetallic. Opaque. Of shining streak; it is friable and soils the fingers on the order of graphite or manganese oxides. The specific gravity of the sample is 5.3. Manganese and iron are present with water, and the sample carries approximately 75 per cent. copper. In the inner blowpipe flame the sample yields a globule of metallic copper. No. 6 is halotrichite (native iron-alum,) and but little sought for by the alum makers. No. 7 is indeed an odd sample; it is Beekite, and not actually a mineral. It is "a particular form of chalcedony often deposited on fossils, either sponges, corals or shells—generally spiral univalves. It occurs in new red conglomerate in rounded masses, resembling the pebbles with which they are associated, and similar to them both in form and dimensions. The Beekites as these rounded masses are called, vary in diameter from half an inch to a foot, but they rarely exceed from three to six inches in diameter. Their surfaces are composed of chalcedony, generally arranged in tubercles varying in size from a pin's head to a pea, each of which is not unfrequently surrounded by one or more rings and occasionally the same ring invests two or even more tubercles. When broken the interior is most commonly found to be calcareous and in a decomposing state. Occasionally the nucleus has entirely decomposed; in which case only a few grains of matter remain within the crust, and the Beekite will float in water."

Gypsum.

LOS ANGELES, June 14.—Q.: I am unable to tell what kind of mineral this sample is. It was found by me near Elizabeth Lake, and it may be calcite or gypsum. I would like to know which? May I ask you to tell me how you would tell the difference between calcite, and gypsum, when taken from the ground in the shape of rocks, if you were prospecting and did not know anything about chemistry or mineralogy? P. O. L.

A.: If the writer were in the class stated by you he would surely think, especially so if the limestone or gypsum were in massive forms with crystals hidden to the naked eye. At all events we would have some matches with us. Let us see about this! Your question will not permit us to bring chemistry or mineralogy to our aid. We all know that gypsum when burnt makes plaster of Paris, and that such plaster forms a paste mixed with water that hardens to a rock-like mass in a very short time. We would place a chunk of the mineral into a camp fire of moderate red-heat, and after it had split up into pieces and then into a white powder, we would carefully select the white powder (free from ashes,) mix it with water and if it formed a paste with water that would quickly harden, we would call the original mineral gypsum, and let it go at that.

Amianthus.

MOJAVE, June 15.—Q.: Enclosed please find some rock with fine white skeins of material that looks like asbestos. The sample comes from a pockety claim that was once taken up for oil. Will you please tell me something about the sample? Has it a commercial value if it can be found in quantity? G. W. S.

A.: If you can locate a body of material represented by the sample you will then have no difficulty in selling the output in almost any tonnage at a fancy price and big mining profit. Amianthus is "the name given to the whiter and more delicate varieties of asbestos, which possesses a satin-like luster, owing to the greater separation of the fibers of which they are composed." This variety of asbestos usually occurs in serpentine, and is in fact, for all practical purposes, equal to the Chrysotile (serpentine asbestos) of Canada.

Strontianocalcite.

GILA BEND (Ariz.) June 15.—Q.: I send you by express today two and one-half pounds of ore. I think it is celestite or strontium. If the ore has any commercial value let me know. There is a very large deposit of the ore about eighteen miles from the Gila River. L. F.

A.: No ordinary qualitative analysis will give practical results on the sample. It is an impure strontianocalcite. In the mass we find barium present, with lime sulphate, iron, alumina and strontium. A bare trace of copper is present. There is no market for such a quartzitic substance with the elements stated; indeed, if comparisons could be made between refractory ores and refractory minerals, the sample referred to would head the list on the mineral side.

Pyrophyllite.

LOS ANGELES, June 15.—Q.: I will thank you very much if you will tell me what this mineral is? It is the most peculiar thing that I ever saw. I was prospecting near Silver Lake in May and came across the rock or whatever it is in a ledge of six inches width. The strange part about this rock is that I put a piece of it in a stove on top of some live coals, and it swelled up. What is it? C. H. H.

A.: The sample is a representative of our old friend, Phrophyllite. Foliated like talc in fibrous radiated masses, and small elongated prisms. Pale green in color; transparent and flexible in thin laminae. Of pearly luster and sectile. Hardness 1. Sp. gr., 2.9. Composition hydrous silicate of alumina. Partly soluble in sulphuric acid. Infusible before the blowpipe, "but exfoliates into white leaves, and increases to about twenty times its original size." The mineral is an interesting one, and is sought after as cabinet specimens.

Iron Peroxide.

LOS ANGELES, June 15.—Q.: Sample from a lead seven miles from Yuma, Ariz. Is it red copper or is the red matter iron? M. S. T.

Obliging Judge and Jury.

[Law Notes:] A New York justice got a jolt the other day, and he is telling the story of it yet. He said that late one afternoon he gave a case to a jury and that it was 4:30 o'clock the following morning before the jury agreed upon a verdict.

"I waited for a verdict," said the justice, "and after it was returned I told the jurors that as it was possible that most of them were married men, if they desired I would give to each a certificate that he had been detained until 4:30 o'clock in the morning on jury service.

"The jurors consulted together for a few minutes," continued the justice, and appreciate the kindness of your offer and desire to say that if Your Honor needs a certificate to the effect that you were detained until 4:30 o'clock in the morning waiting for our verdict, we will gladly so certify."

The justice hastily declined this kind offer with thanks and just as hastily adjourned court.

SANTA MONICA RACE RECORDS THROWN OUT.

Tsar-Like.

PROMINENT AUTO MEN ARE OUTLAWED; NO TRIAL.

E. G. Kuster, the Local A.A.A. Representative; R. R. Hillman and A. M. Young, the Father of the Santa Monica Road Race, Are Banished from Automobile Racing—Insurrection Is Threatened.

SENTENCE of banishment from automobile racing has been passed upon the following named by the contest board of the American Automobile Association, located in New York:

Edward G. Kuster, Los Angeles representative of the A.A.A.

R. P. Hillman, former representative and referee of the Santa Monica road race.

A. M. Young, promoter of the Santa Monica road race.

By a ukase just issued by the contest board, they have been made automobile 'outlaws'"—forbidden to participate in any automobile race until January 1, 1913.

Under the rules of the association any race in which they participate is tainted. Any car that takes part in such a race becomes outlaw.

It is the poison label that has been fastened upon them.

The offense for which punishment has been meted out consists of having allowed certain cars to participate in the Santa Monica road races in alleged violation of a technical rule of the association.

In addition to this order, the contest board has ordered the wonderful world's records made at the Santa Monica road races to be thrown out and disallowed for the technical reasons that the "ticker tape" from the timing apparatus was not sent to the headquarters in New York.

REBELLION BREWING.

On account of the prominence of those concerned, the order of banishment has made a great uproar in local automobile circles.

A meeting is to be held early next week to discuss the advisability of starting an insurrection against the A.A.A.

Should this rebellion develop along the lines planned by its promoters, automobile racing on the Pacific Coast will be entirely divorced from the licensed racing supervised by the A. A. A.

Auto racing on this Coast would be frankly an "outlaw" affair carried on under the supervision of some new organization to be formed.

It is proposed to constitute the Automobile Club of Southern California as the central governing body licensing auto races in this vicinity.

Advocates of an insurrection are influenced, not only by what they feel to be an unjust ruling in this particular case, but also by the general idea that automobile racing cannot be conducted out here with any satisfaction under the ruling of a contest board 3000 miles away.

The campaign cry is, "Let us run our own races."

The trouble and bitterness in this case which has resulted in a humiliating experience for three men prominent in the automobile world would have been avoided, it is contended, had the governing board been closer at hand.

CAUSE OF WAR.

The cause of the war has been well summed up in the letter in which Mr. Kuster witheringly reviews the case and presents his resignation to the contest board.

Briefly summarized, the important points at issue between the "outlaws" and the contest board are as follows:

The issuance of a driver's license to Bert Dingley.

The participation of the Regal and Warren-Detroit in the Santa Monica road race.

There was also a little unpleasantness in connection with Starter Fred Wagner. The contest board seemed to feel that he was exercising an undue influence on the local representatives of the A.A.A. But this last was only an incident.

Taking up the charges of the contest board one at a time:

On the eve of the Santa Monica road race, William Schmifp wired Mr. Kuster not to allow Bert Dingley to start in the race "until he furnishes a report of the benefit meet at Ascot Park, January 14."

This was the benfit for Harris Hanshue and Illingsworth.

A TART COME-BACK.

To this charge Mr. Kuster made a tart report to the contest board. He said that Bert Dingley had nothing to do with handling the money for that benefit and had participated merely as a clerk of the course. Under the circumstances he did not feel that it was right for him to hold Dingley up at the eve of this important race to get a trivial formal report.

"I transmitted Mr. Schmifp's message to Mr. Dingley," writes Mr. Kuster, "and I am frank to say that I apologized to him for doing so."

And he adds that the rules of the association require no such report, only the referee and the representative of the A.A.A. being required to present reports.

"I think," writes Kuster in his letter, "that I have a real ground for complaining against a direction from the board or its chairman which is clearly not supported by the letter or spirit of any of your published rules."

In the cases of the Warren-Detroit and Regal, the contest board objected by telegraph to their participation in the Santa Monica road race on the ground that they were "post entries."

It is explained by Kuster in his letter that both the Warren-Detroit and Regal were entered regularly and in due time, but in transmitting the list of entries to New York the two names were omitted through a clerical error.

The real cause of the war, however, may be said to have been the participation of the Studebaker cars in the race contrary to the instructions of the contest board.

HILLMAN'S SHARP RETORT.

Just before the race, a telegram was received from the Contest Board objecting to the entries of the E.M.F. and Flanders cars on the ground that they were suspected of having participated in an outlaw meet in Northern California and on the further ground that they were not eligible in the point of piston displacement.

Both these matters were answered in a sharp letter from Mr. Hillman to the Contest Board.

"Your telegram of April 27," he wrote, "refers to competition of Flanders cars in unsanctioned events, a fact which was disproved to the satisfaction of your representative who also obtained, under your express instruction, affidavits covering that question. The same telegram states that the Flanders cars were not eligible because piston displacement was only 156 inches. This was erroneous as the actual piston displacement, ascertained by measurement before the race was 226 cubic inches."

In his letter Mr. Hillman calls the board to task for an apparent inconsistency as follows:

"In your night letter of the first you state that the board was not aware that the Flanders and Midland company had built special cars and then without explanation you go on to say that Flanders cars were not eligible and 'must be barred because piston displacement.' This ruling was utterly incomprehensible to Mr. Kuster and myself, particularly in view of the fact that in the same wire you say that Midland entry is eligible.

"In your wire of the third to Mr. Young you state that 'two Flanders already barred on account wrongful entry.' Here you apparently abandon the position that the cars were barred simply because of piston displacement and virtually charge the Studebaker entrant with fraud."

Mr. Hillman goes on to point out that the question of fraud had been investigated locally by the representative of the A. A. A. in Los Angeles and found to be without foundation.

"I felt," he adds, "that my discretion would be unduly hampered unless I allowed the cars to start."

KUSTER'S RESIGNATION.

In Mr. Kuster's letter he points out that the Contest Board permitted the Midland to start "though it squeezed into a lower division that its regular motor would have entitled it to. The Midland people chose to take their chances with a smaller engine in a comparatively heavy car.' The Studebakers took an exactly opposite course, straining a light car with a heavier and more powerful engine."

Mr. Kuster suggested in his letter that, in future, a clear rule should be adopted giving to such experimental cars the designation "Special Flanders," "Special E.M.F.," etc.

Mr. Kuster closed his letter by offering his resignation if the Contest Board intended to persist in its attitude of considering the local representative of the A.A.A. as a mere mechanical instrument for transmitting its orders delivered at a range of 3000 miles.

The resignation was accepted, but his suggestions were carried out. The ukase accepting his resignation contains the order that in future experimental cars shall bear the name "Special."

YOUNG'S STATEMENT.

In an interview for The Times last night, A. M. Young stated his position:

"I have been associated in the management of three Santa Monica road races," he said. "I am now outlawed until January 1, 1913. To tell you the truth, I don't know what for. It is simply amazing. We have been convicted and sentenced without a hearing.

"The charges that the Studebaker cars were disqualified by reason of having taken part in outlaw races were completely disproved. In fact, the bulletin of the Contest Board makes no mention of this charge. So it must have been abandoned. Its order banishing us from the racing game expressly states that the Studebaker cars were improperly entered on account of the piston displacement. We had the pistons measured before they started in the race and their displacement was absolutely all right.

"Yet these people, 3000 miles away, contemptuously bursh aside our measurements and decide arbitrarily that the pistons were wrong.

"This irritating meddling on the part of the Contest Board is all wrong and not to be tolerated any further. The A.A.A. has always given the Pacific Coast the worst of it. The Contest Board is unjust, arbitrary and outrageously tyrannical.

"Instead of leaving the questions that come up to the men on the ground who can see what is going on under their own eyes, the Contest Board sends a shower of meddlesome telegrams—and you can be sure they are all sent collect—ordering us to do this and that.

"The time has come for the Pacific Coast to manage its own automobile affairs. I think that the Southern California Automobile Club should take the lead in giving sanctions for local races.

"We pay large sums of money merely for inexpert supervision of a lot of men in New York who meddle in our affairs and give us permission to conduct a race in a way that we don't want to.

"The time is right here and now when we should break off such absurd relations and set up housekeeping for ourselves."

Mr. Young says that in the case of

Disciplined by the A.A.A.

Their case may lead to a breaking off of automobile relations between the East and the West.

CONTEST BOARD'S UKASE TO HILLMAN, YOUNG, KUSTER.

THE participation of the two Flanders chassis, equipped with special (modified E-M-F) motors, having a bore of four (4) inches, a stroke of four and a half (4½) inches, and a total piston displacement of 226 cubic inches, in Event IV of the Santa Monica Road Race for Class "C" Non-stock cars of 161 to 230 cubic inches, on May 4th, 1912, as "Flanders," and in the Speedway events at the Los Angeles Motordome on May 5th, 1912, as "E-M-F", contrary to the ruling telegraphed by the Chairman of the Contest Board to Mr. E. G. Kuster, the board's representative in attendance at these two contests; to the official referee of the road race, Mr. R. P. Hillman of Los Angeles, and to the promoter of the two events, Mr. A. M. Young, of Los Angeles, was considered and it was unanimously decided to accept the resignation of Mr. Kuster as the official representative of the Contest Board for Southern California, to declare Mr. Hillman ineligible for appointment to any official position in connection with sanctioned contests until January 1, 1913, and to disbar the promoter, Mr. A. M. Young, for a similar period.

In view of the extenuating circumstances, due apparently to a conflict in authority in the interpretation of the contest rules, it was decided to approve the awards as made by the referees in these two contests, but that in future events sanctioned by the Contest Board the nomenclature of special cars must be clearly defined.

The time made by various cars in both the Santa Monica Road Race and the Motordrome events were not accepted and allowed as official records for the reason that the board had not yet been able to secure possession of the original printed ticker tape of the timing apparatus used to record the times in these two events.

M'LOUGHLIN AND BUNDY WIN DOUBLES FINALS.

Fottrell and Johnston, San Francisco Youngsters, Make Brilliant Showing in Great Tennis Battle, Taking Two Out of Five Sets from the Veterans—Large Crowd Thrilled by Sensational Playing.

BY EDMUND W. PUGH.

TOM BUNDY and Maurice McLoughlin yesterday again won the tennis doubles championship of the Pacific Coast, in the final round of the tourney at the Los Angeles Country Club. But Johnston and Fottrell of San Francisco, the losers, put up a brilliant game and it was not until five gruelling sets had been played that the champions were able to dispose of the youngsters. The score of the match was 6-4, 4-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

The playing was as thrilling as any that had been dished up during the tourney and Johnston and Fottrell played a much better game than was expected. These youngsters have a wonderful future in tennis. "Willie" Johnston was the star of the match. He even did better work than Maurice McLoughlin, whose fame has spread to other lands.

Fottrell did not play as well as he did in the match with Hardy and Gardner the day before, but Johnston played better and consequently the efficiency of the team was not decreased. In fact, the boys put up the best game they had ever played.

They took two of the first three sets from the champions and reached as high as 4-4 in the fourth set. It looked as if they were going to dispose of McLoughlin and Bundy at more than one stage of the match and it was only the steadiness of the veterans that pulled them through.

CHAMPS OFF COLOR.

Bundy and McLoughlin did not show the form they had last year. They undoubtedly will round into top-notch shape before August 1, when they are to represent the Pacific Coast in the preliminaries of the national tourney, but it is certain that they were not at their best in the tourney that ended yesterday. It is not likely that they have gone back; they simply have not as yet got into their stride.

The grand stand was crowded when the stars appeared on the courts, at 3 o'clock. Fottrell and Johnston were somewhat nervous and in the first set Bundy and McLoughlin ran up a score of 5-1 before the boys fairly settled down. But when they got going the veterans had a hard time in doing anything with them.

JOHNSTON THE STAR.

Johnston and Fottrell had the crowd with them on account of the splendid fight they put up. Johnston's driving and smashing over the net were the features of the match. Even McLoughlin could show nothing that equalled the strokes of the little redheaded racqueter. Last year Fottrell was the star of the team, but this season Johnston is playing the better game.

After Bundy and McLoughlin had taken the first set, 6-4, the youngsters began to recover from their nervousness and did what seemed incredible—they took the next two sets from Bundy and McLoughlin, 6-4, 6-4.

In the middle of the second set Bundy and McLoughlin went into a slump. Both of them lost games on their own serves. In the last game of the set, Johnston made all the necessary points with smashes over the net that Bundy and McLoughlin were unable to handle. Throughout the matches these deadly smashes worked havoc with the champions' defence.

Thrilling rallies kept the spectators in a state of intense excitement. It was Johnston's work that defeated

YANKEES WIN AT STOCKHOLM.

Gerhardt of San Francisco Shines in Short Sprint.

Edmundson of Seattle Wins Long-Meter Heat.

(By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.)

STOCKHOLM, July 6.—To the great West went the honor of carrying the American colors home in the first victory won for the United States in the Olymic games.

In the third heat of the 100 meters Ira Courtney of the Seattle Athletic Club led the field and finished in 11s., flat. Again in the twelfth preliminary heat, the first home was a Western lad, P. C. Gerhardt of the Olympic Athletic Club, San Francisco. He did the century in 11 1-10s., snatching first honors from Frank Lukeman of Quebec, whom the Canadians have picked to whip the old country and Anderson and Jacobs in the final.

These victories paved the way for the wild scene of enthusiasm which followed when, in the sixteenth heat, Donald F. Lippincott of the University of Pennsylvania lowered the Olympic record by one-fifth of a second, his finishing time being 10 2-5s.

The first two heats in the century preliminaries were won by Swedes, Luther and Moller and this put the big crowd of over 60,000, mostly, of course, compatriots of Prince Gustavus Adolphus, in the best of humor.

The Prince made an excellent speech after the athletes had paraded, opening the games and His Royal Highness led the cheering as the American team marched past, looking the very flower of the flock. All the royal family from the King down occupied seats in the stadium.

AMERICANS IN FRONT.

In perfect weather and before an immense throng, the fifth revival of the games of the ancient Greeks began today with sweeping American victories. There were several surprises, but for the most part they were pleasant ones to the lads from the United States. Eight Americans qualified for the two events of the day, through the finals of which our team hopes to help bring back victory to the home land. And the West won most of the honors.

In the fourth heat of the 800 metres, Clarence S. Edmundson of the Seattle Athletic Club won all the way from the five contestants, finishing in 1m. 56 5-10s. In the seventh heat for this event the Englishman, Soutter, outdistanced Mel Sheppard of the Irish-American Athletic Club, showing a wonderful burst of speed in the last 200 and crossing the tape six yards ahead of the combined eastern athletes.

Eight sprinters qualified for the semi-finals of the 100 metres run. They were as follows: Ira Courtney of Seattle, and Gerhardt of San Francisco; Alvah P. Meyer of the Irish-American Athletic Club, who was not regarded as promising enough to take abroad and was sent at the expense of his club; Ralph C. Craig of the Detroit Y.M.C.A.; Howard P. Drew, the negro boy from the Springfield (Mass.) High School; Lippincott of the University of Pennsylvania; F. V.

CHINESE AVIATOR IS TO SELL THE MOON.

Great Wall of China Being Torn Down to Give Place to 1500-Mile Boulevard—Chief Engineer Is Stanford Graduate—Tom Gun Will Boost Automobile Game in New Republic After Visit to Moon Factory.

BY AL. G. WADDELL.

THE great wall of China, built by the last Emperor of the Tsin Dynasty, 214 B.C., as a protection against the Tartars, is being torn down and on its foundation it is proposed to construct a wide automobile boulevard, 1500 miles in length, which will connect the great chain of cities of Northern China.

This information was given out by Capt. Tom Gun, the well-known Chinese aviator, who will return to the new born republic in a short time to assume the duties of instructing the aviation corps of the army of the Chinese republic and incidentally to handle the agency for the Moon Motor Car Company, for the whole of China.

The great wall was fifteen years in the building. Every third man in the Empire was employed in its construction and over 500,000 perished from starvation. The foundation is of granite and the wall of brick. It is from twenty to thirty feet high and wide enough for eight horses to run abreast on the top.

Peter Soo Hoo, a young Chinese who took his degree at Stanford in 1910, and "posted" at the University of Illinois for a year, is the engineer in charge of the work of clearing away of the great wall and building the boulevard, for the Chinese government. Soo Hoo is a personal friend of Capt. Tom Gun, and the two progressive Chinamen correspond regularly. Therefore, it is reasonable to assume that the aviator's information has come direct from "headquarters."

While wrapt up in the science of aviation, young Gun is also a great automobile enthusiast and predicts great things for the motor car industry in China, within the next few years. He stated last week that in all the principal cities of China work is being done on the streets.

In Canton, practically all the streets are being widened. This highway work is being superintended by American born Chinese engineers, or those who have received their educations in this country.

At present there are no speed laws in China, but Tom Gun believes that as automobiles are becoming so numerous all over that country, action will have to be taken on that subject within a very short time.

In Tien Tsin and Pekin the automobile is becoming popular with the wealthy classes. There are over 2000 machines in Shanghai and in Canton, way to the South, they have a taxicab service at the rate of $10 an hour.

One place where the Chinese "fall down," is in the matter of driving the cars, and it will be the object of the aviator automobile man to instruct in driving. There are many French chauffeurs in that country, driving for Chinese motor-car owners and Tom will endeavor to prove the simplicity of the modern automobile and interest the owners in the sport.

It is also the intention of Capt. Gun to promote automobile races, as he believes that form of sport will prove exceedingly popular with the average Chinaman.

Many of the cities of the republic have adopted the motor truck for service in various lines. Motor garbage wagons, motor stage lines and delivery wagons are to be found in all the large cities.

Gun, with Lee, left for San Francisco after the Wolgast-Rivers fight last Thursday. They will remain there for two weeks looking after certain matters of business in connection with Tom's aviation interests and then will go on to the Moon factory in St. Louis, where they spend a month studying the construction of the Moon car in the making.

For the past two weeks the pair have been making their headquarters at the local Moon agency on South Olive street, where they have been receiving instructions from Lynn C. Buxton, Moon distributor for Southern California and Arizona.

Capt. Tom Gun,

Commanding officer of the aviation corps of the army of the Chinese republic, who will return to his native country next month with the agency for the Moon motor car.

Of course, the automobile will be a side issue with the captain, as his commission in the army of the republic will take up much of his time, but he has two brothers who are also mechanically inclined, and three cousins who, while not in the same class with the Moon agent, are of the progressive type and will be a great assistance to Tom in his business operations.

W. S. Lee, one of Tom's fraternity brothers, who has another year at Stanford, where he is studying engineering, will return to China as soon as he wins his diploma, to associate himself with the motor car industry there, under Tom Gun.

When he first entered college, young Lee intended to study engineering, with the object of returning to China and specializing in construction work, such as bridge-building and the construction of irrigation plants; but interest in the automobile game put other ideas into his head and now he is preparing to be an expert automobile engineer.

In the old days of the Chinese Empire, no one was allowed to raise horses. If anyone attempted such a thing, it was thought that they were plotting against the government and only the very wealthy could have horses which, according to Lee, were about as big as a Catalina goat. That is not the case now, but there is little chance for the horse, as the Chinese are adopting the more modern means of transportation.

In this country, the automobile had to fight the horse, but in China the automobile goes in on the ground floor. The sedan chair, China's primitive means of transportation, will also be greatly menaced by the automobile.

Show Up Defects.

AMATEURS AID MAKERS SAYS PREMIER DRIVER.

THE PHENOMENAL success of the automobile industry, which today stands ninth in importance in the manufacturing world, has been made possible by the unselfish and liberal assistance of the motoring public. Manufacturers can design and build the automobile, but it required the amateur owner to find its defects, as an expert will unconsciously protect the weaknesses of his machine.

It is likewise that credit should go to the amateur automobile driver to great transcontinental automobile substantiate the possibilities of a highway, as was demonstrated by the ten automobile owners who, with their families and friends, drove their Premier cars from Atlantic City to Venice, Cal., without mishap or hardship.

Of the forty passengers, twenty-seven were men, one over 73 years of age; ten women and three children. This one trip by amateur drivers gives us more real information than all the past efforts of experts driving special cars for factory advertising purposes, and proves conclusively that a transcontinental highway is in existence today and can be enjoyed by thousands who prefer to "see America first."

Fortunately one of the Premier owners on this trip was an expert photographer, and for his amusement, carried a moving picture machine. The pictures of this trip have been shown before a number of the automobile clubs in the East and are doing good work. Detailed information as to the route, hotels, equipment, expense, etc., on this trip has been published by John Guy Monthan, of Indianapolis, who, in part, advises the essential necessities: First, a reliable car; second, a slow pace and constant watching the road for obstructions; third, a cheerful disposition.

Some of the requirements for a reliable car are given as follows: At least forty horse-power motor to insure ample power to negotiate without strain the mountain grades. Strong, reinforced frame, safe to carry 1600 pounds additional weight. At least ten-inch road clearance to enable the car to safely pass over road obstructions. Over-sized tires minimize the tire trouble. Wheels with heavy spokes, protected by a bolt at each spoke, as the side thrust on wheels is tremendous.

Not less than 126 to 140-inch wheelbase to insure easy riding and yet enable the driver to negotiate the short turns. Steering mechanism should have special consideration to insure easy and certain control, should be ball-bearing to prevent fatigue to the driver as well as avoid easily chuck holes or other obstructions.

Quick acting, powerful equalizing breaks on rear wheels with not less than 500 square inches wearing surface, breaking surface should be properly lined to prevent the continuous adjusting where metal to metal only is used.

Strong, reinforced rear axle housing without truss rods, which would be liable to catch on road obstructions.

The ocean-to-ocean trip can be made in twenty to twenty-five days. The conditions are not bad and there is no reason why anybody should have trouble in making this trip, providing reasonable time is taken and a good car is used.

the ticker tape and time records of the time made at Santa Monica, he never heard of such a thing as shipping back the tape. The time was properly taken and the tape sealed and the records forwarded. This, he says, has been the invariable custom in all previous races.

HILLMAN'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Hillman gave out an interview along somewhat similar lines.

"The only way racing can be conducted in California under the authority of a contest board way off in New York is for the regularly appointed local representatives of the A.A.A. to be vested with absolute authority. Otherwise we should look to some absolute authority nearer home than the Contest Board in New York.

"The acceptance of the resignation of Mr. Kuster seems to indicate that the A.A.A. has no intention of giving its local representatives any such authority. So it appears that we will have to look to some change.

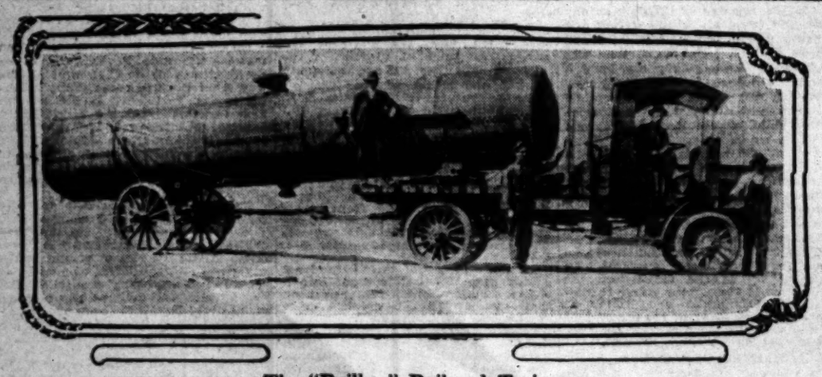
"In the particular cases at issue here, Mr. Kuster and I carefully investigated all the charges of wrongful entry and found them to be without foundation. I can't imagine why the A.A.A. should not only reverse our ruling, but should also expel us without a hearing."

KUSTER AND THE TIME.

In his letter to the Contest Board, Mr. Kuster made the following explanation of the timing at the Santa Monica road races:

"As for the records broken at this meet, I notified Mr. Halliwell, chief timer, to preserve intact the ticker tape and to prepare an affidavit covering each and every record established, both in time trials and competition. This data is not yet in my hands."

Mr. Kuster's letter was written May 23. The data has since been forwarded.



The "Railless" Railroad Train.

Three-ton Grabowsky motor truck, rigged with extension body, taking the place of a railroad flat-car and hauling an oil tank thirty feet long, five feet in diameter and weighing five tons, from Los Angeles to Puente, where it was installed as a storage tank. This feat would have required the services of ten horses, and on account of the length of the train could not have made the turns in the road, according to the engineers of the project.

The New THOMAS

Sold and Guaranteed by a Factory Branch

Purchasers of high grade cars are commencing to realize the importance of dealing direct with a factory branch. They find that the service which must necessarily follow is a decided advantage. Owners of Thomas cars appreciate what "TECHNICAL SERVICE TO THOMAS OWNERS" really means. There is no shifting of responsibility; the interests of the owners, the factory and the management of the branch are identical, securing the best possible results and keeping the car in the highest state of efficiency during its entire life. Ours is not really a ninety-day proposition.

In the establishment of this branch we have combined efficiency and simplicity, thereby assuring satisfactory service at the lowest cost. No excessive overhead expense to be charged to the customer.

ALL motor-wise are telling of the REMARKABLE EFFICIENCY of the Thomas Six —from now on THE motor car

Our Sales Report for last week showed an average of one car per day, every sale made on the merits of the car and not on account of "Special Inducements." Beware of the latter policy, which means everybody dissatisfied.

We are not jealous because other builders of high grade cars are copying our general design—we expected it. The consistent performance and low cost of upkeep which was found in the THOMAS made everybody "sit up and take notice." We were practically the first to advocate, build and perfect a long stroke motor, and having found it we kept it instead of changing design. Everybody seems to be trying to copy our spacing suspension, but it is impossible to get it exactly, as ours is covered by a patent exclusively used on Thomas cars.

USE OF TRUCK IS IMPORTANT.

PERIOD OF IDLENESS FIGURES IN ALL-AROUND UTILITY.

Railroads Have Same Problem as Do Motor Manufacturers, Declares Peerless Company Representative in Pointing Out Superiority of Modern Methods of Commercial Transporation.

From a statement made by a representative of the Peerless Motor Car Company's truck department, it is an established fact that the better made motor trucks are efficient from the standpoint of machinery and that they are capable of doing more work than horses. In his opinion the real problem in motor trucking now concerns the reformation and readjustment of conditions that have grown up around beast haulage, so that the truck may have full play in the realization of its potential efficiency. It is a matter of saving time, of keeping the truck moving so that its motion minutes will exceed that of its stopped time.

"It must not be a matter of speeding the truck up," said the Peerless truck man. "Under the most favorable conditions our normal truck speeds of from ten to fifteen miles an hour are sufficient to revolutionize our street and highway transportation. The real problem is to reduce the truck's stopped time by bringing the efficiency of the methods in loading and unloading up to the efficiency of the truck. It includes also such traffic arrangements as will permit the truck to proceed at its normal speed through the streets.

"Other transportation agencies are affected by the same conditions. Louis D. Brandeis has recently attributed one of the greatest leakages in the system of railroad management to the needless stopped time of rolling stock in the yards. Quick work at the terminals is just as valuable in the operation of the motor truck as in other transportation facilities.

"There are three sides to the motor trucking affair. There must be included the shipper, the truck operator, and the receiver, whether all three happen to be parts of a single company, or are separately managed. The more complete the co-operation, the more work the truck will do, and the greater its value will be. One firm of building supply dealers, to my knowledge, by making an investment in hoppers and other quick loading devices, has increased its truck efficiency far beyond what was necessary to make it pay for itself. But at the other end of the truck's trip it has the beast haulage conditions to contend with.

"Our greatest truck problem now concerns nott he truck itself, but the manner of its use. Trucks need never stop to rest as horses do, and idleness means nothing but loss. We need to key every feature of thet ransportation system up to the efficiency of the truck. The motor vehicle has been so badly needed forthe last decade that it will not take long to work the problem out when its importance is thoroughly understood. The wonderful things already accomplished by this means of transportation brings home the necessity of a speedy solution

The Suffering Youngster.

[Kansas City Journal:] Little Tommy Jones' mother, who lives on East Eighth street, has been drilling into his little memory the first principles of politeness. One of these is to refuse the second piece of cake whenever it is offered to him. Tommy and his mother recently were guests of a neighbor at dinner. The hostess was indulgent and fond of little Tommy and enjoyed watching his efforts to appease his appetite. Finally it was time to eat the cake. Tommy made short work of his alloted one piece and the hostess passed the cake to him the second time. Like a well-bred youngster he replied:

"No, thanks."

"You seem to be suffering from [illegible] of appetite," the hostess [illegible]

"Tain't loss of appetite," Tommy's reply. "I'm [illegible] etiquette."

IMPERIAL RACE TELLS E

BY AL G. WADD

WHAT the Imperial Valley automobile road race was an undisputable success, no one who witnessed the affair will attempt to deny, and that it will be an annual Fourth of July event is promised by the Imperial Valley Auto Race Association, the body which promoted the initial contest last Thursday.

According to Philo Jones and Peter P. Hovley, members of the association, who acted as judges of the race, the affair will be open to all comers in the future. If this be the case, the headiest and nerviest drivers in the West, if not the whole country, should be attracted to the Imperial Valley to compete for the purse offered.

No little difficulty was experienced by those in charge of affairs in arranging the details for the race, and it was stated that the reason for barring outsiders this time was that if a man had come in from the outside and carried off the honors, the valley drivers would have become discouraged and refused to enter next year.

TOUGH COURSE.

Another thing was this: The valley cars were known to be no match for such cars as the "Bear Cats" Nos. "20" and "10," Joerimann's Maxwell and some of the local Phoenix racers; but the performance of the cars in the race showed that a racer was out of place on the Imperial course and that a valley driver had as much chance to win the strenuous grind as the best of the imported boys in their imported cars.

With the single exception of the Phoenix race there is not a harder course to be found anywhere than the 206 miles of roadway through the irrigated lands and five towns of the valley. The course is not only a severe test on a car, but trying on a driver, and the boys of the valley feel confident that they can hold their own with the outsiders, regardless of the fact that the imported cars are supposed to be of greater power and speed than those owned locally.

On such a course a high-powered car will do well in spots, but, owing to the conditions to be encountered, will burn itself out before completing the 200 miles. At one place there is a stretch of sand and it is necessary for a high-geared car to be dropped back into the low to pull through, but a common stock car can get by on the intermediate.

It was in this sand that the Buick "40" made time on the Mercer on the first round, and it was the strain of pulling through this sand that "winded" several of the ten cars which started.

WINNERS VANISH.

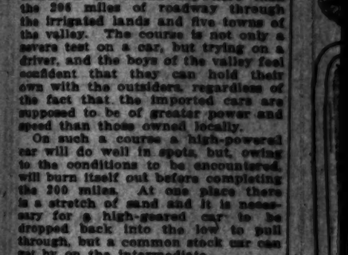
After the race the Lyons brothers, winners of first place, slipped away from their many friends and prepared to leave for this place on the evening train. It was a case of keep up the pace, but when the train started the boys were comfortably secluded in a Pullman.

Both Ed and Steve, who rode with him during the race, had planned to attend the Elks' reunion in Portland, and it took much persuasion on the part of certain interested friends to coax Ed to stay in the valley and drive in the race; but they did, and showed that they were able to drive to winning style.

Both boys have followed the automobile racing game for a number of years and, though not classed as stars of the drivers' class till Thursday, they knew a great deal about the sport that helped many times during the hours of hard driving.

Some of the experiences as related by the boys created much comment coming in on the train, where a great many interested automobile enthusiasts from the Imperial Valley towns were to be found.

The Lyons boys are well known and evidently well liked throughout the entire valley. They went into that country with their father in the early days—that is, about ten years ago. Success has met them half way and now they are well-known residents of a well-developed community.



A. M. Young inherited a small canine a short time ago and the new muzzle ordinance, which has caused such widespread joy among dog fanciers generally, was not perfectly clear to him, so he appealed to the City Council, not of Santa Monica, but of Los Angeles, for information in the following lines:

Mayer and Members of the City Council, Los Angeles, California.

Honorable Gentlemen: I have just purchased a day, perhaps I had better say a puppy—and I am writing for information concerning the new muzzle ordinance.

Would I be permitted to remove the muzzle from this puppy, in case I decided to give him a bath? This matter has not been fully determined, but I wish to be absolutely sure that I am not overstepping the privileges (?) which exist under this new ordinance. Also, is it necessary to keep him muzzled at night, in case he is placed in a room by himself, the door securely locked and the key hidden, so that no one can get in? I anticipate buying an armor of some sort to use when I replace this muzzle each morning, if this privilege is in conformity with the new ordinance. I did not notice any clause requiring the placing of a muzzle on the dog biscuit which I feed him. I assume, however, that this is not necessary, inasmuch as these biscuits will have to be dissolved in some solution and injected into the puppy's leg, which will not require the removal of the muzzle.

I have a machine, a big Thomas, and up to this time I have enjoyed the puppy a little fresh air by permitting him to stick his head over the side of the machine, in traveling. If this is contrary to the privileges (?) [illegible] under the new ordinance.

On the Road.

Whole Affair Voted Great Success and Will Become Annual July 4 Event—Outsiders May Be Allowed to Compete—Lyons Boys, Who Took First and Second, Heroes of the Hour.

With the single exception of the Phoenix race there is not a harder course to be found anywhere than the 246 miles of roadway through the irrigated lands and five towns of the valley. The course is not only a severe test on a car, but trying on a driver, and the boys of the valley feel confident that they can hold their own with the outsiders, regardless of the fact that the imported cars are supposed to be of greater power and speed than those owned locally.

The Lyons boys are well known and evidently well liked throughout the entire valley. They went into that country with their father in the early days—that is, about ten years ago. Time has met them half way and now they are well-known residents of a well-developed community.

All along the long course there were friends who cheered as the Buick "40" passed, and the team was easily the favorite at Brawley, the start and finish.

The one thing that the nervy driver regretted was the killing of a little dog. Near Imperial, on the second lap, a little girl stood on the roadside, waving to the boys in the speeding car; the dog, which must have belonged to her, crept too far out on the course and the big Buick "40" put him out of the way with one brush.

"In another place several turkeys were massacred," said Steve Lyons. "It was impossible to avoid them. They started across the road and we beat them to it. I think we killed only four, but they looked to me like real fine turkeys, and I hate to kill anything. I don't know what I would do if I even hurt a man in a race."

WEIRD RIDE.

Once on the course the car came up to a train of three grain wagons and was forced out of the road onto the soft irrigated land or, better, mud. Ed said he had visions of the racers passing them as they tried to pull out of the mud, but the car managed to clear the flooded piece and went on into Holtville.

Going through the alfalfa fields the cars ran down hundreds of butterflies, and the numbers on the radiator fronts were almost hidden when the cars came into sight at the end of the race.

In the third lap, when the Buick was far in the lead, a friend flagged the boys down at Imperial and tossed a bottle of beer to the mechanician. The driver made him throw it away, we were compelled to announce to them that it would be impossible to make deliveries of trucks before next winter. This was a natural disappointment to our dealers as well as to ourselves, because we had at that time just completed a non-stop run in which our Lozier five-ton truck had made a wonderful performance. With an average overload of 30 per cent, the machine was run continually for 488 hours. After this, and many other severe tests, the only change decided upon in the building of the truck was to enlarge the diameter of the rear wheels."

The average time was not fast for a speedway, but over the roads of the valley, 39.9 miles an hour is really fast.

The Lyons boys will return to Los Angeles after the B.P.O.E. reunion and will remain in the city for a month before returning to Imperial. They are considering the coming Phoenix road race, and it is quite probable that they will be in the big race with their big Buick.

NEW SPEEDWAY TO BE BUILT.

New Jersey Track Will Be Two Miles Around.

Plans for International Race Next Year.

Prominent Men Are in Back of the Project.

Work will be begun in the early part of next month on the new Metropolitan motor speedway, for which the announcement of plans was formally made last week.

The Metropolitan Motor Speedway Association has been organized and is incorporated with a capital stock of $1,500,000. The association will take over 200 acres on the Jersey meadows near Newark, where the motordrome and stadium will be erected. It is expected that the speedway will be completed within the next year. Engineering offices have been opened in Newark, experts have been engaged and work will begin in earnest. On July 4, 1913, will be staged the first event, an international 500-miles race.

Prominent men who are connected with the building of the big track, include A. R. Pardington, who has been connected with the Long Island Parkway as vice-president and also is general manager of the Motor Cups Holding Company. He is the vice-president and general manager of the Metropolitan motor speedway. Fred J. Wagner, the A.A.A., starter, is heavily interested and is a director. This fact alone shows that the project should be carried through successfully.

EXPERIENCED OFFICERS.

As a race organizer, Wagner is unexcelled, while Pardington has worked with Wagner and has had long experience as manager of race events. These two form a strong combination. H. E. Hoyt, vice-president of the American Potash Company, is president of the speedway; Theodore F. Keer, vice-president of the Newark Trust Company, is the treasurer, and W. H. Osborne is the secretary.

It is the intention of the association to make the speedway not only a place for automobile contests, but to hold long-distance motorcycle races and other races on the oval track. The infield will be suitable for aviation meets, and other lines of sporting events. It will be entirely enclosed with a high fence. The speedway will be sixty feet wide, except on the turns, which will be seventy-five feet and banked with saucer curves.

Grand stands with box and promenade seats will be erected the entire length of the straight-away stretches. The estimated capacity of these stands will reach 200,000. Parking spaces to accommodate 10,000 cars will be provided for. These will be accessible by means of tunnels forming the entrance and exit for pedestrians and drivers. The entire length of the speedway will be two miles and the circle will be arranged so that it may be illuminated with electric lights to provide for events at night, such as twenty-four-hour races.

MOTOR IN THE FURROW.

Knight-Dainler Engine Important Feature of English Agricultural Equipment.

From information received from the Royal Agricultural Show Committee, which has scheduled its big show for Doncaster this year, the six-cylinder Knight-Dainler engined agricultural tractors of 105 horse-power are playing a big part in the economic problems of Great Britain. The great machine is intended for plowing. For a number of months experiments have been conducted in various parts of England on some of the largest estates, with the six-cylinder tractor and engineers have recommended this type for not only large agricultural endeavors in the British Isles, but the still larger scale of farming in the colonies.

Another model which will be on display at the shows with the 105-horse-power tractor is equipped with the Dainler-Knight sleeve-valve engine and is a four-cylinder, 36-horse-power type, for direct or cable plowing and general agricultural work.

It has been suggested by Charles Y. Knight, whose sleeve-valve motor is used exclusively on the output of the Dainler works, that the display horse-power bus chassis and three-quarter-ton lorry chassis, upon which many forms of agricultural vehicles may be furnished. The worm gear rear axle is much favored in England for these types of vehicles. By early autumn, a big fleet of buses with bodies on three-fourth ton chassis, with Knight-Dainler engines, will be running in London.

LOCAL MOTOR RUMBLES

BY AL G. WADDELL.

A. M. Young inherited a small canine a short time ago and the new city ordinance, which has caused much widespread joy among dog fanciers generally, was not perfectly clear to him, so he appealed to the City Council, not of Santa Monica, but of Los Angeles, for information in the following lines:

Mayor and Members of the City Council, Los Angeles, California.

Honorable Gentlemen: I have just received a day, perhaps I had better say a puppy—and I am writing for information concerning the new muzzle ordinance.

Would I be permitted to remove the muzzle from this puppy, in case I needed to give him a bath? This matter has not been fully determined, but I wish to be absolutely sure that I am not overstepping the privileges (?) which exist under this new ordinance. Also, is it necessary to keep him muzzled at night, in case he is placed in a room by himself, the door securely locked and the key hidden, so that no one can get in? I understand buying an armor of some sort to use when I replace this muzzle each morning, if this privilege is not in accordance with the new ordinance.

I did not notice any clause requiring the placing of a muzzle on the dog biscuit which I feed him. I assume, however, that this is not necessary, inasmuch as these biscuits will have to be dissolved in some solution and injected into the puppy's leg, which will not require the removal of the muzzle.

As a machine, a big Thomas has been this time I have enjoyed riding the puppy a little fresh air by allowing him to stick his head over the side of the machine, in traveling. This is contrary to the privileges (?) now under the new ordinance, please give me the dimensions and advise as to the required strength of a cage which I might be permitted to carry in the machine for the purpose of housing the dog.

I am a strict believer in living up to the laws of the country, and I certainly want to act correctly in educating the puppy up to an appreciation of the many privileges (?) which he is permitted to enjoy.

Full information will be greatly appreciated.

Yours very truly,
[Signed] A. M. YOUNG

John Weise, of United States tire fame, who holds the heavyweight beefsteak-eating championship of the Pacific Coast, has been challenged to a twenty-pound ham-eating contest by W. H. Little John has been in training for over a week and his friends are greatly alarmed over the fact that he has lost several pounds.

There is a certain attraction about Lynn C. Buxton's sales-room on South Olive street, where the Moon is dispensed. It seems that a choice collection of near-bright young men is always in attendance. Some content themselves with scrubbing the floor of the front room, but the majority of the energetics stick close to the window. Grimm explains that they are all there waiting for him to return from a demonstration, or are talking business with Buxton, but the wiser ones claim that it is an interest in the "House Next Door" that brings them there.

LOZIER TRUCK COMING.

President of Concern Announces Product Will Be Based on Long Experiments.

Contrary to reports that have been published recently, H. A. Lozier, president of the Lozier Motor Car Company, predicts the start of truck manufacturing in the Lozier plant some time next fall. The increase in the touring car business of the company made it necessary to use all the present facilities to reach the demand of the pleasure vehicles during the past season. It is not possible, according to Lozier, to state just what time they may be able to take up the manufacture of the motor truck, but it is thought that it will be some time within the next six months.

"We have never actually engaged in the manufacture of motor trucks," said the Lozier president in a recent interview," but for the past three years we have been doing extensive experimenting in this line and have developed a five-ton truck which was exhibited at the larger shows last winter. At the time our truck was on display at the shows it was our intention to turn out 200 vehicles of this type, the first to be delivered about the middle of May. Our touring car business showed such an extensive increase and our factory being taxed to the utmost to meet this demand we found it was impossible to follow our plans and begin the manufacture of trucks.

"Our dealers everywhere were anxious to get definite delivery dates, and because of other increased business

This Problem of Auto Swiftness.

The Stutz Girl.

Sane and Sane.

ABOLISH THE SPEED LIMIT.

Carlson Believes Drivers Should Be Unrestricted.

"Sane Law" Advocated by Simplex Man.

BY W. H. CARLSON, JR.,

Considering the series of automobile accidents that have forged the dark links of the chain of events in and about Los Angeles for the last two weeks, it is little wonder that people have risen up in arms with the police with a determination to abolish reckless driving. For the last year there has been a growing tendency on the part of reckless automobile drivers to over-ride the speed laws as laid down by the State and city, and that conditions have reached a climax is only the fulfillment of the predictions of every careful driver who has the welfare of the public at heart.

From nearly every side we hear suggestions of how the speed laws can be regulated to meet the demands of caution and to allow the innocent rider to no longer fear the speed maniac.

CHANGE NECESSARY.

That it is time for changes to be made in our laws governing the speed of motor vehicles is a point conceded by all. We must bear in mind that the automobile has taken a place in the commercial world that was never dreamed of at the time of the making of our present system, and that many a business and professional man is using the automobile as an expedient means of travel about the city and country, and that every machine seen on our streets and highways does not represent indolent pleasure or the much to be feared "joy-rider."

The city government has seen fit to make speed laws governing different sections of the city, and these very laws have to be broken time without number each day in order to keep from blocking the traffic on the busier streets.

For instance, standing at the intersection of Broadway and Sixth streets and watching the traffic coming along Broadway, how many machines can you count in the course of a day that are compelled to attain a speed of from fifteen to twenty-five miles an hour, or even more, in order to avoid causing a blockade? Yet, few ever stop to give these speedsters second thought, because we know they are doing the proper thing. But the speed limit along Broadway at this point, according to law, is twelve miles an hour.

On West Seventh street, Grand avenue and West Washington street the speed limit is raised, allowing the auto to travel at fifteen miles an hour, while out on the county roads they are allowed to go at the "breathless" pace of twenty miles an hour.

DEPENDS ON DRIVER.

Now, the question arises, is a machine driven at thirty miles an hour and in the hands of a sober and sane driver any more dangerous than one run under the present restrictions?

These facts being conceded, why would it not be fair to all to adopt the "sane law" and take off the speed limit entirety, placing every driver on his own judgment to drive his machine at such a speed as would be safe to the public and still retain the present force of road officers to see that the privilege is not abused? There are sections of the country where this plan has been adopted and has been found to be much more successful than the old method. By this method, when a machine is recklessly driven to the endangerment of life and limb the offender is found guilty of a misdemeanor and given a heavy jail sentence, as well as a fine for his first offense, which is doubled the second time with the added penalty of the loss of his license for one year for the third offense.

The present speed laws were made to govern the crude pleasure vehicle of half a score of years ago. We can hardly expect that they will serve the present-day use of the automobile. The speed laws must advance with the time, and no city, no State, can afford to hold or enforce any but the best up-to-date methods known. These have been tried in other States, and the most successful yet known is the "sane law" now in practice in a few of the Eastern States and being adopted by others.

Why Postmen Are Thin.

[London Answers:] Has it ever struck you why a stout postman is such a rarity? The question is worth attention.

A postman who, in a busy London residential district, walks from fourteen to sixteen miles a day, starts out in the morning with mails weighing something like eighty pounds. As his letters and packages are distributed the weight of his bag of course grows less, so that the average weight he carries during his trip is forty pounds. A pint of water weighs a pound. A ten-quart pail weighs about twenty pounds, and the average weight the postman carries is equal to two of these. If you want to know why postmen are thin, try a fifteen-mile walk with a ten-quart pail of water in each hand.

Naughty But It's Nice.

THAT'S ONE REASON WHY WOMEN LIKE TO SPEED.

BY THE STUTZ GIRL.

SPEEDING is naughty but it's nice; and it must be admitted that women, most women at least, are as guilty as men when it comes to the question of broken speed laws. Some women are worse than others, of course, but the average member of the fair sex, is a natural born speeder whether she knows it or not.

There are many women who have never driven a car and have never ridden in a car driven at a high rate of speed; and of course, they are not able to appreciate the joys of traveling at a terrific rate of speed, but let a woman get at the wheel of a high powered automobile and strike a stretch of Southern California's many miles of good roads. She will gradually creep up to the "danger mark" and over the speed limit, till the machine is really racing.

A great many women have no idea of speed; and therefore have no feeling of danger even when the car is making fifty or sixty miles an hour. Speeding is forbidden most everywhere and is dangerous everywhere, but it is an easy matter for a woman to nerve herself up to forty miles an hour, it is only a step to fifty and sixty comes with another pressure on the throttle.

It is surprising how soon a person can become accustomed to traveling fast; and soon it will be nothing at all to ride at sixty miles an hour with some one else driving. When at the wheel, the woman forgets her timidity and steps hard on the throttle after a surprisingly short time.

The real thrills come when the car is speeding under your own direction. All danger is forgotten and you think of nothing but the glory of it all. A tire, which might wreck the machine, some little mishap which might send the car over the embankment or against a telegraph pole, is never thought of; and the car goes on and on, faster and faster, till there is no more speed left in her.

It would be hard to think of speed laws when everything else was forgotten, and yet the sight of a motorcycle would put a sudden stop to the glorious drive and tame the engine down to the sane pace prescribed by the law.

In many cases, the woman speeder will keep a careful lookout for the officers of the highway and will only speed for a short distance at a time. She realizes that she is doing wrong, but the temptation is too strong to resist.

The woman who has never driven, or has been deprived of the thrills of speeding on account of having ridden only with a more sane person, does not realize what she has missed, and may not be willing to admit that the "speed bug" exists, though in a malignant state, in the frame of most every woman in this country.

In foreign countries conditions may be different, but here the woman learns to drive an automobile and in a remarkably short time is racing with the party in the big car which attempts to pass her on the road.

After riding "a-mile-a-minute," twenty-five or thirty miles an hour seems like a slow walk. This accounts for the many spurts on our city streets by automobile drivers from the suburban districts. It often happens that a person who has toured into the city from a distance, over roads where speed was possible and where advantage was taken of that possibility, is caught racing through the city streets at a dangerously fast pace. In most cases, this is wholly unintentional. The driver has exceeded the limit so much that it has become natural, and the dangers on the streets of the city are not taken into consideration.

I recall with a smile the first real fast ride I ever indulged in. It was in a "bear-cat" on the Santa Monica race course, during the training days, previous to the road race of last year. I had ridden in touring cars which made the speed limits look like huge jokes, but it must be confessed that when the speedy Stutz was opened wide, I felt that something might happen, and I had mental pictures of all sorts of awful endings, but that did not last long and I was really sorry when the ride was over.

The very next time I rode in a car I received my first lesson in driving. Having ridden in automobiles a great deal, it was an easy matter for me to handle the little Chalmers "30" after a few instructions from my tutor, previous to the start.

The road was barely wide enough for the first mile or so, but I had no accidents and soon the car was holding to a straight line and when I glanced at the speedometer, was astonished to see that I was driving at forty-five miles an hour.

Since then I have driven many cars, including the Stutz "No. 20," which made the wonderful showing in the last Santa Monica, and I have to keep continually studying the speedometer. As soon as I take my eyes off of it, the car will begin to climb up, and I have to look for motorcycles equipped with Warner instruments.

Across the Pond.

NO MOTOR COPS ABROAD CADILLAC MAN ASSERTS.

BY DON LEE,
Cadillac agent of California.

WHILE I recently spent two months in Europe I do not want to pose as an authority on the speed laws and the touring conditions on the other side.

Of course in my travels I picked up certain information and saw a few things for myself. One thing that impressed me above all others was the absence of such restrictions as we have in California which demand that motorists keep down to a speed of twenty miles an hour, even in the most deserted sections.

Throughout practically all of Europe there are no speed regulations other than that the motorist drive with full regard for public safety. The police can arrest anyone driving at what is considered a dangerous speed. But as far as motor cops and unjust regulations are concerned Europe is free from them.

The people as a rule drive faster abroad than in this country but there are not so many accidents. The man with the horse or afoot is alert and as a result the entire responsibility is not put upon the driver of the motor car.

The speed of automobiles is held down more in England than any country which I visited. Police are stationed on the main highways and while I did not motor to any great extent I should judge that conditions are somewhat similar to our own. The London Automobile Club has engaged a number of men who patrol the roads, reporting any obstructions and keeping motorists informed of the presence of motor police.

I suppose there is a certain amount of what we call joy riding, but there was no agitation whatever against the motorists.

The roads are ideal and in any direction the best of highways are encountered. Such roads naturally invite speed to some extent and drives of from 300 to 350 miles a day are not unusual. In fact I understand that most tourists will average 200 miles a day and not consider that they have been making any unusual speed.

KISSEL KAR TRUCK SERVICEABLE ON RANCH.

Orland Moore, a rancher of Visalia, has adopted the motor truck for general service, and in addition to pulling up tree stumps, plowing his fields, and climbing a mountain road to an altitude of 6000 feet, all within a period of three days, he hauled a load of grapes weighing 7420 pounds, and three passengers, a distance of 315 miles in the running time of thirty-one hours.

The truck owned by Moore is a three-ton Kissel Kar. The roads in the section of the State in which he lives are anything but good, yet the motor truck has crowded the horse out of a place in the working department of the ranch and is doing service which seems almost impossible to anyone who is familiar with that section.

Photographs in the possession of friends, however, prove that the Kissel has really performed all the feats claimed for it by the ow—

Flanders "20"

Forget the nameplate—and still the car stands pre-eminent

If it bore no nameplate—the Studebaker Flanders "20" would be bound to make an immediate and an impressive appeal to your preference.

If it had no reputation—your sense of value would instantly recognize the wonderful money-worth of the car.

If it had enjoyed no sales-success—a demonstration of its splendid response to every normal, or even abnormal demand, would drive you straight to the decision that your $900 could not be better expended.

Study it from any of the ordinarily accepted specification standards — motor-measurement, power, wheel-base, axle-strength, ease, style—and rivalry, in its class, recedes into the remote background.

But you are not asked to draw a check for $900 on the evidence of your own eyes; or your own experience; or your own sense of value.

The Studebaker "20" will speak for itself on that close-range inspection which should precede a purchase—but another voice speaks to you in its behalf, louder and more impressive still.

Seventy-five thousand of your fellow-citizens vouch for Studebaker value.

And we would like you to feel the impact of that tremendous pressure of public opinion.

We would like you to summon up a mental picture of that mighty host of Studebaker cars rendering yeoman service in every nook and corner of the nation.

We would like you to remember that the satisfaction of these 75,000 citizens has its source in the name Studebaker.

We would like you to realize that each and every one of these 75,000 cars does its full duty, day by day, precisely because it is a Studebaker car.

The Studebaker "20" which you buy and drive is the embodiment and the expression of the sixty-year-old Studebaker policy of serving its public.

We want you to remind yourself that the Studebaker word has been good as gold to the buying world for more than a century—and that it is being made good in every car that issues from the mighty Studebaker plants.

The Globe-girdling sales system of the Studebaker Corporation—the 1800 Studebaker stores in America—the superb laboratory and manufacturing equipment in the Studebaker plant—and the low cost of production and distribution which they involve—in these factors you find the reason why the Studebaker "20" lays immediate hold upon your preference—why it appeals to you as the very uttermost of value at or about $900.

SPEED AND ITS ABUSES.

Only Few Go Faster Than Is Safe.

Majority of Auto Owners Use Discretion.

Joy Riders Should Be Put in Jail.

BY STANLEY SMITH,
Stearns-Knight agent.

The American people demand a certain amount of speed in their motor cars. The car that will not do at the very least forty miles an hour cannot expect much of a sale.

Getting this speed, it is only natural that a certain percentage of the people would abuse this extra power. That is what happens with motor car drivers and the public should not be too hasty in condemning the entire motoring populace because a very small percentage of all the owners speed to excess.

Take for instance, the motor cars in this State alone. There are about seventy thousand at the present time. Put seventy thousand people on roller skates and there would be the usual number who would want to go faster than would be safe for the others and would want the whole road to the discomfort of all others on or off skates. And so it is with the motorist; and it is my opinion that, considering their number, there are fewer cranks and "road hogs" among motorists than it would be possible to find in any other aggregation of man or women.

Understand me, I am not defending the speed maniacs. They should be suppressed, but the public officials should not lose their heads in their haste to punish them. The man who happens to be going twenty-three miles an hour when the limit is twenty, should not be made to suffer for the reckless individual who burns up the highway at sixty. When it comes to breaking the speed laws, there is not a man driving a motor car who does not violate the law every day. The present speed law, as it stands in California is obsolete. Motor speed should be regulated according to the danger. There are districts near Los Angeles where the motorcycle officers get half the money paid in fines. As a result, men fairly crawling along the roads in places where there would be no danger at all from a car moving thirty miles an hour have been arrested and fined. Such regulations should be scotched. There can be little fairness when such conditions exist.

The joy riders are not touring with their families on Sunday afternoons. They can easily be spotted and should be. People who endeavor to drive such powerful vehicles as motor cars when in no fit shape for cool judging of speed or distance should be put in jail.

The man who speeds on the city streets and shoots over crossings at a high rate of speed should be punished, but let us all work for the punishment of the guilty and not the persecution of the motoring public.

Los Angeles county and Southern California in general are blessed with beautiful roads. These roads are for the use of all, but in this end of the State, the number of motor vehicles outnumber all others so these roads will be used mostly by automobiles.

Our law prohibits a car moving at a greater speed than twenty miles an hour and large signs threaten a fine of $250 or a jail sentence.

Twenty miles an hour is too slow a speed for the open country. Almost any car will travel at thirty in comfort and a car moving at thirty miles an hour can be controlled as easily as a car moving at twenty. Force the motorists to slow down in towns and at any point where there seems to be any possibility of danger, but let us work for the improvement of our laws so the roads we have can be enjoyed. Touring with your head on a pivot constantly is no great pleasure.

WOULD TREAT WILD DRIVERS HARSHLY.

BY WILLIAM J. LA CASSE,
Sales Manager Studebaker Corporation, Los Angeles Branch.

EVERY dealer who has the interests of the automobile industry at heart and every motorist who knows the joys of touring, should join in the protest which is directed against those who by their reckless speeding have brought discredit on the motor-driven vehicle.

The long series of recent fatalities has aroused public officials to action against speeders as nothing else could. Death after death, and all because a few drink-crazed drivers or speed-mad maniacs went far beyond reasonable limits in handling their cars brought discredit on the automobile contingent. Now it is time for all to join in concerted action, which will mean the end of wanton accidents.

There is only one way to cure the reckless driver—with a narrow cell, scanty meals, and, if possible, work on the chain gang with other criminals who are a menace to the community. The burglar will steal your valuables, the highwayman will take your gold, and the vandal will ruin your property, but none of these can be compared to the speed maniac for destructive tendencies. Their stake is property, his a human life, and there is no reason on earth why he should not at least be given the same penalty—jail.

Simmered down to frank facts, the speeder is usually aided and abetted by an intoxicant. Summarize the accidents in which human lives have been lost and you will find that a majority of those which occurred when a machine was going fast were caused by an intoxicated driver. The stimulant imbibed seems to act as an accelerator, as an inducement to hurry, and the end is a smash, with death and disaster in its trail.

There is only one cure for this. Make the penalty against the intoxicated driver stronger than it is—but what is more to the point, enforce that penalty.

It is gratifying to know that the Chief of Police and County Sheriff have instituted a vigorous campaign against reckless drivers, for every single person who has the joys and advantages of automobiling at heart is with them all the way through. Let members of the Automobile Club, the dealers and the public generally report each case of reckless driving, and if the officers do their duty accidents because of promiscuous speeding will soon be minimized.

The automobile is not an engine of destruction, but a vehicle of progress and uplift. Let its uses and joys be recognized to the full, which can be accomplished only by terminating the actions of the reckless.

CALIFORNIA THE HOPE OF AUTO MANUFACTURERS.

WHAT becomes of the great output of cars each year?

In Indiana the inhabitants see more than 200,000 cars turned out annually, and it is hard for them to conceive of so many buyers. It is a fact that probably most people overlook that most of the automobiles are built in two of the Eastern States.

V. A. Longaker, chairman and general manager of the American Motors Company of Indianapolis, is on an extensive tour of the Western States in the interests of the American underslung, and he sends back word to the manufacturing States that he has found a bottomless pit which will keep them busy for many long days to fill.

"I believe that I have discovered a place that, if all the other States in the Union put a ban on this great invention, will long keep the two manufacturing States busy," said Longaker, "and that is California.

"It is often the practice to drive a machine all the year around in parts of our country, but during the cold seasons many owners put their cars away. This means that the lives of those machines, that are laid away, are lengthened. If there ever comes a final reckoning of the number of machines worn out these parts will not have the total machine consumption that California does.

"It is always motoring time in California," continued the general motors man, "that is, in pleasure car motoring. The truck business is still in its infancy. The pleasure vehicles still make the most millions for the manufacturer. I believe that there is one championship that will be held perpetually, that is the consumption of automobiles in California.

"Los Angeles, with 330,000 people holds its own with the greatest cities of the world in the number of motor cars used. Many of these come into the State with tourists but this does not detract from the State's credit. New York, as a State, is a close contender with California, but I am sure will be outdistanced.

On the Road.

SPEEDING AND ITS BENEFITS.

Is Valuable to Industry in Right Place.

Everyone Likes to Be at the Head of Line.

BY EARLE Y. BOOTHE,
National Motor Car Company.

There has been considerable agitation of late over the speeding of motor cars. Some of this has been justified, and some entirely unwarranted. I have been asked to write on the subject of the proper place for speeding and its benefits. As to the proper place for fast driving there can be no question of it being out of place on a well-traveled road. A driver of a motor car should at all times be considerate of others who may be using that road.

A man with a fast, powerful motor before him may feel the temptation to "turn her loose" for a distance, but these feelings should be controlled. Personally, I see no objection to an occasional sprint on a desert road, far into the country.

The driver who is dangerous on a country road or in the hills is the individual who takes too many chances. The driver who shoots around blind corners at a high rate of speed should be prosecuted before the man who likes to "step on it" occasionally when the road is clear and no danger is near.

That the motorist has been subjected to considerable unjust prosecution there can be no doubt, but even that should not alter our opinion regarding reckless speeding on city streets.

BENEFITS OF SPEEDING.

As to the benefits to be derived from high speed, I have a subject on which I feel well qualified to write. The National car, which I have the pleasure to represent in Southern California, has been prominent in racing circles for several years, and last year won the national championship by winning eighty-four firsts in road races, speedway contests, beach races and hill climbs.

This was the most remarkable racing record ever made in the history of the motor car. This season we have won the greatest race ever run, the 500-mile contest on the Indianapolis Speedway, in which the fastest cars in the world competed, and by winning this hard race the National can justly claim the international championship.

To win such races it is necessary to make a very high average speed. The National averaged 75.6 miles per hour for the entire 500 miles, which shattered all former records.

What good is such speed? What does this racing prove?

Such racing enables a manufacturer to give his car the hardest possible test for both speed and endurance, and it proves that foreign countries can make no better cars than the American manufacturer.

The National factory went into the high-speed racing game for a purpose. We wanted to test the cars. As the cars went through race after race, the weak parts showed, and when every weak point had been remedied and the car could not be bettered in material or workmanship, the cars began winning from the world's best cars previous to the new champion. The National manufacturers naturally recognize that the people who buy cars for family use are not looking for racing machines, yet these same people are happy to know that in their family car they have a machine that does not have to take anybody's dust, and as that car will stand up under the hardest of racing it will certainly stand up for years under ordinary touring use. Racing successes and failures enable a manufacturer to reach the highest standard of success and it gives the motorist that confidence which adds to the pleasure of touring.

LAMP COMPANY MOVES.

Castle Buys Battle Creek Factory and Will Move Amesbury, Mass., Plant.

A business deal that will be of interest to the motor trade was transacted last week in Battle Creek, Mich., when a large modern plant already erected there, was purchased by the Castle Lamp Company, of Amesbury, Mass. The buildings contain 75,000 feet of floor space. F. E. Castle will move to Battle Creek and give the business his personal attention, as it will now be one of the most thorough and best-equipped automobile lamp manufacturing plants in the country.

The move was necessary on account of the great business which the company has acquired for the coming season. The concern did a large business last year, among the most prominent of automobile manufacturers. They make a high-grade automobile lamp, only, and they expect to more than double the amount of business done last year. The new plant was bought for cash and will soon be occupied by the lamp company

A LITTLE BIT GOES LONG WAY.

Little Gasoline Used on San Diego Run.

Pratt "Forty" Uses Less Than Seven Gallons.

Makes Round Trip Without Any Preparations.

It costs exactly $2.47½ for gasoline to make an ordinary run from this city to San Diego and return via the coast route by automobile, according to a test trip that was made last Tuesday.

R. C. Fike and E. S. Lack of the Pratt Motor Car Company, accompanied by a representative of The Times, made the trip to ascertain the exact amount of gasoline a Pratt "40" would consume on a round trip to the southern city, such as the average motorist seeking pleasure would make. The trip was made on an hour's notice and the car was not "tuned up" for the journey.

The south run was made in seven hours and six minutes, of which a half-hour was consumed—along with other things—for supper, making the actual running time six hours and thirty-six minutes. Exactly seven gallons of gasoline were eaten up by the engine, an average of 18.4 miles to the gallon. The trip from San Diego to this city was made in six hours and five minutes, of which five hours and forty-five minutes were actual running time and six and three-fourths gallons of gasoline were used, an average of 30.1 miles to the gallon.

Fike and Lack believe the Pratt consumes less gasoline per mile than any other car of its horse power and would like to work up a little competition in this department of automobile activity. Recently the Pratt "40" went to Arlington and return on a test trip and made a mark of twenty-six gallons to the mile.

TANK SEALED.

The run to San Diego and return was begun at 4:04 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The gasoline tank was filled to overflowing and sealed by The Times representative. Immediately upon the arrival of the car at San Diego the person who sealed the tank inspected it and found it about half full. He supervised the filling of it, and exactly seven gallons of gasoline made it brimful. The same method was followed after the car returned to this city and six and three-fourths gallons were required to make the contents of the tank overflow.

The car was not run in the low gear at any time during the entire trip, for which the speedometer showed 271.5 miles. All the grades were taken on "the high."

On the return trip the speedometer showed for the first hour, 23.5 miles; second hour, 56.1 miles; third hour, 71.9 miles; fourth hour, 95.6 miles; fifth hour, 119.5 miles. In the remaining forty-five minutes of the actual running time sixteen and one-fifth miles were made.

Between Capistrano and Oceanside the oil-sprinkling wagon is at work and the Pratt had to wade through about fifteen miles of sloppy road. The remainder of the road to San Diego is in good shape, however.

On the Range.

DIVING AND FLOATING NOT HARD TO MASTER.

BY FRANK PARKS HOLBOROW,

Swimming Instructor, L.A.A.C.

THE great interest that has been aroused in floating, fancy diving and other aquatic feats, through the preparations for the big swimming carnival in the L.A.A.C. plunge, July 12, has decided me that now, rather than later, is the proper time to say a word or two on diving and floating, and for this reason, the description of the famous Australian crawl, which I had planned for this week, has been postponed.

FLOATING.

Floating is one of the easiest swimming feats to master. It is merely the self-confidence of the man or woman in the water. To learn to float, a person does not have to go to any hard motions of the arms or legs. It is merely done by laying flat on the back in the water with the chin thrust skyward.

The legs are extended full length and right together, that is, in one way of floating.

In order to preserve the horizontal position in the water, the chest should be arched as much as possible, and the arms extended at right angles with the body.

This is the position for what is known as the "still float," and should be mastered before the several modifications of the position are attempted. Many beginners find that either the head or the feet have a tendency to sink, and that the body, in consequence, gradually assumes a perpendicular position in the water.

There is no real remedy for this, except the acquiring of the confidence that one is really going to float, and, bingo, just as one finds after repeated failures that he can ride a bicycle, the feat is, and one wonders how it was that there were any failures at all.

A great many people, getting disgusted with the "still float" have discovered that a very slight movement will suffice to keep the body on the surface.

The simplest movement is what is termed the "fan" float. This mode is very easily learned. It is done by bringing the arms to the side, instead of extending them, and, leaving the hands free, moving the wrists to and fro ever so gently. Indeed, the motion is so slight as to hardly be worthy of the name, yet the action is quite sufficient to produce the required results.

This mode is capital for the swimmer who wishes to rest while in the water, and at the same time make a little progress.

DIVING.

There are a hundred and one different ways to dive, yet all have certain basic principles, which, if followed will not only serve to enable the swimmer to make a graceful plunge, but will eliminate the chances for accident.

It is really astonishing how many are injured through ignorance on a subject on which it is so easy to get posted. This does not mean so much the accidents that sometimes happen by striking bottom, but rather those which result through improper contact with the water, and wrong recovery while beneath the surface.

In making a simple, straight dive properly, stand with the feet close together and the body bent slightly forward from the waist. Extend the hands in front of the face and lock them together. This is the first position.

Now for the spring. In making it, plan to strike the water at an angle of about sixty degrees, keeping the hands together and the legs straight out behind. Do not bend them at the knees as so many do, for it is liable to result in a sudden wrench, when the body strikes the water, which may injure the spine.

Directly after the body has cut the water, a slight upturn of the hands will act as a rudder, and bring it back to the surface. For deep diving, keep the position in which one enters the water, and by a little feathering of the feet, one can go down as deep as is desired.

In using a spring board, remember that the purpose of the board is to impart the spring. Hence, wait, after jumping on the board, until it has rebounded to its full heighth again, before leaving it. The natural rebound will thus hurtle the diver into the air. To attempt to jump from the board while it is pressed down by the impact of the body, is to defeat the very purpose for which it was designed.

Unless there is some reason for it, do not try to dive too deep. The farther down one goes, the greater is the pressure encountered, and this pressure is a menace to the ear drums.

Another important point. Be sure that the feet are firmly placed before making the spring. A slip means a wrong angle of contact with the water, and this, especially if the dive is of any distance at all, is dangerous.

The blow the body receives in striking flat on the water is very dangerous, not only to the spin, but to the internal organs as well. People have been crippled for life by striking the water "belly-bumps" as the boys call it.

In making a high dive, never try to jump out too far. Keep the body curved and the knees bent slightly, until within six feet of the water. Then straighten out. In this way the balance is preserved, and the danger of a complete flop, which would land the diver on his back, is averted.

By following out these hints there will be little or no danger in plunge diving, or in salt water either, for that matter, and the same principles should be followed in fancy diving.

Vacation School.

FIELD DAY TOMORROW FOR RELIGIOUS DAY SCHOOL.

A PUBLIC field meet and a series of basket ball and indoor baseball games will be the athletic features of the Vacation Religious Day School on the opening day, Monday, July 8. The events for the three departments, high school, intermediate and junior will be respectively:

High school—Fifty-yard dash, running high jump, running broad jump, 12-pound shot put, 440-yard potato race.

Juniors—Twenty-five-yard dash, running high jump, 100-yard potato race.

Teams representing individual Sunday schools will be matched during the course of the school and final events will be held on Friday, July 19.

Another attractive feature in the series will be a tennis tournament by four of the leading players of Los Angeles at 2 o'clock on Saturday, July 13.

W. A. Reynolds, and his corps of physical trainers, in the local Y.M.C.A. will direct the athletic contests. The school will be held in the First Congregational Church, No. 521 South Hope street. On account of the special programme of events scheduled for Monday next, on the athletic field, that day will be observed as visitors' day in all the departments.

All boys will be admitted to the school on equal terms. Membership in the teams and places in the contests will be limited to those who are registered in the Vacation School.

MOTOR TRUCK SLICES HAULING EXPENSES.

The efficiency of the motor truck is being proved more fully each day. An example of this is given by the work accomplished by a G.M.C. truck in Detroit recently. A local contractor had been compelled to draw brick seven and nine-tenths miles, and this by horse and wagon at a cost of $7.50 per trip.

Each team could deliver but one load a day of four tons each. This was very expensive and also very slow, and he was finally persuaded to see what a truck could do in going over the route for him with a full load.

The contractor was agreeably surprised when he found that the G.M.C. truck carried to the work each day twenty-five tons of brick, or the equivalent of what six teams had been doing. He learned that the expense of the motor-drawn vehicle, doing the same amount of work each day, was just one half of what the work had cost with the horse-drawn wagons. The expense of six teams a day carrying a single load was $45. While the truck, for the same time, cost below $20.

GOLF NOTES.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

So E. S. Armstrong is to be our chief representative in Denver after all, since none of our other star players can make the journey. He certainly carries all our most ardent hopes with him.

There seems to be a very definite feeling that Michael McLaughlin, our winter member at Annandale, will carry off high distinctions, for he seems to have been winning laurels in a quiet, consistent sort of way ever since he left here last May.

Armstrong is leaving at once in order to give him a good week's practice over the Denver course. He is playing a fine game just now, with perhaps, slight room for improvement in putting. If he can get that right—up to his own best standard—he is going to be one of the hardest men to beat in this western event.

A New-Old Member.

H. P. Anderson of Oklahoma, who was one of the original members of the Los Angeles Country Club, has now returned to this city for the winter and rejoined the club. He is now a member of the Tulsa Country Club of Oklahoma and an ardent a golfer as ever.

Brad's New Visitor.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Bradford have just welcomed a little stranger who is likely to make an extended visit, as they say in the society paragraphs. She weighed seven and a half pounds when she arrived which must be almost as much as Mr. Bradford weighs himself. He is going to make a great success as a father, but in the meantime, his golf is of a very indifferent order.

However, new babies seem to have a very beneficient effect upon papa's golf as a rule—there was Conde Jones, for instance, of the San Gabriel Country Club, who began showing off directly after his heir arrived. Elmer Williams of Annandale had a like experience. Evidently such an episode spurs father on to his best, that he may show himself worthy, etc., etc.

There was a cynic once, however, who explained it by saying that the house usually became intolerable after the intruder arrived and poor father was driven to spend more time on the golf course than ever.

A Grass-Widower.

Which reminds us that the one and only Edward Tufts is to be a lone grass-widower all this summer, Madame and Mademoiselle having gone to Catalina for three months.

Of course, there is a golf course at Catalina and there were suggestions that Saturdays might find him reunited to his sorrowing family. Since the Titanic disaster, however, Baby Dimple does not feel that he is justified in putting the Catalina leviathans to so drastic a test. Besides, they haven't widened those gangways, and really, Catalina is a very small island to accommodate so well-developed a personality.

Our Professionals.

California golf professionals don't seem to have created any wild furore over at Muirfield. And we quite thought Martin had gone ever to show those international johnnies a thing or two, and bring the honors back to the Los Angeles Country Club. Got put out in the first round—all the American professionals did. Must have been some trickery of some kind. Why, dash it all, Martin came from California!

Del Monte.

The powers that be are sitting in secret conclave drawing up the programme for the Del Monte meeting. It begins on September 7 and positively every one seems to be going. Star golfers, middling golfers, bad golfers, lady golfers, Riverside golfers, Redlands golfers—everybody one meets is reserving September for Del Monte. It unquestionably is one of the jolliest and most popular of all the meetings, with events to attract every kind of golfer.

Golf as a Vote Catcher.

When President Taft went down in state to his golf club and asked for their votes on the plea that as fellow-golfers they must stand by him there were many sly gibes at him in the press. But golfers will appreciate that it was not so weak a plea as might at first appear. Well he knew that the mere fact that he was a golfer stamped him as a man of intellect, discrimination, decision, decorum and good taste. It is not so much the golf as the qualities golf demands which make of the golfers the best set of men in the country.

What Golf Demands.

Obviously, golf is a very exacting game, compelling, as it were, the attentions of all the finest intellects in the country. Regard any golf club list and you will find that when a member is not a lawyer he is a physician, a banker, a merchant prince—or a clergyman. A game that is exclusively supported by such a clientele can safely put on airs and lay claim to social superiority.

Two Norman Macbeths.

The Union Bank of Pasadena has a Norman Macbeth on its board and so has the Riverside Cement Company, and the question that is fluttering us at the moment is whether it is one and the same Macbeth, or can there be two of them? Just imagine the supreme luxury of the two Macbeths! Be still, our fluttering hearts. It would be almost more than we could bear—so much joy is not given to mortals.

The Standard Ball.

It is interesting to note that for once the agitation for a standard golf ball was been effectually quelled. The delegates from the various clubs governing the amateur international meeting held as official conference while at Westward Ho and this was one of the questions with which it was confronted. A monster petition bearing several thousand names was submitted on the subject, but the suggestion was politely but firmly negatived. They referred the petitioners to the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews with a rider that they hold out no hope that it would be granted.

So the only standard ball for the present is Mr. John Ball, the international champion, a very good standard, too. As Golfing observes, "Never did an old ball last for so many rounds."

Horseholly Emotions.

In fact, Golfing is positively frisky lately. One question it is artlessly asking is whether the American claimant said D. A. M. Brown when that gentleman put him out at the sixteenth.

Golf and the Press.

In Great Britain the press has been a great factor in the golf boom, for it is the custom of many of the newspapers to put up very handsome cups and money prizes during the season. Thus the News of the World $2000 tournament for the professionals has become an institution and the "ladies' fields" and "ladies' foursomes" events for the ladies are important events in England.

The Daily Mail, which has done so much for aviation by offering enormous sums of money in prizes—$50,000 was the last for accomplishing a circuit of Great Britain—has now offered a $5000 automobile as a prize in a national golf competition.

The Irish Women Champion.

Miss Mabel Harrison has won the Irish championship again for the third time in succession. Prior to that, Miss Rhona Adair held it for four years in succession. The Irish women are fine golfers, equaling even their Scottish sisters.

A Five-Foot Catch.

[Kansas City Star:] There are still some pretty good sized catches in the Missouri River. Two fishermen brought one from a net near the Broadway Bridge this morning that weighed 100 pounds and was a giant catfish about five feet in length.

The fishermen walked into the city market with the big fish suspended across their shoulders. Fish dealers at the market said it was the largest Missouri catfish that had been brought in in ten years. The fish measured eleven inches between the eyes.

WIECZOREK IS PROMISING RACQUETER.

A young and promising tennis exponent that should be watched with interest during the next year or two is Roel Wieczorek of Westlake Park. She is the daughter of the well-known Polish artist, Max Wieczorek, who came here last year to paint scenes at the game age.

Miss Wieczorek is already the champion of the juniors at Westlake Park and has several times defeated the senior champions, Mildred Bell and Jessie Green. The strongest feature of her game is a powerful and strong and accurate drive. Her backhand play is most skillful. She is quick as a panther, agile, quick as a panther, and will certainly become one of the formidable heroines of the ten-

Mr. Wad Didn't Know What Kind of an Animal a "Geyser" Was—But He Does Now!

The fellow who writes me to ask what are the best games for young girls to play has got me guessing all right. Wonder if he thinks I'm running the Ladies' Home Journal while Ed Bok is taring off, taking dancing lessons. The only ones I can think of now are crocheting, tennis and having your picture printed in the society columns every other week as being a popular leader in your social set. Others are pawing over the department stores and moving picture shows.

After the way Ad Wolgast fought here Thursday it would be a grand thing for the prize fighting business in this town if about a dozen of our meal ticket preliminary kids would submit at once to one or more operations. If any one of them came out of it they could lick about nine wild cats each and if they didn't, why there wouldn't be quite so many heros.

The number of pugs right in this town who now think they could beat Wolgast after his showing Thursday, would make an army of strong men big enough to carry the Courthouse down to San Pedro.

I'd like to advise Cal Ewing to let his San Francisco ball team alone for a few weeks. Every time he drops some old men and hires some new ones the team loses more games. For the love of Mike, leave them alone. If they can't get around to the plate now often enough, they will not be able to reach second base in about another month if Cal keeps monkeying with them.

... accidents, there have been but very few that have not lent aid in some way in perfecting the plane. Thanks to the various aero clubs throughout Europe and America, the causes of these mishaps have been gathered and compiled so that the aviators have been kept thoroughly posted in their work.

Much has been written on the dangers of air travel, but in the end the comparison of aeroplane to ocean liner will be common. The air is a great big sea, the only difference being that the rough places are not visible as they are on water. There are no such conditions as "holes in the air," better known to the public as "swiss cheese air."

Occasionally, a downward gust will be met, but the strata is usually small and of little consequence. Upward gusts are met quite often, and lend feeling to the sport.

As to the strain on the nerves of the operator, this varies with the weather conditions. In a recent flight a local aviator flew for nearly a quarter of an hour without touching a control on the machine. This was done at a height of nearly 5000 feet.

Within the next six months Southern California will probably see the first aeroplane passenger service established, with a machine capable of carrying seven passengers.

To predict the ultimate result of aeroplane construction with the data now at hand, would be but to guess, for we are fairly beginning in this truly wonderful mode of navigation.

There are tennis courts at the Stratford, where her parents reside, and nearly all social entertainments given by Mr. and Mrs. Weiczorek take the form of tennis parties, as her passion for the game is quite insatiable.

Mrs. Hannah Albee, 80 years old, of Wiscasset, Me., has never ridden on a steam train, trolley car, good-sized passenger steamer or automobile, though she is in perfect health. She still uses the old-fashioned spinning wheel she used when a girl. In one summer she spun on this wheel 500 skeins of yarn, four yards to the skein.

George Carleton, a farmer of Pelham, N. H., has a pet partridge that follows him about when he is at work in the fields plowing or cultivating. The partridge was not raised by Mr. Carleton. It is a wild bird that has simply formed an attachment for the horses that Mr. Carleton uses in his farm work.

CHESS NOTES.

The plans for the New York international masters' tournament have been expanded to include a double round contest for New York and Havana, confined to twelve masters of the greatest renown, and a supplementary quadrangular match between the four highest for the championship of the world, and a trophy emblematic thereof, which trophy must be held and defended under rules agreed upon by the masters before the tournament.

The Havana Chess Club is co-operating with the American clubs in providing funds, prizes and all expenses of contestants. As all traveling and hotel expenses will be paid, no pecuniary considerations should prevent the participation of all national and international champions, of whom only first prize winners and winners of set matches against such, will be eligible. Liberal prizes will be awarded, aside from the championship trophy.

Lasker, the present claimant of the title of world champion, having recently failed to play two qualified challengers, Capablanca and Rubenstein, may, under all rules of sportsmanship, be considered as having forfeited the title, and the recipient of the trophy won in the proposed contest may well be decried a clear title.

The management of the New York-Havana Chess Congress, as the enterprise will be known henceforth, has been assigned to F. D. Rossbault, of the Manhattan Chess Club, who has been acting as the personal manager of J. R. Capablanca, Pan-American champion. The funds of the New York congress have been transferred to Banker Felix E. Rahn, of the Manhattan Club, treasurer of the new undertaking. This official will receive subscriptions from chess lovers desirous of aiding in the promotion of the world's greatest tournament, and one which seems destined to effect a new era in the code of masters.

A two-round challenge tournament is under way at the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A., to last during July and August, resulting positions gained by the contestants to be regarded as their rating in team matches proposed for the early autumn, and to be held subject to challenge by any member holding the next lower rank.

The twenty competitors entered have only fairly started their games, the winners to date standing as follows: Pierce, won 12, lost 0; Ruth won 2, lost 0; Stokes won 1, lost 0.

A Redlands exchange gives an interesting account of a game lately won by Harry Leipsic of Redlands against Rev. E. B. Adams of San Diego, in the third Southern California correspondence tournament. Harry has astonished his friends, among whom must be classed his tourney opponents, by his successes in this contest, wherein he holds, so far, the only perfect score, the figures standing at 6 won, lost 0.

He naively writes that he hopes to keep up the good work. This party is the first lost by Adams, whose score now stands at 4½ won, 1½ lost. Pearsall still leads in totals, with 7 won, 1 lost. Both George E. Hart and A. P. Williams have lately scored at the expense of E. M. Wickersham.

COUNTRY CLUB GOSSIP.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE finals between H. N. H. Woodcock and Frank Wade for the honor of being the first golf champion of the San Gabriel Country Club will be played off today—eighteen holes this morning and eighteen holes this afternoon.

The match was originally scheduled for July 4, but so many members were equally anxious to witness the fight between Wolgast and Rivers and the winning of the championship that the dramatic personae in the latter event were implored to postpone theirs that their fellow-golfers might witness both struggles. I am, therefore, more than ever convinced that prize fighting is eminently respectable—if even golfers can be found among the fans.

P. A. Coon and Mr. Silcox will also play the finals for the second flight today, and Aitkire will play the winner of the Jergens-Bronson match in the defeated eights. If Aitkire maintains his July 4 standard, when he won the handicap against par, he will be a hard man to beat.

The Women's Team.

San Gabriel is justly congratulating itself upon its women golfers who succeeded in putting up the very presentable score of 26 down in the trophy contest. Considering that two of the players are comparative novices, too, Mrs. J. V. Eliot's score of 1 up was something like her old-time brilliance, and one foresees that she will be a force to reckon with in the Del Monte tournament.

Miss Marian Clark's graceful game never shows to the best advantage in an important competition, as she is one of the sensitive players, but her score was certainly no disgrace. Mrs. Pierce is a comparatively newcomer to golf and won several distinctions in the bronze medal competitions during the winter. Mrs. A. C. Pearley has made quite remarkable strides in the game, and is to be congratulated for so pluckily entering for the tournaments as she does.

Sparkling Annandale.

"The Annandale Country Club certainly did herself proud on July 4 and the management of the whole affair went with clockwork smoothness. It is no small undertaking to cater for one of those "open-house" days, to say nothing of satisfying every member's assumption that he and his party are the most important people. Yet this thing was accomplished and everyone voted it a charming day. Mr. Williams, the manager, is certainly entitled to hearty congratulations.

The new pennants, flaunting the club colors, blue and yellow, made the gayest of decorations, entirely surrounding the terraces, with loyal clusters of the national flag at effective intervals. Then at night the terraces were festooned with Chinese lanterns with fairylike effect, which the fireworks—oh, those popular fireworks—charmingly completed.

The ballroom for the dance wore a very military aspect with its array of star-spangled banners and red flowers, while the menus for both lunch and dinner will make members forever dissatisfied with their private cooks. One can but pity the chatelaines who are doomed to have snicky comparisons drawn, with threats to "dine at the club" after this.

Any number of strangers were among the guests, notably Mrs. Andrew H. Horner of New York, Miss Ruth Steele of Chicago, H. B. Squires of San Francisco.

Mrs. Henry Van Dyke, who played for Los Angeles in the Craft Higgins competition, was also at Annandale on Thursday, but not golfing on this occasion.

The Los Angeles Country Club.

The tennis seems to be obsessing things a bit at Beverly, and it is odd what an entirely different aspect the tennis people lend the club. On the purely golf occasions there is an atmosphere of matured prosperity, middle-aged well being, mellowed charm. But tennis alters all that.

Everyone immediately becomes ten years younger, we all feel as if we must run rather than walk, that a coupoon of frivolity will not necessarily be indecorous and that a skirt anywhere below the calf is several inches too long. It has its effect on the golfers, too. Slightly pompous and very important elderly gentlemen show a sheepish desire for practical jokes and naughty pranks. And everyone giggles. Not that such austere exponents as Thomas Bundy Inspire giggling. Heavens, no. But all the same, we giggle.

This is the first time those lovely $7000 tennis courts have figured in a really big tournament, and it was time they were properly appreciated. And the infusion of light-hearted youth tennis brings with it, is very attractive. A. C. Way was among the players—they persist in calling him one of the veterans, but as a matter of fact, he is the youngest of them all, and May Sutton will pick him as a partner in preference to any of the younger Adonises. Very discriminating is May.

Social Glitter.

The tennis spirit was very much in evidence on the social side on July Fourth, and the army of hosts and hostesses intent upon catering to the inner man, found their guests in the most happy and receptive of moods.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Barker had the center table, which is always regarded as the "plum." Capt. and Mrs. Randolph H. Miner were the guests of Col. and Mrs. Charles McKinstrey, and other hosts included such popular names as I. C. Drake, A. H. Busch, O. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin, R. E. Burbank, D. H. McCartney, Mr. and Mrs. R. Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Innes, W. C. Clark, Percy Clark, Norman Macbeth, still in splints, Walter Van Pelt—these bachelor hosts are popular, indeed—L. T. Bradford, the new father; Edward Tufts, H. W. Kellar, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Jevne, the later in another ravishing gown; T. E. Gibbon, Mrs. Hancock Banning—one of the largest parties this—G. Gillette, W. M. Brunswig, Dr. and Mrs. Herman Janss, Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Booth, another large merry party; Mrs. J. J. Meyler, W. Meade, Dr. Zerfing, and Mr. and Mrs. Volney P. Howard.

Then, of course, there were all those interesting tennis stars from the north to lend luster to the occasion, besides our own incomparable heroes. Elias Fottrell, whom lady photographers find so interesting; W. M. Johnston, R. C Gorrill, Reuben G. Hunt, W. G. Knowlton, Dr. Sommer Hardy, Mrs. McLaughlin, Carl Yardney, all of San Francisco, and W. G. Hunter of Stockton.

The Los Angeles Country Club is certainly an ideal place for large social affairs and July Fourth, with the added attraction of the tennis, showed it at its crowded best. They even overflowed into the grill room, but Green, the club's admirable Crighton, never turned a hair, although responsible for everybody's comfort.

They finished up with a dance, of course that floor is so very inviting, and with the kindly warm evening it was quite practicable to stroll out and watch the Venice fireworks between the dances.

Musical Insects.

[Country Life in America:] A carefully-trained ear and mind are indispensable to enable one to detect and to discriminate readily from the general insect medley any particular species of musician.

As with birds and their songs, much of the charm and pleasure to be got from insect music depends upon the emotional coloring associated with it. We are enraptured with the notes of the peewee in spring, or the earliest piping of the frogs, not because these sounds in themselves possess any intrinsic sweetness, but because they recall endearing memories of many happy, hopeful spring times. They are always the harbingers of another verdant season. Their plaintive notes add to our minds an emotional warmth and sunshine. They awaken for us an inner, subjective spring time.

In a similar way the crickets and katydids gladden and inspire us with their music in proportion as their notes have become associated in our minds with the emotional coloring of past memories.

UNIQUE STUNT IN AUTOMOBILE.

"The Times" Special Car Pierces Mountains.

San Bernardino Resorts Get Papers Early.

Ovation Greets Arrival of Early Visitor.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN BERNARDINO, July 6.—Invading the mountain retreats, 5500 feet above the sea, in an auto special, and delivering The Times to patrons at 5:15 o'clock in the morning, five or six hours ahead of all other newspapers, is the feat which is being performed daily in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The special newspaper service was begun Sunday, and is now a daily occurrence. The surprise for the summer sojourners at Skyland, Pine Crest, Squirrel Inn, Little Bear Valley and other resorts was sprung with the Sunday Times. The big greeting which the newspaper special received on that occasion, as it paused first at one resort and then at another to deposit its bundle of papers, well repaid for the energy displayed.

The start was made from Draper's garage in this city at 1 o'clock. The newspapers had been hurried from the train to the garage by George S. Scott, local agent of The Times. Within two minutes after the paper was delivered here the big passenger automobile—Kirk Phillips's San Bernardino Mountain auto stage—with the mountain edition of The Times and some twenty-two passengers, was on its way.

With a big banner draping the sides of the machine, proclaiming the inauguration of the newspaper special, the auto chugged through town, struck out across the valley and took the Waterman Canyon road up the mountains, a surprise to hundreds of citizens, many of whom cheered when the meaning of the enterprise flashed upon them.

BEAUTIFUL RIDE.

There is no more beautiful auto ride in the State than this up the San Bernardino Mountains. Twenty-eight miles away, Skyland Heights, nestled among the towering pines, looks down over the series of switchbacks by which the ascent is made. Every turn of the road opens up new vistas of beauty and grandeur. Ahead tower the mountains suffused with the rose tint of early dawn. Behind spread out the valleys, checkered with orchards and towns. Around about is flowering, sweet-scented vegetation; canyons still purple with the mists of night, and echoing with the call of the quail, or song of the bluebird or other songster of the feathered folk, and, as the auto bowls ahead, the crisp, pure mountain air blows in one's face.

At Skyland Heights, The Times special was instantly besieged, and within a few seconds the rustling of newspapers, as summer sojourners buried themselves in the mammoth daily, hummed like the noise of a low wind. As Kirk Phillips turned the nose of the big auto stage down the road, the crowds, waiving copies of The Times, gave three cheers for Gen. Otis, three cheers for The Times, cheers for Kirk Phillips—and they were still cheering when the auto stage bowled out of sight, headed for Pine Crest, Dr. J. N. Bayly's romantic resort.

There a similar surprise, a similar greeting and a like cheering farewell featured the arrival and departure of the newspaper special.

At Squirrel Inn a like demonstration followed. Several camps along the way between Squirrel Inn and Little Bear Valley were served with The Times, and at 10:30 o'clock Little Bear Valley was reached. Here, about a pine-shrouded lake, the Great Arrowhead reservoir and power project are under way and nearing completion.

Since this first auspicious trip each morning The Times auto special leaves San Bernardino, receiving a big welcome at the mountain resorts. The passengers on the auto stage, which will continue its daily trips throughout the summer, hugely enjoy the novelty of hearing in the demonstrative welcome which falls to the newspaper folks, who are thus giving the distant mountain sojourners the first early-morning-news-delivery service ever inaugurated in Southern California.

The return trip by the auto stage is made during the cool of the evening, the big passenger machine getting into San Bernardino at 7:30 o'clock. With a combination of morning delivery of The Times and a daily auto-stage service to and from these resorts in the San Bernardino Mountains, the mountains as a summer retreat have become more than ever popular.

ELECTRIC FARM IS NOVEL PLACE.

ALL THE WORK IS DONE BY ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT.

Motor Trucks Added to Implements that Include Machinery for Milking Cows, Churning, Washing Dishes and Performing Other Chores—Many Visitors Attracted.

The latest thing to bring out the wonderful progress made in the use of electricity is the "electric farm."

Located in the outskirts of Boston and operated by the Boston Edison Company, is a farm known as the "electric" farm, and with the addition of two electric motor trucks to the equipment a short time ago, its title to the name "Electric Farm" is indisputable.

Electricity does everything on this modern establishment, from drilling the grain to taking the products to market. Electricity cuts the fodder, milks the cows, washes the dishes, pumps the water, churns the butter and is thoroughly electrified in every department.

Thousands of visitors call at the farm every week and the atmosphere is almost electrified, according to a local resident, who paid a visit to the electric institution a short time ago.

Majestic Theater Treasurer to Be Mechanician in Phoenix Road Race This Fall.

James F. O'Shea, one of the most popular young "scouts" of this city, who in ordinary life is known as the treasurer of the Majestic Theater, will make his first appearance as an automobile race mechanician, in the Phoenix Road Race, which is scheduled for next fall, when he rides with

Jimmie O'Shea,

W. H. Carlson, Jr., another local boy who is well known as an automobile expert and a road driver.

"It has always been my ambition, to some day, ride in a great automobile race," said Jimmie, in speaking of the prospects for the coming grind. "The Phoenix has always appealed more strongly to my fancies, than any other event, including the Santa Monica or even the Indianapolis 500-mile affair, and I am really looking forward with pleasure to the hard race ahead. 'Bill' Carlson is a driver who has had enough experience to be considered a first rater, and I have an idea that the mechanician's job, though a hard one, will be great sport."

O'Shea has had considerable experience with automobiles and for the past two years, had been preparing himself for the opportunity when it would present itself, by working on his own car and helping others, with his eyes on the seat of a racing car.

It seems that Jimmie has chosen a very hard race, in which to make his debut, but he feels confident that he can stand the strain and suffer no after effects.

The coming Phoenix race is attracting many drivers who have never before attempted the course. Several amateurs have stated that they would drive their own cars and it is expected that the entry list will be larger than ever before.

SWIMMERS LINE UP.

L.A.A.C. Water Carnival on Twelfth Promises Good Sport and May Endanger Plunge Records.

The big swimming meet coming off next week at the L.A.A.C. is evoking lots of interest among the club members and the fact that the affair is to be of the handicap variety, giving everybody a chance, has caused every member of the club who can make a length of the tank by the use of water wings to get in and practice.

The process is to get Prof. Holborrow and his trusty stop-watch on the job and then swim one or two lengths against time, the said time to be used in making out the handicaps. The entrants in the plunge for distance and the high and fancy diving are also hard at work, Dem O'Melvany showing up prominently in both of these events.

The tank is 100 feet long and the records for one and two lengths are held by Holborrow, being fifteen seconds and thirty-five seconds, respectively. The times made by others in their trials are as follows: Pat Higgins, eighteen and forty-two seconds; Eli Brown, nineteen and forty-three seconds; Jack Watlington, nineteen and forty-five seconds; Les Henry, twenty-one and forty-eight seconds. The handicaps will be made out very soon and a great deal of improvement is looked for from those who are practicing so hard for the meet.

The Pig Forever.

[Dundee Advertiser:] Boys' and girls' essays are so remarkable sometimes as to suggest the conscious cleverness of the adult. Here are some, pure and unadulterated, sent in for the children's essay competition in connection with the Darwen Agricultural Show. Probably you think you know something of the pig already. It will be an instructive exercise to fill out your knowledge of this animal from one of the essays: "For the pig to die" (we are informed) "is to be born again to a sphere of greater utility. When we get out of bed in the morning we brush our hair and clothes with its bristles; for our breakfast we have a crisp, savory piece of bacon. When we arrive home for our dinner we find some tender chops awaiting us, and when we go back to work we feel as strong as Jack Johnson. On our arrival home to tea we find some pork sausages frizzling in the pan, and we have our supper of cold saunsares, which perhaps disturbs our sleep. And we dream of bacon, pork chops and sausages, and the cause of all this is the pig."

What Rim-Cutting Costs in Tires

An Average Waste of 23 Per Cent

We sent men to a plant which deals with old rubber. They examined there thousands of ruined tires, of nearly every make.

And they found that 23 per cent of the old-type tires—of the clincher tires—were rim-cut.

Some were slowly wrecked by running soft. Some were wrecked in a moment by running flat.

They proved that nearly one-fourth of all the upkeep was due to rim-cut tires.

All Needless Waste

No-Rim-Cut tires end this loss forever. Out of over 1,250,000 sold not one has ever rim-cut.

All the cost and worry of rim-cutting is now a needless waste.

10% Oversize

Then No-Rim-Cut tires—the new-type tires—are 10 per cent over the rated size.

And that 10 per cent oversize, under average conditions, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

That's another saving.

200,000 Users

Some 200,000 motor car owners have proved out Goodyear tires. About one-third of all cash users of them.

As a result, No-Rim-Cut tires now far outsell any other tires. The sale today is 11 times larger than three years ago.

You are paying twice the cash for tires until you use this type.

Our 1912 Tire Book—based on 13 years of tire making—is filled with facts you should know. Ask us to mail it to you.

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) July 6.—"I want to see another pair of boxing gloves, either in private or in public," emphatically declared Champion Jack Johnson, while here a few hours tonight, en route to Chicago. Johnson was in a happy mood, unmarred by his fight yesterday with Jim Flynn at Las Vegas.

"If Al Palzer wants to fight me," declared the champion, "he will have to do it not later than Labor Day, for on the day following I will retire from the ring forever. That's final—I am through for good."

Johnson said he had cleared $35,000 on his victory over Flynn. He received $21,000 from Jack Curley, promoter, and won $5000 in betting himself.

TEDDY TETZLAFF WINS FREE-FOR-ALL AT TACOMA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, July 6.—The result of the free-for-all were as follows: Tetzlaff, first; Bergdoll, second; Devore, third; Verbeck, fourth; Cooper fifth.

Unofficial time: Tetzlaff, 3:37:00.33. Bergdoll, 3:38:49.85. Devore, 3:52:-34.

Tetzlaff lost a lap when he went to the pit for gasoline and on account of engine trouble. Bergdoll, in a Benz, and Devore in a National, gained a lap. Tetzlaff reeled off the fastest lap in 4:12, Devore in 4:24, Bergdoll in 4:28. Cooper is five laps and Verbeck two laps behind the leaders.

In the forty-fifth lap Tetzlaff was passed on coming into the back stretch. Devore, Verbeck and Bergdoll were bunched together. Devore was forced to go to the pits for gas and Verbeck passed him. Tetzlaff managed to retain the lead.

With four laps to go, Devore, Bergdoll and Verbeck were still running together with Cooper four laps in the rear, but running steadily.

Verbeck came into the pit in the forty-third lap with engine trouble and retired to fourth place, Bergdoll going to third place. Tetzlaff had gained two laps on the field and was leading with Devore in second place.

Sixty thousand persons were at the Puyallup automobile race course when the hour of starting the 500-mile free-for-all race.

The cars got away at intervals of two minutes, at 1:50, in the following order:

Benz, (Hughes.)
National, (Devore.)
Fiat, (Cooper.)
Benz, (Bergdoll.)
Fiat, (Tetzlaff.)
Benz, (Mulford.)
Fiat, (Verbeck.)
Cole, (Blizzard.)

Bergdoll's clutch stuck at the start, but instantly readjusted himself.

Hughes did the first lap in 4:15. Bergdoll passed the National in the first lap, making the five miles in 4:17. Tetzlaff did the first lap in 4:26. Verbeck's time was 4:34.

Before the last Fiat was out of sight, Hughes was back in the stretch, making his second lap in 4:09. Cooper followed in 4:28. Bergdoll came around in 4:27. Hughes' second lap was made in 4:20. Cole did not complete the first lap until the other cars had been around twice, and was evidently out of the race. Engine trouble put the National in the pit at the end of the second lap, but Devore got away quickly. After completing three laps, Hughes went into the pit and out of the race with engine trouble.

At the end of the first ten laps, Tetzlaff's time was 41 minutes, 5 seconds; Bergdoll was second, 42 minutes, 8 seconds; Cooper third, 42 minutes, 59 seconds; Devore fourth, 43 minutes, 34 seconds.

Twice in passing the grand stand portions of damaged tires flew in the stand.

The race in the fifteenth lap was between Tetzlaff and Bergdoll for first and second place, with Cooper and Verbeck running neck and neck for third position.

Tetzlaff made the twenty-fifth lap in 4:03 and Bergdoll in 4:11. The running order at the end of this lap, half way through the race, was as follows:

Tetzlaff, Bergdoll, Verbeck, Cooper and Devore.

The Benz car was delayed in the twenty-ninth lap in consequence of tire trouble, it taking 5:56 to complete this lap. The National car jumped into second place on its thirty-first lap, when Verbeck in his Fiat, went into the pit, due to engine trouble. The Benz dropped into fourth place as a result of chain trouble, the Fiat going into third position.

Great Reception.

During the afternoon the royal party proceeded the full length of the course and received a most hearty welcome.

The barge used today was built by order of King William III for Queen Mary in 1689, and is one of the oldest vessels in England. It was used for many years to convey the English Kings and Queens between their royal residence at Greenwich and Westminster.

Their wise coaching, signal tipping, etc., were pointed out as invaluable for the Mackmen. But Cornelius himself must not have thought them indispensable, for they were allowed to go last winter.

When the Cincinnati Reds started out like a house afire this spring, we were told that it was the coaching of the pitchers by Heinie Peitz which was working wonders with the club. When the Reds hit the toboggan, however, Heinie was all but forgotten.

The White Sox in the American League showed unexpected strength early in the season. The sagacious counsel of "Kil" Gleason, his tactics on the coaching line, were of course, responsible. Little was said of the wonderful box work of Lange and Walsh, of the hitting of the outfield, the play of Weaver at short and Zeider at first. Gleason was the hero.

WOLVERTON SIGNS CRACK PITCHER.

Another remarkable young pitcher has been secured by the management of the Highlanders, although practically all the other major league clubs have been bidding for his services for nearly two years. Davis, of Williams College, is the man, and it is said that the contract he has signed calls for $5000 in salary. Davis is a right-hander, possessing great speed, curves and control. He has been a sensation in the college baseball world, and has helped Williams to defeat practically all of her rivals.

Davis is about 5 feet 10½ inches tall and weighs 185 pounds. He is considered the leading college pitcher, both East and West, and he will report to Manager Wolverton at once.

RIVERS AND AD WILLING.

Champion Will Give Rivers Another Fight.

McCarey and Wolgast Have Quarrel

Over Uncle Tom's Refusal to Give Belt.

The ill wind that is bound to benefit somebody has come to the rescue of the unfortunate end of the Wolgast-Rivers fight.

Although Wolgast feels very badly over the criticism that has come upon him—as he feels unjustly—he is somewhat cheered by the remarkable boom it has given the fight pictures.

On account of the argument as to foul-or-no-foul, a fierce demand has sprung up for the fight pictures which, of course, will settle all the controversy.

Yesterday an avalanche of telegrams came to the champion from all over the United States. Jimmie Coffroth offered Ad $5000 cash for his share of the pictures in California alone. Wolgast refused. He stated yesterday that he expects to make $7000 or $8000 out of the pictures.

Wolgast and Uncle Tom McCarey had a violent controversy yesterday over the famous championship belt. McCarey has decided not to award it to Wolgast and Ad went down yesterday to find out why not.

"Whose belt is this?" demanded McCarey. "It's mine, isn't it? I can give it to anyone I choose, can't I? Well, I have decided not to give it to you on the showing made in this fight."

Whereupon, the champion stated it as his opinion that the belt was nothing but thin washed gold, anyhow, and a very poor excuse for a belt.

Both Rivers and Wolgast stated yesterday their willingness to fight a return battle in the fall.

"Rivers can certainly have a fight if he wants its," said the champion, yesterday, "but I don't think he wants one very badly. I never have fought a boy yet who ever had any fight left in him afterward, and Rivers lost all his desire to fight before he got out of the ring. I would just as soon fight him tomorrow, if he wanted to fight.

"I had that fight all planned out in my mind and it was going just as I expected it to go. During the next round or two I would have sailed in and worn him down. I could feel him slipping."

Rivers's manager stated that if Wolgast does not come through promptly with an agreement for a return fight, he intends to take the Mexican boy to the East for a campaign of theatrical work and short fights.

Wolgast is somewhat undecided just what he will do this summer, but will probably go to Oregon, where he is buying a big cattle ranch. He is having a special automobile built for his wife and may possibly make the trip up the Coast by motor car.

Willie Ritchie, the remarkable little San Francisco fighter who made his first reputation on Freddie Welsh and, a few months ago, gave Wolgast such a hard rub in San Francisco, is anxious to get a fight with either Wolgast or Rivers. The manager of the latter fighter says that, if Wolgast cannot be had, Rivers will give Ritchie the first fight.

Whatever match is made will have to be made quickly, as Wolgast will leave in the next few days for the north.

Abdul, the "terrible Turk," arrived yesterday from Las Vegas, where he acted as second to Jim Flynn in the Johnson-Flynn fight. Abdul says that Johnson is all in and made Flynn wild with fury by holding on to avoid punishment.

McDONNELL HOME.
WITH BAD INJURY.

"Speed" McDonnell, the popular utility man of the Vernon team was brought here yesterday morning from San Francisco, suffering from a slight concussion of the brain.

While playing with the Tigers in San Francisco on Thursday, he was hit on the head by a thrown ball and rendered unconscious. Speed's many friends hope that he will be able to play ball next week.

CHANCE TO WIN PENNANT BEFORE HE WILL RETIRE.

FRANK LEROY CHANCE, manager of the Chicago Cubs, is not a nervous wreck; he is not on the verge of mental collapse, and he is not going to retire from the game as manager and return to his home in California. Instead, Frank Chance, the Peerless Leader when his Cubs reigned supreme in the baseball world, is going to continue managing the Cubs until he wins another pennant and a world's championship.

When the Cubs were in the East recently, startling stories were penned that Chance's health had failed him completely; that the old attack of dizzy spells as a result of being "beaned" twenty-four times during his career had returned, and that doctors feared if he did not give up the managerial worries the result might be fatal.

WOULD WIN PENNANT AGAIN.

"What, me quit?" was Chance's sharp reply to a query asking the truth of the tales that he was going to give way as manager of the Cubs. "Huh, not yet! I'm going to win another National League pennant, beat the American League champion and then maybe I'll step aside.

"I don't think I'll ever go back on first base, though. I tried to play several times since Suggs cracked me on the head, but when I get in there I become excited, can't control myself, and, together with the terrific heat, the dizzy spells return. I'm getting along fine now; my health is as good as could be expected and you can say that I'll manage the Cubs as long as my work is satisfactory to President Murphy.

"Do I look like a fellow who is a nervous wreck? I've been in this steady drill for some time, but they'll never ship me out to California with the Cubs right in this pennant chase. At times I may become nervous and fret, but who wouldn't, when you see the umpires rob you right before your face?

BEAN BALL PUTS HIM OUT.

"I'd be playing today but for stopping so many wild ones with my head. The other day I was talking about it and by actual count I have been 'beaned,' that's what you call it, I believe, twenty-four times. The first terrific knock was a few years ago, when Howard Camnitz caught me, and then in April of last year George Suggs finished the job."

Maurice McLoughlin (Left) and Tom Bundy,

Who won the double tennis championship of the Pacific Coast in the big tourney at the Los Angeles Country Club yesterday, and who will represent the West in the preliminary round of the national championships at Chicago August 1.

MAURICE M'LOUGHLIN of San Francisco and Thomas C. Bundy of Los Angeles won the Pacific Coast championship in the tennis doubles yesterday at the Los Angeles Country Club, by defeating Ellis Fottrell and William Johnston of San Francisco, 6-4, 4-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

The winners will go to Chicago and compete in the sectional championship tournament which is to be held on the courts of the Onwentsia Country Club, August 1. The winners there will go to Newport, R. I., where they will play Raymond D. Little and Gustave F. Touchard, present national doubles champions, for the championship of the United States.

M'LOUGHLIN AND BUNDY.

Bundy and McLoughlin in the second and third sets.

YOUNGSTERS IN LEAD.

The fourth set opened under auspices that indicated a possible defeat for the champions. McLoughlin served and lost the game. He lost the first two points by failing to handle Johnston's returns. On the next serve Johnston put the ball down the side-line out of reach, and immediately followed it with a smash that gave his team the game. Then Fottrell lost a game on his serve. It was neck and neck until 4-4 was reached, when the champions got the upper hand. The youngsters made a great fight in the last game, the score standing at deuce four times, but they lost.

PACE INCREASES.

In the fifth and deciding set, McLoughlin and Bundy increased their pace and the youngsters seemed to slow up. Johnson was wild in handling McLoughlin's service in the first game and the champions won easily. Fottrell took the next game and then Bundy and McLoughlin ran the score up to 4-1. Bundy's good placing and McLoughlin's smashes have the youngsters on the run.

But when Fottrell got another serve he won. Then the champions won on Bundy's service, making the score 5-2. Johnston's service netted another game, which was the last Fottrell and Johnston got. McLoughlin's service did the work in the last game. The final point was made when Fottrell failed to return on one of Mac's terrible serves.

In the final round of the women's singles, Miss Alice Scott defeated Miss Mildred Dawson. 6-1, 6-3.

TENNIS ONE OF OLDEST BALL GAMES

Most people when they speak of "tennis" refer to lawn tennis and not to the far more ancient game which was the forefather of the modern adaptation. Tennis proper is perhaps the oldest of all existing ball games. It is also one of the most difficult games to learn, on account of the number and intricacy of its rules, which, however, when learned make it one of the most interesting.

It has an additional interest, also, owing to its historical associations. Tennis first made its appearance in Europe in the Middle Ages, when it was played in open courts, and in the parks belonging to the feudal castles of France and Italy. The game is mentioned in Arthurian romance, but it was certainly unknown in the time of King Arthur.

The name of tennis is suggested to have sprung from the exclamation "Tenez," which was used by early French players when serving the ball. In France the game is called jeu de paume. It would seem from this that originally the ball was struck with the palm of the hand only, as in the game of fives. Afterward the players wore a glove, as they do still in the Basque country. Strings and cross strings were next stretched upon the glove to give a greater impulse to the ball, and from this to the addition of a short handle was an easy transition.

The game was much improved by the building of closed-in tennis courts, at first with walls only, then with both roofs and walls. In France they still play it, sometimes in the open, and in Italy a rough version of it, called pallone, can still be seen. In England there are twenty-seven courts, and there is one in Dublin.

BALL PLAYERS DO NOT TRAIN PROPERLY

"Ball players have no idea about how to fit themselves for hard work," says the trainer of a big league team. "They eat too much, smoke too much and do not cool out properly after a game. Imagine a player cutting out meat and vegetables and eating pastry three times a day! Pie for breakfast is a new one on me, yet I know of at least one man who never goes without several pieces of pie each day. Cigarettes and cigars are used without discretion, which makes the players short winded and also affects their eyes. Some of them are in such a hurry to get away from the grounds that they hustle their clothes on without stopping perspiration and then go into the street to have their limbs stiffened by cold winds. In my opinion ball players should be trained like all classes of athletes—fighters, runners, football players and oarsmen. But it's hard to convince them. They seem to know it all and regard a trainer as a nuisance."

Baseball men say that the only trainer who exercises absolute authority is the colored man employed by the Giants. McGraw backs him up to the limit and is ready to punish members of the team who do not obey him. The result is that the Giants are fit all the time.

JACK BRITTON HAS MATCH IN SIGHT.

(By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.)

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, July 5.—[Special Dispatch.] Jack Britton, the California lightweight who for weeks has been industriously challenging all the local men without getting so much as an answer, has at last found one willing to talk fight.

Harry Stone, the ghetto champion, has signified his willingness to take a chance. The men will probably be signed to box at the St. Nicholas Athletic Club within a week or two.

YANKEES WIN.

Belote of the Chicago Athletic Club, and Clement P. Wilson of Coe College, Iowa.

Five of these eight qualified in the semi-finals. They were Lippincott, whose feat in the earlier heat did not tire him too much to keep him in front in his semi-final heat; Belote, Drew, Craig and Meyer.

Eight Americans also qualified for the 800-meter contest: Edmundson of Seattle, David S. Colwell of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Herbert N. Putman of Cornell (second to Mann of England;) John Paul Jones of Cornell, Ira N. Davenport, University of Chicago; Harland W. Holden, Bates College; Melvin W. Sheppard, Irish-American Athletic Club and James E. Meredeth, Mercersburg Academy.

The results of the qualifying heats gave England four men for future contests and Canada four to eight for the United States.

While the foot races were being run the throwers of the javelin were at work in another part of the field. No Americans appeared among the winners. E. Lemming of Sweden, was first to the great joy of the native population with a throw of sixty meters and sixty-four centimeters. This is a world's record.

The 60,000 spectators of all nations joined generously and cheerfully with the American contingent in its enthusiasm over these early signs that the American team had not been overated by enthusiasts devoted to its fortunes.

First heat, semi-final, 100 meters: Howard P. Drew, Springfield, Mass., High School, first; E. Kern, Germany, second; Ira Courtney, Seattle, and P. C. Gerhardt, San Francisco, were distanced. Time, 11 seconds.

Second heat: G. H. Patching, South Africa, first; K. Lindberg, Sweden, second. There were no Americans in this heat. Time, 10 9-10 seconds.

Third heat: Alvah T. Myers, Irish American, A. C., first; D. H. Jacobs, England, second. Time, 10 7-10 seconds.

Fourth heat: Ralph C. Craig, Detroit, first; R. Rau, Germany, second. Time, 10 7-10 seconds.

Fifth heat: D. F. Lippincott, University of Pennsylvania, first; W. R. Applegarth, England, second. Time, 10 7-10 seconds.

Sixth heat: G. V. Belots, Chicago, first; V. A. Stewart, Australia, second. Time, 11 1-10 seconds.

First heat 800 meters: David S. Caldwell, Massachusetts Agricultural College, beat the famous Italian, E. Lunghi, by five yards. J. Caulle of France made the pace for 550 meters, but he later dropped back. Walter McClure, Olympic Club, San Francisco, was outdistanced. Time, 1m. 58 2-5s.

Second heat: P. E. Mann, England, first; Herbert N. Putnam, Cornell University, second. Time, 1m. 56s.

Third heat: John Paul Jones, Cornell University, first; A. Z. Cortesao, Portugal, made the pace for three-quarters of the distance. Jones then forged ahead, finishing easily six yards in front. Time, 2m. 1 4-5s.

Fourth heat: Clarence S. Edmundson, Seattle A. A., first; J. L. Tait, Ontario, Can., second; C. A. C. Poulenard, France, third. The five competitors were closely bunched. R. Burton of England was fourth. Time, 1m. 56 1-2s.

Fifth heat: Ira N. Davenport, University of Chicago, first; F. H. Hulford, England, second. The three English competitors did good team work. R. Hales made the running for 400 meters and then withdrew. Time, 1m. 59s.

Sixth heat: Harlan W. Holden, Bates College, first; E. Bjorn, Sweden, second. The Swede made a good race in the last half, but Holden finished easily in front of the others, including a Turk, who made one burst to the front with the star and crescent on his red jersey, but was outdistanced. Time, 1m. 58 1-10s.

Seventh heat: J. C. Soutter, England, first; Melvin W. Sheppard, Irish-American, second.

The result was a surprise. The Englishman sprinted 200 yards from the finish and crossed the tape six yards ahead of Sheppard, who appeared to be winded in the first 200 yards.

Eighth heat: G. M. Brock, Ontario, first; James E. Meredith, Mercersburg Academy, second; J. A. Victor, South Africa, third. It was a beautifully-close race between four Anglo-Saxon competitors. The Canadian burst to the front a few feet before the tape. Time, 1m. 57s.

THE JUMP-UPS

VERSES BY PAUL WEST
DRAWINGS BY WM. H. LOOMIS

1.—The silly season had arrived—it comes this time each year—
When Newport startles all the world by doing something "queer";
So then behold fair Genevieve her pretty forehead knitting,
Some foolish and extravagant new "stunt" in hope of hitting.

2.—At last a plan occurred to her which made her cry: "Oh, that's
The very thing! I'll give a tea to all the smart set cats!
All fashionable felines shall the guests of honor be!
The papers will be full of it and triumph I can see!"

3.—She sent her invitations out. Of course they caused a stir
And Mrs. Jump-Up smiled to hear the nice things said of her.
"And, Jim," she cried, "don't spoil it all! Take care, for mercy's sake!"
"I'll keep away, my dear," said Jim, "then I CAN'T make no break!"

4.—The pampered pets arrived in state. A wondrous scene they made,
Bejewelled cats from Persia, sleek Angoras gem-arrayed.
They sat sedately in their chairs, their mistresses beside them,
While with the choicest dainties servants, uniformed, supplied them!

5.—Reporters and photographers were there from far and wide,
And Genevieve was interviewed and blushed with modest pride,
And finally a camera was set to "take" the scene
For a full-page illustration in some high-class magazine.

Thought he: "By jinks! I'd like to see how Gen is gettin' on!"
So in he went, forgetting that his fav'rite bull dog, Slats,
Was at his side, an enemy to all the race of cats!

7.—Slats saw the scene. He gave one growl! Then hurtled through the air
And forty felines yowled in fear and scattered everywhere!
Ten thousand dollars' worth of cats, with jewels worth still more,
Out through the doors and windows went as cats ne'er flew before!

8.—Of course the Jump-Ups had to pay for all the missing cats.
"I wonder," muttered Genevieve, "dear Jim, 'twixt you and Slats
Which is the bigger numbskull, eh?" Said Jim, "Well, I've a hunch
That prize belongs to anyone who'd ask fool cats to lunch!"

An' I tried to get 'em out an' 'ey wouldn't not come out, an' I sed, "Here you ol' porkypines, take your ol' prickers out o' mine Puppo!" An' 'ey sed, "Oh! he's on'y a houn'!" An' I sed, "Makes no diff'-runce if he is a houn'—you got to quit prickin' mine dog aroun'!"

So the porkypines taked the quills an' sticked 'em in a penholder, an' jus' 'en a big stoutish Lion comed roarin' 'long an'—an' ev'eybuddy was scairt 'ceptin' me, an' I sed, "Good mornin'! How-de-do!" An' he sed, "None o' yer jaw. I'm the Lion of the law!" An' I jus' laffed at him an' he looked po-voked an' went sneakin' 'way from ther' an' he was eatin' peanuts.

An' all the 'ittle porkypines comed back an' 'ey sed, "Kiddo, I 'spect you is goin' to be a li-er." An' I sed, "Nuffin o' the sort!" I sed—an' me'n Puppo was mad 'en an' I jus' taked a n'airship what I—er—what I had in mine pocket an' we flied 'way—fa-ar 'way from 'at coal mine an' those impident porkypines.

An' jus' as we got middle o' the big Ocean the airship busted an'—we—er—we jus' had to swim all the way home 'gen—an' we had a cottage by the seashore an' Bridgie was callin' us to come home to lunch—an' we telled her 'bout all the dangeriferous x-periences what we had—an' she sed, "Well, jus' hurry up an' get dressed —'cause 'yer lunch is ready. Oh you Kiddo!"

FOULARD: A FASHIONABLE FRIEND

THE summer outfit that does not include a foulard dress is incomplete. During the days that are undeniably in the 90-degree class, or on cooler days, the silk frock can be worn with satisfaction and modistic distinction. In America the cost of silk is low; the variety is just as wide as that offered by the mills of Lyons, and with models before her, any one who can sew should be able to construct a dress that, in a foulard form, will be a fashionable friend.

Here are many patterns in foulard silks today. The striped silk is shown in the dress trimmed with wide bands of plain silk and mousseline. The bodice has bretelles of the transparent fabric edged with silk, ending in a short tab below a crushed girdle of silk. There is slight fullness at the hips. Two bands on the skirt are applied in horizontal lines. A chemisette and undersleeves are of shadow lace, while the use of white buttons on the vest and dark ones on the plain satin is noticeable.

A small piece of dotted foulard is used as trimming for plain silk. The white with blue coinspots forms a shield and panel on the bodice and tab cuffs on the full sleeves. A narrow panel and an inlaid band of white decorate the skirt. There are two ruffles of net edging each sleeve, and buttons hold the three tucks at the elbows. A blue velvet girdle shows a normal waist line.

Plain foulard in old blue is combined with ecru ratine lace in the dressy model. The bodice is of the lace, over which is a plain silk bertha, edged with pleatings and folded in at the waist line. The pleated ends extend below the girdle. A pleated ruffle finishes each sleeve. On the skirt the wide lace forms a deep hem headed with knife pleating. A sash hangs at the back.

The use of buttons is shown in the checked foulard silk. The white vest of silk is trimmed with white buttons in a straight line. A panel of white is set in at the front and trimmed with dark buttons. The soft girdle is fastened at the side under a bow. This design is suitable for a stout figure, the long line in front tending to increase the appearance of height.

Bordered foulards are in high favor. A different use of the border is shown in the spiral trimmings on the skirt. This "wrapped" tunic is very good, by the way. The bodice has one side draped and caught under three enamel buttons. A vest of the border is edged with tiny buttons. The guimpe is of cream shadow lace.

Foulard in a stunning coat model is shown. The bodice is made with a deep circular peplum, and huge directoire revers form the trimming. The sleeves are bell-shaped, falling over lace cuffs. The skirt has side pleats, stitched down halfway. A silk dress of an ornate design should not be overburdened with trimming, but should be designed as this model.

If foulard be chosen, the practical feature of using it in another form must not be forgotten. It can be made over into underskirts, veiled blouses, and forms an excellent factor of a combination frock. At the alluring prices that are offered by our merchants, the foulard frock should appeal to every one who loves the practical and the beautiful.

BEWARE OF THE HARMFUL FLY.

If the good-for-goody books he is called "harmless" and sundry more active virtues are attributed to him.

Stanley's Uncle Toby was in novice mandolined that "our army swore terribly in Flanders." But what youngster has not been reproved for killing a housefly and had the admonition driven up to the hilt into his consciousness by the story of the old soldier who took the buzzing bluebottle gently in his hand and raised the window to let it go into the free openair with—

"There is room in the world for thee and me!"

A modern exegist may have had the incident in his mind rather than Uncle Toby's love passages with the widow, when he described the veteran as "the incarnation of the sentimentalism of the eighteenth century."

A fallacy sentimentalist says that Uncle Toby "epitomizes the wisdom of love." There was neither love nor wisdom in turning a carrion breeder loose upon a confiding world. He acted according to his lights, no doubt, but the light that was in him was darkness so far as the natural history of the fly went.

Certain Species Always Abhorred.

From time immemorial certain species of the genus "Musca" have been abhorred of men. The "grievous swarm" that "corrupted the land" of Egypt drove Pharaoh to negotiations with the head of the Hebrew rebellion. A scare or an epidemic, sitting near an open window in a Fort Said hotel, I was teased out of all appetite for breakfast by the entrance of a swarm of the winged plagues—perhaps left over when the "grievous swarms" were exorcised. They had green bodies and iridescent wings, long legs and the most vicious buzz conceivable.

What is known with us as "the stable fly" is more like them than any other variety familiar to us in America. This fly, as hostlers can testify, stings when molested. They will tell you, too, that the bite is more venomous than the sting of bee or wasp or gnat than that of the "yellow jacket."

Neither the hostler nor his master bethinks himself that the germs injected with the acid of the "sting" are especially deadly because bred in stable filth. I know of a groom who lost his hand from the inflammation and gangrene succeeding the bite of a stable fly. I also knew of a fine young fellow who lost his life because a rope he had cast about the neck of a restive colt was wrapped about his wrist and scratched the skin. In this enlightened day we are on the watch for what are loosely termed "stable bacilli."

Nauseous the First Thought.

The greenish fly that frequents barnyard and horse stalls is comparatively cleanly out of the dwelling of human beings should be stray so far from home. He bites, and he is dirty. That is enough for our neat housewife to know. Why his bite is virulent and how he carries dirt into clean places is none of her affair.

The blue bottle is a more frequent invader. His livery is a degree less objectionable than the dull greenish coat and black breeches of his distant relative on the Egyptian side of the family. The housemother of average intelligence recognizes in the loud hum of the fellow who bumps against the windows and ceiling the threat of danger. If he alights upon meat he pollutes it. He is known as an habitué of questionable resorts. He is noisy and intrusive. She is "nervous" as long as he is within hearing.

If she ever heard of "Mariana of the Moated Grange" she would have despised that lovelorn damsel for sitting still to nurse her grief while the "blue fly sung on the pane." The up to date Mariana would have had an object in life until the unclean "beastie" was run down and killed.

Housefly Never Welcome Guest.

Our "harmless" house fly (Musca domestica) was never welcome, even in the middle ages of housewifery and science. That he was tolerated within bounds and even excused for depredations which would have condemned his relatives to death is certainly true. I well recall that lecturers and essayists upon entomology justified his existence upon the ground that he was a scavenger and subsisted upon visible and invisible noxious elemental matter which might breed epidemics if left in the air.

The worst that could be urged against the "harmless creature" was expressed by a boy who, having got half asleep under the exposition of the "divinely appointed use of the dear little fly" of a visiting superintendent (that sporadic scourge of the Sunday school!) was brought up all standing by the question hurled across the room:

"Now, will that bright little boy sitting on my left tell us why pretty little flies were made?"

"To pester people!" stammered the startled truth teller.

His elders would not have gainsaid the statement. The Musca domestica "pestered" neat housekeepers out of temper and manners. They darkened rooms and meshed netting over windows and hung their beds with lace curtains, and in the sunny south stationed a piccaninny at each corner of the table during meals to beat off the hungry hordes, which, if left to their own devices, would have settled in coffee cups and thickened soups and blackened sweets out of sight.

Scruples of Tender Hearted.

Fly specks were deprecated as tokens of careless housekeeping as well as because they were unsightly. When poisoned fly papers were invented tender hearted folk had scruples about using them. Not for the good and sufficient reason that should banish them from every home—to wit: that the stricken wretches fall into food and crawl into corners to die, leaving poisonous atoms to avenge their taking off. Our mothers thought it "cruel to kill the harmless innocents."

I have heard them dennat upon the evil effects of the wholesale slaughter upon the infant mind. Uncle Toby left his imprint upon the generation following. The fly, in their opinion, had as much right to His, liberty, and the enjoyment of happiness as the human biped.

In literature and in moralizing talk he was, in a sense, the friend of civilized mankind as pyralene is respected by sentimental herbalists as "the white man's foot." He had his place in the economy of nature or he would not have been created.

Dangers of Mosquito Discredited.

All these things are recounted that those who have never bestowed much thought upon the insignificant insect may comprehend the difficulty of reversing preconceived and rooted beliefs even when they are held by intelligent readers and observers.

The Harmful Fly

It was a long time before the rank and file of our people would credit the fact that mosquitoes and malaria occupy respectively the place of cause and effect. That a tiny pimple that itches for an hour, and then is forgotten, may be the seat of disease defying the skill of the medical fraternity for years, was not more incredible than that a fly may bring enough disease breeding stuff upon his legs to infect a family and neighborhood.

It was easier to cast discredit upon the mosquito because he is in himself such a disreputable member of society. We believe him capable of dark and bloody deeds because he stings while he sings. It could not be cruel to whack him out of being at sight, and whenever seen. Without remorse we pour kerosene upon stagnant pools, and flood marshes with the same. Entomologists may prate to their heart's content of the exquisite skill with which the female mosquito (who, by the way, is the working member of the firm, stinging included), builds a waterproof boat of her eggs and performs other marvelous deeds. We massacre her and her broods mercilessly. "Mosquitoes and malaria" are linked in the mind of every schoolboy and farmhand.

Dragon flies, once hunted by the superstitious and ignorant, are as scarce now as are South Carolina bunards. Dragon flies gobble mosquitoes by the score. We discuss seriously the practicability of exterminating the species.

Aversion Absurd to Unthinking.

That we should have the like aversion to the quiet house fly, that makes little fuss in the world, is stingless, and minds its own business, except when it inadvertently "pesters" a candy eating child, or tickles the nose of drowsy pater familias on Sunday afternoon, or leaves a trail of specks upon mirror or window pane, is absurd.

Yet listen to a scientific description of the Musca domestica:

"It lays its eggs in clusters in almost any kind of decaying matter or filth—such as manure and carrion—and multiplies with amazing rapidity. The maggots hatch in a day, or less, according to the heat of decomposition to which they are subjected. The larvæ attain their full size in about two weeks, and then crawl into some dry place to develop. In a weather ten days the perfect fly is ready to emerge from the 'pupa.'

"The Musca domestica has an intricate and wonderful organism, admirably adapted for its life work. The suctorial proboscis exudes a viscid matter when the fly feeds upon dry substances. This, by moistening the food, prepares it to be sucked. The feet are supplied with hairs that terminate in flat disks. Each disk acts as an air tight 'sucker,' enabling the fly to walk with its head down upon the ceiling and upon smooth surfaces. These disks are supposed to exude a liquid which makes adhesion more complete than the suckers could do unaided."

Flies "as Big as Sheep."

We are reminded, in reading the entrant of "Gulliver's Travels in Brobdingnag," of his disgust in tracing the progress of the flies (as big as English sheep) along the ceiling by the trails of viscid matter exuded from their feet. Our disgust is as real in thinking that when the "harmless" thief alights upon a lump of sugar in our saucer or sugar bowl he moistens it with the same exudation, so that he can suck it. Yet we brush him away carelessly and drop that lump into the second cup of tea or coffee!

His feet have trodden the manure heap, and numberless germs of filth and corruption adhere to his body. We smile indulgently at the graceful little thing as he basks in the sunshine streaming across the window sill and preens the fine feathers the microscope has revealed as exquisitely delicate and tinted with varied hues and then rubs his sides and back with the brushes attached to his feet. He is the impersonation of cleanliness—a dandy of nicety.

The telltale microscope, if brought to bear upon the operation that amuses and interests us, would reveal tiny heaps of rotting matter scraped from his body when the weight becomes uncomfortable and deposited where the wind will waft it into our purse and lunch. He is fond, within and without. In our kitchens he is unspeakably vile. For where in the kitchen could one does not let the excrement of a spotted or scorched fly escape her eye to remain a mistress and seldom guest or the sugar bowl broken open or the bottom of the sugar barrel is scraped? If she be unusually watchful, she fishes out the remains of the "harmless little fly" and sends the dish in an unobtrusively as if he had not had his fate in broth, or gravy, or coffee.

A CHILD'S LINGERIE HAT

TODAY I am giving you something new for a child's lingerie hat. It is the dearest little mushroom bonnet that you ever wished to see on a little girl's head, and I am sure that you will work the design with great expression.

You will see that the design for the crown is given. Let me tell you about the brim. It should be a circular piece of lawn fifteen inches in diameter, and after hemming the edge by hand sew on a full of valenciennes lace to give a soft finish. On the middle of the top sew one of the daisies of the running design and add some buds and leaves. These bonnets have plain tops. It depends on your time and enthusiasm whether you will make the assurance of quality doubly sure.

A lingerie cap can be made of medium-weight linen or of fine muil or batiste or handkerchief linen. In the latter case, it should be made over a colored silk lining, and in this day of taffeta I would suggest it for a change.

After tracing the design on your material work the stems in outline stitch, using mercerized cotton. Whip over the stems, catching the overlapped stitches together. This gives a heavy cord-like effect.

The leaves are very effective if worked half in solid stitches and the other half in satin stitches, which, as you know, are parallel rows of tiny back stitches.

Pad the petals of the flowers with darning cotton and work across the petals in solid stitches.

Make the centers a cluster of French knots or a combination of solid work and seed stitches. The buds should be worked solid at the base, and French knots above.

Pad the scallops and work in buttonhole stitches. You will notice that there is a suggestion made for a hem. On one side work buttonholes, and on the other place washable buttons. The hat is easily unfastened for laundering.

When you place the puffed crown on the hat it is best to button the edge on buttons which are sewn on the brim. By basting the crown over the brim you can easily mark with pins just where the buttons and buttonholes should go.

Tie a band of ribbon around the crown and fasten under a pretty rosette at the side. The little bonnet is finished and is the quaintest thing that you can have. It's different and it's beautiful, and what more can you ask?

Empire Petticoats

THESE days of the lingerie dress women will need and want at least five or three of the new empire petticoats, and with joy in their hearts.

If you buy them ready made, however, to get a really good one trimmed as fine and frilly, you will have to pay a considerable expense—so why not make them yourself and have just the fine and good materials in the garment?

Patterns you can buy; they are cut on the lines of a princess petticoat, only with fewer gores. A six-gored skirt, with the waist line raised to the natural waist line or seven inches above the normal waist and joining to the left side of the placket is generally used. The skirt is fitted into the normal waist line, so there is practically no superfluous fullness to be conveyed above the top line of the skirt portion. Lace insertion and edging of the material finishes the low-cut bodice and the sleeves over the arms.

The skirt is finished with a deep flounce or several flounces of lace, embroidery or embroidered beading, through which ribbon is run, covers the seam joining the flounce, bodice and skirt portions of the petticoat is also placed at the bottom with narrow lace, and a ruffle of the same lace finishes the sleeves.

Any pretty white petticoat is desired. A fine nainsook or fine batiste is suitable, and the trimmings of valenciennes lace or delicately colored ribbon run in the side peep through which it is worn.

Those who wish to introduce a pretty touch of the lingerie gown, make the flounce of pink, blue, yellow, or some lawn with trimmings to correspond.

A comparatively plain petticoat may be prettily decorated with garnitures of silk, satin or lawn rosettes. Make your own dainty fingers work the lace trimming on the ruffle, festoons on the lace flounce of the skirt.

Ruffles of soft messaline are not really cost very little if you make them. Those made of taffeta, especially when a shirred flower is used on the edges are lovely under a lacy gown.

You can help but be pleased with the result if you make yourself an underskirt according to these directions.

Summer Pillows

FEW women realize that they can make the most delightful pillows in the summer, filling them with materials that are at hand when the warm weather makes days spent out of doors a boon to health and happiness.

The rose pillow is perhaps the best of all. Gather the petals of the roses when in full bloom and lay them on trays (the lids of large pasteboard boxes will do nicely) to dry in the shade.

When they have become thoroughly dry, add to them one ounce of powdered orris root, one-half an ounce of rose powder and twenty drops of oil of roses. Make an oblong pillow cover of glazed cambric, chintz or paper muslin any size you desire and fill it with rose petals. Sew it up at the open end and cover it with a slip of silk figured with roses. A plain rose-colored silk embroidered with a spray of roses in natural colors, or fine white handkerchief linen embroidered with garlands of roses, will be an ideal outer covering for a rose pillow.

Dried sweet fern makes a pleasant filling for the summer pillow. The ferns you will find growing in the woods and beside the small streams. Use the same method in drying these as you do in drying the rose petals. They will curl up and become quite brown in color; but the perfume from them will impart a delightful freshness to the room and will soothe to sleep the person who rests her head upon the pillow. A glazed cambric inner covering and a slip of pale green linen embroidered with a spray of feathery ferns done in white mercerized cotton or silk floss would be lovely. White silk embroidered with sprays of maidenhair fern in shades of pale green would make the daintiest of all covers for the fern pillow.

The heads or blossoms of the sweet vernal grass need not be dried before they are put into a cambric pillow cover. Cut the fluffy heads off short and mix them with a tablespoonful of powdered orris, then fill the pillow and slip on an outer covering of linen or cretonne. If the former, outline on it tufts or growing grass in green silk or mercerized cotton, and if you choose cretonne, select that with a grassy pattern on it.

Dried oak leaves emit that elusive woodsy perfume that is noticed when one first enters a forest of trees and growing plant life. These must be dried in the sun before placing them in the pillow cover. At once a design of oak leaves and acorns suggests itself to be worked on the outer cover of linen crash. The work is done in shades of brown and dark green, following nature as closely as possible.

Every one knows the delicious pungent perfume of the pine, fir and balsam needles. When dried and broken in small pieces they make splendid fillings for pillows. Gather these in the late summer and fill your pillow slips full. An outer covering of brown linen embroidered with pine branches, each topped with a pine cone, will be correct for these. Do this work with dark green silk, and work the cones solid in delicate shades of brown.

Without perfume, but a wonderfully soft filling for a pillow which you can gather by the roadside in the autumn, is the soft, fluffy, silky interior of the seed pod of the milkweed plant. Collect this before it is dry, when the pods have just burst open, and dry it in the house, for the least breath of wind will blow it about over everything if you are not careful. The best plan is to make a cover of netting and place the damp fluff in it and shake it up every once in a while, so that it will dry thoroughly all through. Your favorite sachet powder can be added to this if you desire a scented pillow. The flowery blossoms of the milkweed worked in deep pink violet shades go to decorate the outer covering of this pillow.

There you have them all, delightful pillows that can be made in the summer, beginning in the month of roses and gathering materials every month until October. Could you ask for a more delightful occupation or one that will give more pleasure or real comfort when the work is finished?

Now is the time to begin if you would have a complete set of summer pillows.

Dainty Bath Slippers

A CLEVER girl who could not afford to indulge her desire for good books was able to purchase several sets of standard works by selling the work of her own hands through the medium of one of the little shops that provide exclusive things for its customers.

Dainty slippers for the bedroom and bath she made of woven raffia sewed to leather soles such as are used for the knitted bedroom slippers.

First she cut a paper pattern of the upper portion of the slipper, and over this wove the raffia in and out in various pretty designs, often creating new ones as she worked. The soft natural color of the raffia was a splendid foundation for designs in bright colors. These she worked in with raffia, ribbon in narrow widths and thick woolen yarns. Colored beads were used also, and pretty little flowers and leaves were deftly fashioned of the straw.

The raffia is then lined with satin and a lining of satin is placed over the lamb's-wool lining on the soles. She always cuts part of this thick wool off first and sprinkles sachet powder over it, then covers it with satin, which is stitched neatly to the binding tape around the edge of the soles.

Each strand of raffia is turned in and the satin is basted to it, then a narrow silk tape is stitched on the edge as a binding; this is then whipped to the binding on the soles and up the center of the back. Narrow ribbon is run through the top and tied in a small flat bow in front. Others are finished with a cord of raffia.

Ratine and soft-colored turkish toweling are used for other slippers; little mules with only the front part of the soles covered—dainty things that can be slipped on and off with the greatest ease—and others she made of Japanese crepe, selecting a pattern that had in it small figures that could be placed in the center of the slipper's toe.

Very little time was consumed in making these slippers, and the materials were inexpensive, while the prices she received were in accordance with such articles made by hand; therefore the profit was good. The making of your boudoir slippers affords pleasant work for summer days, and, if you wish, several pairs can be made and laid away for holiday gifts for your friends.

The raffia slippers were made in sizes large enough to fit men, and I am sure your husband, brother or sweetheart would appreciate a pair as a birthday gift.

COTTON CREPE UNDERCLOTHES

WOMEN are just beginning to wake up to the advantages of cotton crepe as an ideal material for undergarments, both for themselves and for their children.

For summer underwear no material is daintier, and as it washes beautifully and requires no ironing, it is quite the most economical thing that can be worn, especially by the traveler and those who spend part of the warm season in summer hotels.

Another advantage is its comparative inexpensiveness; it is wide and can be bought for 15 and 18 cents the yard either in plain white or with delicate colored stripes.

Like all other cotton materials, it shrinks a little when washed; therefore it is best to immerse it for a few minutes in very hot water and hang it by the selvage edge to dry before the garments are cut out. When making up the garments, use as small a French seam as you can, and be careful not to stretch the material more than can be helped.

The daintiest "combinations" are trimmed with linen torchon lace around the neck, armholes and bottom of the skirt. The corset cover is gathered into inch-wide beading at the waist line and tied with wash ribbon. Beading may be placed around the neck also and ribbon run through that, and the bottom of the skirt or drawers is finished with a five-inch ruffle.

A pretty nightgown pattern has the yoke and sleeves cut in one over a kimono pattern; the yoke is rather shallow and round or pointed, finished with beading, lace edged at the neck and beading to join it to the body of the gown, which is made of two and one-half widths of material, finished with a broad hem at the bottom. The short sleeves are edged about with lace.

Any pattern for a gown can be followed, and the trimming may be as plain or as elaborate as you choose; but the simpler these gowns are kept the easier they are to do up. After washing, hang them in the air on a coat hanger, if possible, or pinned to the line at the shoulders, so they will dry straight. When dry, shake out and pull the lace into position, and your garment will look like new.

Women do not, as a rule, mind the washing in the summer, but what they do object to is standing over the ironing table and working with hot flatirons with the thermometer in the nineties.

By using cotton crepe the problem of ironing will be solved to a large extent.

Children's underclothes, and even their little rompers or play frocks, are made of crepe. The ideal undergarment for small children is a perfectly plain waist to which full bloomers are attached. The waist may have an edging of fine lace about the low neck and armholes. This combination garment worn under any dress affords a cool, comfortable way of dressing the child in hot weather.

How to Transfer

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Pad the petals of the flowers with darning cotton and work across the petals in solid stitches.

Make the centers a cluster of French knots or a combination of solid work and seed stitches. The buds should be worked solid at the base, and French knots above.

Pad the scallops and work in buttonhole stitches. You will notice that there is a suggestion made for a hem. On one side work buttonholes, and on the other place washable buttons. The hat is easily unfastened for laundering.

When you place the puffed crown on the hat it is best to button the edge on buttons which are sewn on the brim. By basting the crown over the brim you can easily mark with pins just where the buttons and buttonholes should go.

Tie a band of ribbon around the crown and fasten under a pretty rosette at the side. The little bonnet is finished and is the quaintest thing that you can have. It's different and it's beautiful, and what more can you ask?

Empire Petticoats

THE HOT days of the lingerie dress season will need and want at least two or three of the new empire petticoats, and will joy in their freshness.

If you buy them ready made, however, to get a really good one trimmed with lace and frills, you will have to pay a considerable expense—so why not make them yourself and have the fine and good materials in the garment?

Patterns you can buy; they are cut on the lines of a princess petticoat, only with fewer gores. A six-gored skirt, for the waist line raised to your chin or seven inches above the normal waist and with the left side of the panel is generally used. The skirt is fitted into the normal waist line, so that constantly no superfluous fullness is to be seen. Below the top line of the skirt, lace insertion in strips of the material, the bias cut over the arms. The skirt is finished with a deep flounce of several flounces of lace, tucks or embroidered beading. Through which ribbon is run, covers the joining of flounce, bodice and skirt is also placed at the bottom with narrow lace, and the petticoat is finished.

If the petticoat is destroyed, fine flaxon, nainsook or fine batiste may be used, and the trimmings of valenciennes lace.

Strips of delicately colored ribbon run in the edge peep through the lace with which it is worn. It is well to introduce a pretty color in lingerie gown, make the petticoat of pink, blue, yellow, or coral lava with trimmings to match.

The comparatively plain petticoat may be decorated with garlands of silk, satin or lawn roses—made by your own dainty fingers and with lace trimming on the ruffle, festoon on the lace skirt.

Pieces of soft mousseline are used and really cost very little for the roses. Those made of ribbon, especially when a shaded flower is used on the petals are lovely under a lacy frock.

No one can help but be pleased with the result if you make yourself an underskirt according to these directions.

Summer Pillows

FEW women realize that they can make the most delightful pillows in the summer, filling them with materials that are at hand when the warm weather makes days spent out of doors a boon to health and happiness.

The rose pillow is perhaps the best of all. Gather the petals of the roses when in full bloom and lay them on trays (the lids of large pasteboard boxes will do nicely) to dry in the shade.

When they have become thoroughly dry, add to them one ounce of powdered orris root, one-half an ounce of rose powder and twenty drops of oil of roses. Make an oblong pillow cover of glazed cambric, chintz or paper muslin any size you desire and fill it with rose petals. Sew it up at the open end and cover it with a slip of silk figured with roses. A plain rose-colored silk embroidered with a spray of roses in natural colors, or fine white handkerchief linen embroidered with garlands of roses, will be an ideal outer covering for a rose pillow.

Dried sweet fern makes a pleasant filling for the summer pillow. The ferns you will find growing in the woods and beside the small streams. Use the same method in drying these as you do in drying the rose petals. They will curl up and become quite brown in color; but the perfume from them will impart a delightful freshness to the room and will soothe to sleep the person who rests her head upon the pillow. A glazed cambric inner covering and a slip of pale green linen embroidered with a spray of feathery ferns done in white mercerized cotton or silk floss would be lovely. White silk embroidered with sprays of maidenhair fern in shades of pale green would make the daintiest of all covers for the fern pillow.

The heads or blossoms of the sweet vernal grass need not be dried before they are put into a cambric pillow cover. Cut the fluffy heads off short and mix them with a tablespoonful of powdered orris, then fill the pillow and slip on an outer covering of linen or cretonne. If the former, outline on it tufts of growing grass in green silk or mercerized cotton, and if you choose cretonne, select that with a grassy pattern on it.

Dried oak leaves emit that elusive woodsy perfume that is noticed when one first enters a forest of trees and growing plant life. These must be dried in the sun before placing them in the pillow cover. At once a design of oak leaves and acorns suggests itself to be worked on the outer cover of linen crash. The work is done in shades of brown and dark green, following nature as closely as possible.

Every one knows the delicious pungent perfume of the pine, fir and balsam needles. When dried and broken in small pieces they make splendid fillings for pillows. Gather these in the late summer and fill your pillow slips full. An outer covering of brown linen embroidered with pine branches, each topped with a pine cone, will be correct for these. Do this work with dark green silk, and work the cones solid in delicate shades of brown.

Without perfume, but a wonderfully soft filling for a pillow which you can gather by the roadside in the autumn, is the soft, fluffy, silky interior of the seed pod of the milkweed plant. Collect this before it is dry, when the pods have just burst open, and dry it in the house, for the least breath of wind will blow it about over everything if you are not careful. The best plan is to make a cover of netting and place the damp stuff in it and shake it up every once in a while, so that it will dry thoroughly all through. Your favorite sachet powder can be added to this if you desire a scented pillow. The downy blossoms of the milkweed worked in deep pink violet shades go to decorate the outer covering of this pillow.

There you have them all, delightful pillows that can be made in the summer, beginning in the month of roses and gathering materials every month until October. Could you ask for a more delightful occupation or one that will give more pleasure or real comfort when the work is finished?

Now is the time to begin if you would have a complete set of summer pillows.

Dainty Bath Slippers

A CLEVER girl who could not afford to indulge her desire for good books was able to purchase several sets of standard works by selling the work of her own hands through the medium of one of the little shops that provide exclusive things for its customers.

Dainty slippers for the bedroom and bath she made of woven raffia sewed to leather soles such as are used for the knitted bedroom slippers.

First she cut a paper pattern of the upper portion of the slipper, and over this wove the raffia in and out in various pretty designs, often creating new ones as she worked. The soft natural color of the raffia was a splendid foundation for designs in bright colors. These she worked in with raffia, ribbon in narrow widths and thick woolen yarns. Colored beads were used also, and pretty little flowers and leaves were deftly fashioned of the straw.

The raffia is then lined with satin and a lining of satin is placed over the lamb's-wool lining on the soles. She always cuts part of this thick wool off first and sprinkles sachet powder over it, then covers it with satin, which is stitched neatly to the binding tape around the edge of the soles.

Each strand of raffia is turned in and the satin is basted to it, then a narrow silk tape is stitched on the edge as a binding; this is then whipped to the binding on the soles and up the center of the back. Narrow ribbon is run through the top and tied in a small flat bow in front. Others are finished with a cord of raffia.

Ratine and soft-colored turkish toweling are used for other slippers; little mules with only the front part of the soles covered—dainty things that can be slipped on and off with the greatest ease—and others she made of Japanese crepe, selecting a pattern that had in it small figures that could be placed in the center of the slipper's toe.

Very little time was consumed in making these slippers, and the materials were inexpensive, while the prices she received were in accordance with such articles made by hand; therefore the profit was good. The making of your boudoir slippers affords pleasant work for summer days, and, if you wish, several pairs can be made and laid away for holiday gifts for your friends.

The raffia slippers were made in sizes large enough to fit men, and I am sure your husband, brother or sweetheart would appreciate a pair as a birthday gift.

COTTON CREPE UNDERCLOTHES

WOMEN are just beginning to wake up to the advantages of cotton crepe as an ideal material for undergarments, both for themselves and for their children.

For summer underwear no material is daintier, and as it washes beautifully and requires no ironing, it is quite the most economical thing that can be worn, especially by the traveler and those who spend part of the warm season in summer hotels.

Another advantage is its comparative inexpensiveness; it is wide and can be bought for 15 and 18 cents the yard either in plain white or with delicate colored stripes.

Like all other cotton materials, it shrinks a little when washed; therefore it is best to immerse it for a few minutes in very hot water and hang it by the selvage edge to dry before the garments are cut out. When making up the garments, use as small a French seam as you can, and be careful not to stretch the material more than can be helped.

The daintiest "combinations" are trimmed with linen torchon lace around the neck, armholes and bottom of the skirt. The corset cover is gathered into inch-wide beading at the waist line and tied with wash ribbon. Beading may be placed around the neck also and ribbon run through that, and the bottom of the skirt or drawers is finished with a five-inch ruffle.

A pretty nightgown pattern has the yoke and sleeves cut in one over a lemono pattern; the yoke is rather shallow and round or pointed, finished with beading, lace edged at the neck and beading to join it to the body of the gown, which is made of two and one-half widths of material, finished with a broad hem at the bottom. The short sleeves are edged about with lace.

Any pattern for a gown can be followed, and the trimming may be as plain or as elaborate as you choose; but the simpler these gowns are kept the easier they are to do up. After washing, hang them in the air on a coat hanger, if possible, or pinned to the line at the shoulders, so they will dry straight. When dry, shake out and pull the lace into position, and your garment will look like new.

Women do not, as a rule, mind the washing in the summer, but what they do object to is standing over the ironing table and working with hot flatirons with the thermometer in the nineties.

By using cotton crepe the problem of ironing will be solved to a large extent.

Children's underclothes, and even their little rompers or play frocks, are made of crepe. The ideal undergarment for small children is a perfectly plain waist to which full bloomers are attached. The waist may have an edging of fine lace about the low neck and armholes. This combination garment worn under any dress affords a cool, comfortable way of dressing the child in hot weather.

How to Transfer

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. This latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Tea on Shipboard

ELEANOR DEAR:

As you are contemplating that long-talked-of trip to Norway this summer, I know you will be interested to learn that our former school friend, Molly Anderson, and her sister are going to make the trip; and I think it would be perfectly splendid if you and Bob could arrange to join their party.

Molly, you know, has just returned from Germany, where she spent the winter. She has some interesting photographs; one also gave me of herself taken on shipboard. I am sending it on to you, for suggestions of what would be well to wear on a sea voyage.

Molly said the frocks came directly from Paris. They are delightful, are they not?

She said nearly all the women wore white serges; but it happened that in the picture four different materials are represented.

Molly wears white serge made over a one-piece model. She said the skirt was cut on a four-gored model, with a seam directly in the center of the front and back. It buttons on the left hip with large crystal buttons, which are used on the blouse too.

The blouse front, as you can see, is cut in rather an odd manner, with a point running from the right side to the line of the neck, and it there fastens with five large glass buttons.

A circular collar of alternate bands of black and white shower-proof chiffon laps under the point and fastens down underneath.

Three itty pin tucks are used on the sleeves just at the bend of the elbow, and these have a button on each. The cuffs are of black chiffon.

On her head is a close-fitting turban of rose-colored chiffon. Quite the nicest thing, she says, to wear in the steamer chair—you can lean back with no fear of crushing the hat.

Her friend wears a chic suit of cream-colored ratine, made with a simple little turned-over collar, finishing in a V front, over which she wears a white lace-and-linen collar.

The blouse is short-waisted and made with a hip-length peplum, cut away in front and joined to the bodice with a heavy cord.

Sleeves are plain, save for the wide folded-back cuffs.

The distinctive feature on the frock is large buttons covered with the material, which form a line down its entire front.

Her hat, too, carries out the effect. It is of ratine, faced with pink taffeta and having a pleated crownband of taffeta surmounted with a wreath of small pink rosebuds.

In the background of the picture one girl wears a pink linen suit cut on loose, comfortable lines, with linen-covered buttons as its only trimming; and the other girl wears buff changeable taffeta, with the little cbatee trimmed about the edges and armholes with a band of puffed taffeta made with a corded edge.

You can choose from any of the four costumes for style and fabric. All are correct; but Molly says to be "truly in it" one must wear white serge on shipboard.

Let me hear from you soon, dear. With affection,

Your sister, MADGE.
